Battered U. S. Liner Fights Way in With 73 Injured

One Feared Lost on President Harding; Appendectomy Is Performed in Gale

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Oct. 18.—The United States liner President Harding, which left Le Verdon, France, a week ago today with 597 passengers, ploughed for New York through heavy seas tonight and is expected to arrive Saturday after being lashed by a storm which swept one crew member overboard, injured 73 of the crew and passengers, and tore away a lifeboat and part of the starboard deck rail.

Lack of sufficient medical supplies to treat the many injuries—particularly drugs to deaden the pain from broken arms, legs, spine injuries and possible skull fractures—intensified the gravity of the stricken liner's plight for many hours, but this shortage was relieved at noon today when the Coast Guard cutter Hamilton reached her with medical supplies.

Among the passengers injured when they were buffetted about in the storm-battered ship was Paul van Zeeland, fromer premier of Belgium, who suffered facial abrasions and multiple contusions. He is en route to Washington for talks on the refugee problem. The man swept overboard by the giant waves which washed over the liner was a 22-year-old cabin boy, Paul Johnson, who was born and grew up in Stroughton, Wis. He had joined the ship only two months ago.

Sub Victims Aboard

There are 430 American citizens aboard the President Harding and also 36 unexpected passengers—the survivors of the crew of the British freighter Heronspool, which was torpedoed last Friday, 300 miles off the Irish coast. The President Harding, then two days out of Le Verdon, was speeding to the rescue of another U-boat victim, the French tanker Emile Miguet, when she saved the British crew.

When the President Harding reached the blazing French tanker, her crew of 39 already had been rescued by another American ship, the Black Diamond freighter Blackhawk.

The sinking of the 3,509-ton British freighter City of Mandalay and the 10,183-ton British passenger liner Yorkshire, about 500 miles off the coast of France, brought Great Britain's total loss of ships to 40.

U. S. Ships Save 300

The American steamship Independence Hall, bound for the United States, rescued 300 survivors of the two stricken ships and notified the United States Maritime Commission she was returning them to Bordeaux, France. It gave no other details of the rescue and no indication of the possible loss of life.

The latest sinkings brought the total destruction, since the beginning of the war, to 79 ships, with a total tonnage of 368,360. The French have lost at least 6 vessels, the Germans 9, and neutrals, 24, including 17 Scandinavian ships.

Known loss of life mounted to 1,618, with revised announcement by the British admiralty that 810 officers and men had been lost in the sinking last week of the battleship Royal Oak by a submarine at Scapa Flow.

According to the radio messages she sent to the Coast Guard and to the United States lines here the President Harding had the roughest crossing of any passenger liner in recent years traveling the north Atlantic lanes. When the Hamilton, the biggest cutter the Coast Guard has, reached her at noon today the seas were still too rough to permit communication by boat, or to take off any of the injured for treatment

U. S. Attorneys Told to Quit Party Offices

Kemp Also Orders All Marshals to Observe Hatch Act

Attorney General Murphy announced yesterday that United States attorneys and marshals had been directed to sever political affiliations in violation of the Hatch act or resign their positions.

He made public a letter to this effect written by Edward G. Kemp, assistant to the Attorney General, to all United States attorneys, marshals, assistant United States attorneys and deputy marshals.

Murphy indicated that there had been some question as to whether United States attorneys, marshals and their assistants were complying in all cases with the Hatch act requirements.

The letter calls attention to the provision of the Hatch act forbidding officials and employes of the executive branch of the Government to participate actively in political management or campaigns. It adds:

"For an officer or employe of the executive branch of the Federal Government to hold any office in any political party organization or political club, or to be a member of any committee of any political party organization or political club, is deemed a violation of the foregoing provision. Accordingly, if you hold any such office or committee membership you should forthwith resign therefrom, or from your present position under the Federal Government.

Army's Chief Mobile Expert Sent to Panama

Gen. Van Voorhis Gets Post; Gen. DeWitt to Leave War College

The Army yesterday sent its exponent of mechanized warfare to take command at Panama, in a move to strengthen that "keystone" of the American defense system.

Maj. Gen. Daniel Van Voorhis, former commander of the mechanized cavalry and recognized as one of the Army's "most forward thinkers," was assigned to command the Panama Canal Department, effective January 1.

He will relieve Maj. Gen. David L. Stone, who during his two and a half years as Panama commander has built its defense to a high level. Concluding his tour of foreign duty, in accordance with Army policy, Stone will return to continental United States and will relieve Van Voorhis of his present post as commander of the Fifth Corps Area.

Two other key Army posts change hands in the reshuffling of the high command announced by Secretary of War Woodring.

Maj. Gen. John L. DeWitt, commandant of the Army War College here, was named commander of the Fourth Army, embracing the troops of most of the western part of the United States. He will be promoted to lieutenant general while holding the command.

Commanded "Iron" Cavalry

Brig. Gen. Philip B. Peyton, an infantry regimental commander at the front in 1918, will take DeWitt's post here next month.

Lieut. Gen. Albert J. Bowley, now heading the Fourth Army, retires for age on November 30.

The new Panama commander started his career as an enlisted man in the Spanish-American War. Soon commissioned, he had his baptism of fire in the Philippine Insurrection. Prior to the World War, much of his service was with the historic Third Cavalry now stationed at Fort Myer, Va. During the war, he was in charge of troop embarkation at Newport News.

In 1929, Van Voorhis took command of the Army's mechanized forces at Fort Eustis, Va., where the fundamentals of mechanized cavalry were evolved. He later commanded the first "iron" cavalry regiment and brigade at Fort Knox, Ky. While the tiny Panama Canal Zone

Mythical USA Finds Much Amiss in the Actual U. S. A.

Prominent Federal administrative experts last night let down their hair and told each other off with wise-cracks.

F. A. Silcox, head of the Forest Service, told Budget Director Harold Smith he was "tired of spinning my Chinese prayer wheel before the Budget Bureau and of being bored with my own voice begging for a dime."

Smith thinking of the deficit over which he presides, said the Government system appeared to be "a lot of checks and no balances."

Federal Works Agency Administrator John M. Carmody told the Central Statistical Board to "quit gathering historical records and find out where the Government money goes."

Deputy Comptroller of the Currency C. B. Upham said Carmody's comment that he did not take his newly-acquired Cabinet status seriously because "I still know my place," showed only that Carmody was "forward-looking."

This general inhibition-shedding took place at Barker Hall, in the Y. W. C. A. building, in a meeting of the "board" of the fictitious "Urban Security Administration," guinea-pig agency established by

Democrats Agree to Ease Ship Curbs

Foreign Relations Committeemen to Modify Restrictions In Neutrality Bill

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Senate Foreign Relations Committee Democrats yesterday agreed to a sweeping compromise in the neutrality bill's shipping restrictions, opening all the Pacific and much of the Atlantic to American air and ocean borne commerce.

The Senate group further tightened indirectly the bill's "cash on the barrel-head" provisions by prohibiting any credit for arms to private persons in warring nations. This followed prior action to eliminate 90-day commercial credits to belligerent governments.

"Blackouts" Up to President

As tentatively approved, the new shipping amendment would open the entire Western Hemisphere to commercial air service, and bar American ocean ship operations on this side of the Atlantic only to Canada, Nova Scotia and Bermuda.

American vessels were permitted to continue ship sailings to neutral countries in Europe, but this, as well as other travel areas, was made subject to combat zone "blackouts" of shipping by the President in any sections where hostilities threatened trade. Sharp regulatory restrictions were thrown around all American ship traffic with belligerent possessions.

Broad outlines of the plan were agreed on by Democratic members favorable to the bill at an extended morning and afternoon conference, but detailed drafting was left to a sub-committee headed by Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada.

Move Aimed at Showdown

The same group will meet at 11 a. m. today to approve the completed draft. Coming on the heels of a compromise on the credit section, the shipping modifications were relied on by leaders to remove most of the secondary sources of friction in the bill, and force an early showdown on the central issue of embargo repeal.

Repeal opponents charged leaders were resorting to "face-saving" to pass the bill. In making this charge, Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, a leading opponent, jibed: "They may bring in an amendment to strike out repeal tomorrow."

Majority Leader Barkley said the changes would not only "greatly improve the measure" but "make it difficult to cast a vote against it." Already assured of a large majority for repeal in the Senate, the measure obviously was being readied in the Senate for the closer-margined House test.

Holt Attacks England

As the Senate debate entered its thirteenth day, Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, held the floor all day, charging that President Roosevelt "never had been neutral" and was committed in advance of the war to aid Britain and France.

Declaring "every Senator knows" embargo repeal is designed to help the Allies against Germany, the Senate's strong-lunged youngsest member launched into an attack on England and charged "slick" Brit-

Army Streamlines Pilots to Increase Room in Planes

The Army has decided to "streamline" its pilots as well as its planes, new Air Corps regulations reveal.

Applicants for air training hereafter must not weigh more than 200 pounds or stand higher than 6 feet 2 inches in their stocking feet, the new physical standards prescribe. Heretofore, men 6½ feet tall and weighing as much as 214 were accepted. Minimum weight and height requirements remain the same—115 pounds and 5 feet 4 inches.

Officials said the weight change was ordered to increase the load carrying capacity of planes, while the elimination of men over 6 feet 2 was to permit smaller cockpits to be used.

U. S. Closes Ports to Subs; 100,000 Cheering Swedes Greet Scandinavian Kings

Plea for Peace Move Made as 3 Monarchs And President Confer at Stockholm

By Wade Werner
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Stockholm, Oct. 18.—A great throng of Swedes, upward of 100,000 strong, gathered in front of the royal palace and nearby streets and squares tonight in a mass demonstration of solidarity of the northern countries.

Cheers greeted the kings of Denmark, Norway and Sweden when they appeared on the balcony with Finland's president, Kyosti Kallio, meeting here to discuss the preservation of their neutrality and trade in the European war.

Long after the serenading by massed choirs, which marched up with patriotic organizations carrying 700 banners, cries of "Kallio! Kallio!" continued.

Cheers for Finland resounded through Stockholm's streets. The crowd intoned the national anthems of the four northern countries and waved handkerchiefs in greeting.

The most impressive moment came just before the close of the demonstration when the multitude sang the full-throated Lutheran hymn, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God."

Greeted By the Americas

As the conference of the three kings and the president of the four countries got under way today, Stockholm papers carried an appeal to the northern states to make the meeting a starting point for a general European peace move.

(They also were greeted by a message from the 21 American republics, including the United States, expressing support of the principles of neutrality.)

During the demonstration the Kings of Denmark, Norway and Sweden stood arm in arm with Finland's president at a moment when his country was in the midst of a crisis growing out of Russian demands.

So great was the crush that 17 persons fainted and had to be taken away in ambulances.

Attitude More Optimistic

After cheering Kallio, many in the great crowd paused at churches on the way home to pray for his country—and their own.

There was no official reaction to the appeal for a peace move that was published in the Stockholm newspapers.

The appeal signed by "Representatives of Swedish Industry and Trade" said the reaffirmation of the northern states' neutrality and earnest desire for peace was good, "but not enough."

"They must also watch for every opportunity to promote peaceful contacts between belligerent powers before it is too late," the appeal added. "In this hour the influence of the northern states is not small."

There was no official indication, however, that the northern countries would attempt any mediation.

Hitler Proposal to Stalin to Divide Balkans Revealed

By James E. Brown
International News Service Staff Writer.

Istanbul, Oct. 18.—Two generals, one British and one French, arrived by plane at Ankara tonight amid reports that Anglo-Turkish and Franco-Turkish mutual assistance pacts are about to be signed.

The Allied army chieftans immediately conferred with Marshal Fevzi Tchakmak, chief of the Turkish general staff, and Gen. Naci Tinaz, Turkish minister of defense.

Negotiating for Great Britain was Maj. Gen. Archibald P. Wavell, commander of the British land forces in the near east. With him was Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander of French armies in the eastern Mediterranean.

It was officially announced that Anglo-Turkish and Franco-Turkish staff talks will begin Thursday. The Allied generals will remain at the Turkish capital until Monday. A Turkish military mission is conferring with British army chiefs in London.

Hitler Message Revealed

A message from Fuehrer Hitler to Josef Stalin, suggesting Russo-German division of the Balkans and closure of the Dardanelles by Turkey caused the abrupt collapse of Russo-Turkish talks in Moscow, it was learned tonight.

Before the arrival of Hitler's note at the Kremlin, according to authoritative sources, Premier Molotoff had accepted the proposals of Turkish Foreign Minister Saracoglu for the formation of a neutral Balkan pact with the Dardanelles left open for all ships.

Then, by order of Stalin, Molotoff issued a flat ultimatum demanding three concessions, according to these sources. These were:

Unconditional closure of the Dardanelles.

Rumanian surrender of Bessarabia, a region which was Russian before the World War, and of the Dobrudja, Bulgarian in pre-World War days, to Bulgaria.

Recognition of the partition of Poland.

Lines in Close Contact, Much Activity Reported On Moselle Flank

By G. H. Archambault,
Copyright by New York Times.

Paris, Oct. 18.—More than one sign today points to an early resumption of the German offensive on the Rhine-Moselle front, which was halted by heavy fire Monday evening, after scattering French outposts had withdrawn on their line of resistance.

It is insisted here that this withdrawal was by the order of the high command, and at no point was it compelled by the enemy.

All last night there was what is officially described as "intense traffic," both on the highways and railroads behind the enemy lines, while today there was incessant scouting, raiding, and ambushing.

French Still on German Soil

The respective infantries were in close contact between the lines and there was much hand grenade fighting. Nevertheless, the front remained unchanged.

"Intense traffic" implies the arrival of reinforcements, since the railroads would scarcely be used for routine reliefs, normally supplied by troops in reserve positions. Nor is it supposed here that the enemy has concentrated large forces merely to force the line of scattered outposts to withdraw, which, as admitted in the German communique, was the sole outcome of Monday's double operation. Moreover, the French line of resistance is for the most part still established on German soil.

From details now available, the attacks resulted as follows:

French Claim Light Losses

Between the Moselle and the Saar rivers, where a lesser thrust occurred, the French now occupy positions in the proximity of the frontier protected by the deep valley of the Manderen stream.

The second, or main thrust, occurred between a point slightly south of Saarbruecken to the west and a point in the vicinity of the German village of Hornbach to the east. There the frontier juts into French territory for some 20 miles. The line now occupied by the French is close to the frontier at the two extremities of this pocket, and at

Berlin Heaps Honors on Chief Of Sub That Sank Royal Oak

By Percy Knauth

Berlin, Oct. 18.—Lieut. Comdr. Guenther Prien and the crew of the German submarine which, it was reported, sank the Royal Oak and damaged the Repulse in Scapa Flow, flew to Berlin today in Fuehrer Hitler's private four-motored Condor airplane and were there accorded a tumultous reception by the population which culminated in presentation to the Fuehrer himself in the new Reich's chancellory.

For the moment they are the center of attention of the entire country which has almost forgotten that it is at war with France as well as Great Britain in its enthusiasm over these new heroes.

In a statement to the foreign press this afternoon in the ministry of propaganda—where he was introduced by the press chief, Otto Dietrich—Lieut. Comdr. U-Boats May Enter American Limits Only in Case of 'Force Majeure'

By William V. Nessly.
Post Staff Writer.

President Roosevelt, acting again to insulate this country against the European war, last night by proclamation barred submarines of the belligerent powers from entering United States ports or territorial waters.

Under authority of Section 8 of the neutrality act, he declared only exceptions to the ban would be submarines forced into such ports or waters by "force majeure," a diplomatic term referring to accidents, storms and such developments as commonly are listed as "acts of God."

The proclamation said:

"And I do hereby enjoin upon all officers of the United States, charged with the execution of the laws thereof, the utmost diligence in preventing violations of the said joint resolution (the neutrality law) and this my proclamation issued thereunder, and in bringing to trial and punishment any offenders against the same."

Must Enter Openly

Even when submarines are forced into the American area by "force majeure," the proclamation declares, they must enter only while "running on the surface with conning tower and superstructure above water and flying the flags of the foreign belligerent states of which they are vessels."

Such submarines, the President further provided, may depart only under the same circumstances, on the surface and with flags flying.

The proclamation names again as belligerents "Germany and France; Poland; and the United Kingdom, India, Australia, Canada, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa."

No attempt was made officially to define "territorial waters," or to indicate how far this Government considers they extend. While there was a general inclinstion last night to refer to the old 3-mile limit often used in previous years in discussing a nation's jurisdiction under international law, it was pointed out that this country often has departed from that definition.

Twelve-Mile Limit Used

The 12-mile limit and "one hour's sailing distance" at times have been utilized, but President Roosevelt has recently said the Nation's territorial waters extend as far as the country's interests require, a definition which he said, with a laugh, had never been advanced before.

The White House has made several announcements of foreign submarines having been sighted off the American coasts, one near Alaska, one off New England and two off Florida, but never identified any of them publicly as to nationality. Nor was it made clear whether the foreign craft were considered to be in "territorial waters" of this country.

The proclamation would bar the refueling or provisioning in America of any submarines from the warring countries. Its issuance recalled that when he was recently questioned as to reports that American ships were bootlegging supplies to foreign submarines off the American coast, the President said that if any ships were engaging in such activity they had better stop it.

The proclamation applies to "both commercial submarines and submarines which are ships of war."

While the law gives the President authority to bar also armed

Ex-Communist Reveals Dies Speech Inspired Him to 'Tell America'

By John B. Oakes.

The strange case of Fred Beal, blond, blue-eyed convict and one-time Communist organizer, was unfolded yesterday before the Dies Committee to investigate Un-American activities.

Beal, brought from a North Carolina prison to testify, took the stand after Chairman Dies announced that Fritz Kuhn, German-American bund leader, would make his second appearance before the committee at a public hearing this morning.

Facing trial October 30 in New York for alleged embezzlement of bund funds, Kuhn had requested the committee to defer his scheduled hearing today. After a brief executive session, the committee decided to turn down Kuhn's plea.

"Communists" Named

Meanwhile, it was learned that the names of three alleged Communists at the Washington Navy Yard had been turned over to the committee by a voluntary informant. Two of the names are new to committee investigators.

Navy Yard officials denied a report that circulated on Capitol Hill yesterday that 30 yard employes had been dismissed because they were Communists.

"There isn't any truth in the report," said Rear Admiral George Pettengill, commandant of the Navy Yard. "Anyway, we couldn't discharge an employe for being a Communist any more than for being a Republican. Of course, subversive activities would be grounds for dismissal, but we haven't seen any evidence of that."

In an angry letter to Dies, Rockwell Kent, artist, flatly denied testimony that he was a Communist. The committee decided at the close of the day to permit all persons protesting testimony to appear before the committee and make their statements under oath.

Preferred Prison to Russia

Beal, serving a 17 to 20 year prison sentence in connection with the killing of a Gastonia, N. C., police chief in the 1929 textile strike there, told the committee, how, after his conviction, he went to Russia under a false passport, but soon returned to the United States because he "preferred the hospitality of a Southern prison to life in Russia."

Beal, who said he was 43, but looks much younger, asserted that he decided in prison that "it was my duty to come here to tell the people of America the truth."

He said, "As I lay on my bunk in the Caledonia Prison Farm and listened to Chairman Dies make a radio speech—I don't want to give any medals to the chairman—but the speech was so good that I felt rather ashamed of myself lying there and not doing anything. I felt at last that there was some group in the United States making a fight against Communist treachery."

Beal described joining the Communist Party at the close of the New Bedford textile strike in 1928. He then was sent South, he said, to organize North Carolina workers in the newly formed National Textile Workers Union. "I was under the direct control of the Communist Party," he asserted.

Says Party Made Him "Martyr"

Communist activity culminated in the strike, he said, adding that the party "always considered the strike as a revolutionary idea—a good opportunity to recruit members."

At the trial resulting from the Gastonia violence, said Beal, "the Communists did everything they could to try to convict us" in order to make martyrs of Beal and his six co-defendants.

While he was on $5,000 bail, said the witness, Communist colleagues persuaded him to visit Russia, because, he charged, they wanted to exhibit him as proof to the Communist Party in Moscow "that there was a radical situation in the South."

Tells of False Passport

Edith Miller, a party member, provided him with money and a passport in the name of "Samuel Cohn," Beal stated.

He said he had become completely disillusioned when he actually experienced life in Russia, and asserted that he "never saw any place in this country with conditions so bad."

Beal denied testimony of Representative Marcantonio (American Labor) that the International Labor Defense, of which he is president, is not Communist.

"The only reason the I. L. D. is not defending me now is because I'm not a member of the Communist Party," he said, "but I don't want their support."

Revised Restrictions

Restrictions in the revised amendment would include:

No American water or air ships carrying goods to belligerent territories may transport any articles listed by the President as arms, ammunition or implements of war, and this list conceivably could be extended to include scrap iron and other articles needed in waging war.

Title to goods shipped in American vessels to belligerent territories must be transferred to the purchaser before shipment, as is required of belligerent vessels transporting American goods.

American vessels before leaving ports for restricted areas must report to the collector of customs their entire cargo and its destination.

Johnson Wins Request

The committee group accepted the request by Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, that the entire Pacific area be opened to American shipping, and extended the same rights to American aircraft. American ships thus could move to belligerent dominions and possessions not only through the Pacific, but through the China Sea, the Indian Ocean, the Bay of Bengal and the Arabian Sea, it was said.

In the Atlantic area, the 30 degree north latitude line drawn in the original bill would be retained, with American cargo and passenger shipping continued to Western Hemisphere neutral and belligerent territory south of that line. But where the original bill permitted only passenger and mail transportation to belligerent possessions in the South Atlantic, the new draft adds cargo, excluding arms.

Specifically excluded was American South Atlantic ocean shipping to British-owned South Africa, committeemen observing they considered South African trade involved certain risks.

Lake Shipping Allowed

Nor would the compromise amendment permit American ocean shipping to belligerent possessions North of the thirtieth parallel, although overland and lake shipping to Canada could continue.

American commercial aircraft were exempted from restrictions imposed on American water-borne commerce in the Atlantic, except for the ban on transporting arms.

Discarded by the committee was the proposal by Chairman Bailey of the Senate Commerce Committee, to "black-out" from American shipping the whole area adjacent to Europe above 30 degrees, North latitude, and East of 50 degrees, West, longitude. Though trade to neutrals in this area could continue under the bill, members said it was virtually certain the President under combat zone discretion would move immediately to stop it.

Aimed at Private Agencies

The restriction on arms credits to private persons in belligerent countries was proposed in an amendment by Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, and substantially met a request made by Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, and others. As advanced by George, it provided that all munitions shipped to a warring country shall be deemed to be for use of the belligerent government. The bill already bars credits to belligerent governments. The amendment was aimed at such private agencies as Vickers, which under the original bill might obtain credit for arms purchases, while the British government could not.

What the compromise means in terms of American products exported to belligerent territories removed from th ship ban, was indicated in figures submitted to the Senate several days ago by Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina.

Principal exports and their value in trade routes thus opened was estimated by Bailey as follows:

To Australia—$7,600,000 of unmanufactured tobacco; $4,900,000 of gasoline and other petroleum products; $6,700,000 of passenger automobiles; $2,500,000 of motor trucks; $1,200,000 of aircraft.

To British India—$1,800,000 of unmanufactured tobacco; $1,800,000 of automobiles; $2,400,000 of motor trucks.

To Hong Kong—$3,300,000 of motor trucks; $1,200,000 of aircraft.

Post Editorial Quoted

Senator Holt in his speech to the Senate discussed The Washington Post's editorial, "The Collective Pronoun," appearing in The Post of last April 11, and based on the President's Easter afternoon remark at Warm Springs, "I'll be back in the fall, if we don't have a war."

The editorial, which the President later said expressed his own views, said a world war could still be averted if free nations were willing to take a stand "before it is too late" and it called for a "preponderant show of force" by democratic nations to halt the dictators and prevent war.

Holt declared that the President, in heartily approving the editorial, and in ordering it entered into his press conference minutes "so that posterity might see what his views had been," had taken an unneutral position on the side of Britain and France in advance of the war, and had implied that American involvement was inevitable.

Holt said the President "never had been neutral, never will be and never intended to be," mimicking the President's voice as he spoke. In charging Mr. Roosevelt had abandoned a neutrality policy, he said the President in the 1936 campaign said he hated war, in 1937 said aggressors must be quarantined and said last January they must be stopped by "methods short of war."

"He changed our foreign policy—our policy of neutrality," shouted Holt.

He charged a program of British propaganda was designed to involve America in the war, and cited the visits of the King and Queen, Anthony Eden and Lord Beaverbrook, publisher, and Lord Lothian, new British ambassador. He said the British "masquerade their propaganda as Americanism" at parties for American guests.

"Propaganda Is Smooth"

"The British propaganda is smooth," said Holt. "It is over the dinner table and the card table. It's slick."

Maintaining that this Administration's policy was "tied to and is parallel wth the policy of France and Great Britain," he declared the main purpose of embargo repeal was to "aid England and France to defeat Germany and to get a little profit."

At one point he called Hitler "just a boil come to a head from the bad blood erupting from the Versailles treaty." He charged the record "of the so-called Democracies" in persecuting minorities and helpless peoples "surpasses Hitler's."

"England," he said, "has played either with the aggressors or against the aggressors," depending upon whether the aggression touched her or not. "The English hate aggressors when the aggressors touch a single foot on the British empire. But where was England when Czecho-Slovakia was destroyed by an aggressor? They were sitting around a conference table agreeing to the aggression."

In a radio speech last night, Representative Flannagan (Democrat), of Virginia, over the National Broadcasting System, declared the embargo repeal bill "offers greater safeguards than we have now and will tend to reduce the controversies that are likely to draw us into the conflict."

Flannagan said he would support the bill because he believed it "minimizes our chances of becoming involved in a war we had nothing in the world to do with bringing about."

Blames "Loose Talk"

He said "loose talk" had confused public thinking to the point that the ordinary man believed it was "be damned if we do and be damned if we don't." But behind all this, he said, is "a peace complex which is an encouraging sign and a stronger guarantee of peace than all the neutrality laws."

As a practical proposition, Flannagan said is was impossible for anyone to be "absolutely neutral," and that regardless of what action is taken one belligerent side or the other can construe the act as "unneutral."

"The best we can do," said the Virginian, "is when we sin against the law of neutrality—and sin we will in the eyes of one side or the other no matter what we do—be sure we sin in favor of our friends and not our enemies."

Smuts Opposes Cash-Carry

Capetown, Oct. 18. (AP).—Premier J. C. Smuts of the Union of South Africa said today he had done his best to "ram home" to the United States Government the dangers of the "cash and carry clause" of the pending neutrality legislation in Washington.

Speaking at Pretoria, Smuts added that the United States seemed to have overlooked the fact that Australia, South Africa, Canada and New Zealand are belligerents and that if American ships do not carry goods to those countries America also will suffer.

Officials Deny Pacts 'Sacrifice' Agriculture

Livestock Man Makes Charge; Data Sought For Argentina Treaty

By the Associated Press

Members of the Committee for Reciprocity Information, gathering data for use in negotiating a trade agreement with Argentina, emphasized yesterday their belief the Nation's agriculture interests had not suffered under the trade agreement program.

The members, who for two days listened to attacks on the program from agricultural, livestock and poultry interests and warnings from Congressmen that the law might be repealed if concessions were granted on farm products, reiterated the program was designed to aid agriculture.

Oscar B. Ryder, chairman, demanded that witnesses come prepared to back their statements with facts.

"To Sacrifice Agriculture"

The swift denunciation of charges that the program had injured agriculture broke during the testimony of H. M. Conway, of Chicago, representing the National Livestock Marketing Association. Conway said there had been a "tendency" in the previous trade agreements "to sacrifice agriculture to get outlets for industry."

George B. Arner, committee member for the Agriculture Department, said he doubted if there had been any concessions that had injured agriculture and challenged anyone to show a case of such injury. Henry L. Deimel, State Department representative, said that in 18 trade agreements up to 1937 foreign countries had granted the United States concessions on 74 per cent of their agriculture products and on 48 per cent of their industrial products.

Conway urged there be no decrease in duties on beef and beef products as did F. E. Mollin, secretary of the American Livestock Association.

Urge Wool Import Curbs

Representatives of wool-growing and marketing associations asked the committee not to recommend a decrease in duties on coarser grades of wool. Witnesses said if the duty was lowered on the lower grades of wool, it would cause an immediate drop in prices of American grades immediately higher.

Ole A. Flaat, of the Minnesota Farm Bureau asked that there be no reduction in duty on flax, saying the American farmer was putting more acreage into that crop which was just getting on a paying basis.

Speaker Reed's Memory Honored

By the Associated Press

A Republican presided over the House yesterday—but only during exercises commemorating the 100th anniversary of the birth of Thomas Brackett "Czar" Reed, of Maine, pre-Civil War Speaker of the House.

Speaker Bankhead called Minority Leader Martin (Republican), Massachusetts, to the dais and handed him the gavel after Martin concluded a laudatory address in which he said that if Reed had been born "in any other State than the rock-ribbed Republican State of Maine, he might have achieved the high office of President."

Later the House unanimously decided to appropriate $2,500 for a marble bust of Reed.

Hope Is Held For Control Of Pneumonia

Vaccination and New Drugs May Ban Public Health Enemy No. 3

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Oct. 18.—For the first time in history pneumonia may be brought under control in the coming winter.

The disease is the third leading "public health enemy" in the United States, but, according to reports before the American Public Health Association meeting here today, science has a promise of conquering it more effectively than with any previous known methods.

Serums and oxygen tents, along with adequate nursing care, have until recently been the principal methods of treating pneumonia. These will still be used in this winter's campaign.

However, Dr. Lloyd D. Felton, of the National Institute of Health, Washington, told the association that "great promise" exists in the use of vaccination against the disease. The new vaccination lasts only for about one year, but appears in preliminary experiments to be quite effective in preventing the disease.

The third method of combatting the disease, which kills more than 100,000 persons each year, is the use of sulfapyridine, the drug which stops the pneumococcus germs from growing until the defensive white blood cells of the body can overcome them.

And last week the Mellon Institute of Pittsburgh announced the development of another new antipneumonia drug, known by the technical name of "hydroxyethylapocupreine," a derivative of ordinary quinine, which in 500 tests on pneumonia appeared to be more effective than sylfapyridine and did not cause the nausea, vomiting and other upsetting effects of sulfapyridine.

Stomach Moved Up

Philadelphia, Oct. 18 (AP).—A new surgical operation which moves the stomach upward so that part of it is in the chest was reported to the American College of Surgeons today. The operation saves the lives of many persons with cancer of the gullet, previously 100 per cent fatal.

A discovery that the new male sex hormone, testosterone, which is manufactured synthetically, will relieve pain of women with incurable breast cancer was also announced.

The stomach operation was reported by Dr. John H. Garlock, of Cornell Medical College, New York, one of the men who perfected it.

The operation is used when the cancer is in the lower part of the food tube. The entire lower section of the tube is removed. That leaves the upper, healthy end of the tube hanging in the chest, while the stomach is down in the abdomen, below the diaphragm which is the chest floor.

A slit is made in the diaphragm, through which part of the stomach is drawn upward into the chest, placing it in contact with the shortened gullet. The two are sewn together.

If the cancer is at the top of the gullet the stomach cannot be lifted high enough, but in that circumstance, said Dr. Garlock, a rubber tube can be used as a detour for food.

Outland Elected

Scotch Lovers Hold Their Gasps As Subs Peril 2 Cargoes on Way

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Oct. 18.—There are two ships on the Atlantic tonight with 231,000 cases of 8-year-old Scotch whisky on board. If the Germans get it, there is going to be a shortage of aged Scotch before long.

Distillers here say there is enough young whiskey here to last at least two and a half years of a war, but all the really aged whisky available now is "depression whisky." In 1931, 1932 and 1933 the makers were hard hit and they did not lay down nearly the normal supply.

So, what with the war and depression? The price is going up because British ships carrying them to New York are traveling in expensive convoys and insurance rates for both British and United States vessels have soared.

Then, too, distillers over here are having plenty of trouble. They cannot get any insurance for their bonded warehouses, so that an air last couple of days might seriously raid like the few in Scotland the diminish the supply. It is possible, for some unexplained reason, for distillers to get insurance on whisky not in warehouses.

Before long nobody is likely to be permitted to grow barley or corn over here except for "human consumption."

The only immediate hope of increasing the supply of Scotch for the United States is that a restriction be placed on drinking in this country, as was done in the last war. So far, however, consumption of whisky has gone up since the blackout restricted many other forms of amusement. But if the price keeps going up and the agitation for some wartime form of prohibition increases, consumption here may be reduced and so release some of the supply to the United States.

Public Sees Work of D. C. Chest Agencies

600 Visit Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A. On First Day of Tour

Unrolling a panorama of human needs met for all ages, races and creeds, the Go-and-See tours in the first week of agency "open houses" have experienced a growing attendance that rose to as high as 600 on the first day for one agency—the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A.

Visitors in the last three days have seen how Community Chest contributors provide care for sick babies in hospitals and well ones in well-baby clinics; shelter for growing youngsters in institutions like St. Joseph's or the Episcopal Home for Children; recreational guidance opportunities for young colored people through the Y. W. C. A., Y. M. C. A. and Settlement House, and assure comfort to the aged in the Stoddard Baptist Old Folks Home.

Behind the scenes, a growing force of volunteer workers continues to mobilize under the leadership of the six soliciting units of the Chest campaign, getting ready for the intensive appeal from November 8 to 22.

Meantime, William W. Wheeler, chairman of the metropolitan unit, has been scheduling a succession of evening meetings for workers in each of the nine areas into which the unit has divided the city for solicitation purposes.

Tonight at 6:15 Wheeler will discuss organization progress with W. Herbert Gill, chairman in charge of the downtown area, and Linn C. Drake, Boy Scout head, who is acting as secretary of the area.

Go-and-See Tours scheduled for today include:

The Children's Hospital, of which Miss Mattie M. Gibson is superintendent, and the Child Welfare Society, Thirteenth and W streets northwest, of which Miss Caroline Sweeney is supervisor. Visiting hours at the welfare society will be from 2 to 4 p. m.

The Stoddard Baptist Old Folks' Home for aged colored people, at 324 Bryant street northwest, where visiting hours will be from 2 to 4. Sarah F. Lewis is in charge.

The Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A., for colored; at 1816 Twelfth street northwest, where visiting hours will be 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. Campbell C. Johnson is executive secretary.

Monopoly Quiz Won't Force Oil Man to Testify

Right Waived When Retailer Asserts He Fears Incrimination

By James D. Secrest.

The National Economic Committee yesterday waived its right to compel a witness to answer questions asked by its counsel after the former had invoked constitutional immunity on the ground that his testimony might subject him to prosecution in the courts.

Schuh, of Milwaukee, chairman of the National Association of Petroleum Retailers, who had been subpenaed by the committee after two Kansas City gasoline dealers testified that he threatened them and their local association if they appeared before the Monopoly Committee.

Describing himself as "a small independent dealer," Schuh denied the charges and castigated his critics, L. A. Hartley and A. W. Hewett, for secretly planting a stenographer at the scene of the conference. He said he was "amazed" at the statements of the Kansas City dealers.

Denies Threats

"I did not threaten the Kansas City organization," he said, "nor did I contend that the major oil companies were backing me up or advocating any such program."

When Hugh Cox, Justice Department attorney, began to question him regarding "bulletins" sent to member-dealers by the ways and means committee of the Retailers Association, Schuh refused to answer on advice of counsel.

Former Representative Carroll L. Beedy, Schuh's attorney, pointed out that the committee could compel his client to answer the inquiries, but that the statute setting it up allowed a witness to claim immunity from criminal prosecution. He explained that he did so because he doubted the legality of some of the association's "bulletins."

Cox thereupon asked his questions so that they might appear in the record, but did not insist that they be answered.

One of the bulletins was labeled "dulling the chisel" and others gave advice as to price fixing, combatting secret discounts, and "blockading" of uncooperative filling stations.

The witness was asked by Isador Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics, for a definition of a "chisler."

It's what President Roosevelt said it was when he established the NRA," Schuh shot back.

Questioned about a manual which the retailers' association had sold in great numbers to the major companies and anyone else who would buy it, Schuh explained that it had been designed originally as a year book.

"Then the scandal broke over the Deomocratic yearbook," he said, "so we changed the title."

Ford Charges Russians Tried To Bribe Men

40 Soviet Engineers, 11 Local Communists Ordered Out of Plant

By International News Service

Detroit, Oct. 18.—Ford Motor Co. officials disclosed today that 40 Soviet Russian engineers and 11 local Communists had been "ordered out" of the Ford River Rouge plant because of alleged attempts to get access to blueprints of new engineering developments by bribery and otherwise.

Norvel Marlett, Ford service official, said none of the men were Ford employes, but that the engineers had been permitted to study the processes of manufacture beginning nine or ten years ago, some time after Russia began buying automobile parts in the United States.

The "local Communists" were allowed in the plant as interpreters for the engineers. The engineers were given offices on the second floor of the employment building and they were furnished with blue prints for their studies as rapidly as plant officials wished to make them available.

Offered $1,200 a Month

According to Marlett, however, the engineers made efforts to get blueprints of new developments before the company was ready to make them public. One plant official reportedly was offered $1,200 a month to supply the Russians with information which would not have been available to them otherwise.

Marlett charged also that the local Communists sought to stir up strife within the plant. He asserted they attempted to circulate propaganda in the plant and that during the riot between Ford employes and members of the C. I. O. Auto Workers Union in May, 1937, some were inside passing out leaflets.

"Others were outside the plant aiding the union drive," Marlett asserted, adding:

"We did nothing about it at the time, but more recently we learned they were trying to bribe some of our minor officials to get information on machines, gauges and materials which are not yet available to the public and which Mr. Ford had not agreed to give them, so we ordered them out."

Americas Back Scandinavian Peace Efforts

Roosevelt Declares Support of U. S. and 20 Other Republics

In a striking and unusual diplomatic action, the United States and the 20 other American republics yesterday served notice that they supported efforts of Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland to preserve peace in the Baltic region, where threatened encroachment by Russia has caused alarm.

Argentina is credited with having initiated the American action.

Roosevelt Sends Message

President Roosevelt sent to King Gustaf of Sweden, host to the kings of Denmark and Norway and the President of Finland in the current conferences at Stockholm, a message reading:

"The conference of the Nordic states convened by Your Majesty in Stockholm will be followed with deep interest by the Government and people of the United States.

"Under the circumstances which exist this Government joins with the governments of the other American republics in expressing its support of the principles of neutrality and order under law for which the nations represented at the Stockholm conference have, throughout their history, taken a consistent stand."

"Circumstances" Interpreted

When Secretary of State Hull was asked to clarify the expression "under the circumstances which exist," he advised that the wording be left as it stood, but the expression was generally understood to refer to Russia's extension of her power through obtaining naval and air bases from Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania, and later demands on Finland, the nature of which have not been revealed.

Later in the day President Roosevelt received from President Kyosti Kallio of Finland a message of thanks for Mr. Roosevelt's recent appeal to President Kalinin of Russia that the Soviet make no demands on Finland that would be calculated to upset the peaceful relations between those countries.

Kallio's Reply

President Kallio cabled the American Chief Executive:

In the name of the people of Finland I herewith beg to express to you and through you to the great American people the sincere gratitude felt by the people of Finland for the sympathy and moral support you and the people of the United States have shown us. Your personal valuable assistance and interest in Finland's fate and difficult problems will never be forgotten in this country.

Army Probes Capt. Young's Death by Pistol

An Army board of inquiry opened an investigation into the death of Capt. James Marshall Young, 43, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., who died of a gunshot wound at Fort Belvoir, Va., Tuesday. A service pistol was found at his side.

Funeral services for Capt. Young will be held at 10 a. m. today at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial with military honors will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

A native of Memphis, Tenn., he was graduated from West Point in 1918. He held several details in Washington, including duty with the Chief of Engineers Office in 1922 and the Army Industrial College in 1928. At the time of his death he was executive officer of the engineer board at Fort Belvoir.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Olga Young; a son, James M. Young, jr.; his mother, Mrs. G. B. Young, and a sister, Mrs. C. F. Young, of University, Va.

'Sieg Heil!' Germans Hail Man Who Sank Royal Oak

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Commander Prien (standing in car), skipper of the Nazi U-Boat credited with the sinking of the British battleship, Royal Oak, acknowledged the cheers and salutes of the crowd as he arrived in Berlin yesterday. hit the Royal Oak which then evidently blew up internally; and how whe na huge smoke cloud cleared off he was able to make out almost the entire length of the Repulse, which was listing heavily at the bow.

He was able to make out both ships after entering the harbor, he said, by their anchor lights. He was aided also by the "clearest night and most extraordinary display of northern lights I have seen in 15 years at sea."

The Repulse story was emphasized by Press Chief Dietrich, who told correspondents, "here's a man who can prove that Churchill (British first lord of the admiralty) is withholding some of the truth."

British Again Deny Claim

(Attacks on British fleet bases were "fully exepcted," British Prime Minister Chamberlain told Commons today.

("The extent of the enemy's disappointment at the failure of these attacks to inflict serious injury on our ships may be measured by the fantastic nature of the claims which they have felt obliged to invent."

(Germany, besides claiming the battle cruiser Repulse was torpedoed, also has hinted that the battle cruiser Hood and aricraft carrier Ark Royal also have been attacked successfully.

(Chamberlain specifically denied any damage had been inflicted on the warships Hood, Repulse or Ark Royal.)

The only witnesses to his presence, Pdien declared, were some people in an automobile driving along the shore road.

"I was lying in very close to shore," he stated, "and several cars passed. One stopped and stood for a moment. It then turned about and rushed back full speed. Since Winston Churchill stated the ships were torpedoed by a submarine, it is my guess that these people must have seen me—nobody else could have in the shadow of the shoreline."

The crew of the submarine, looking somewhat tired and bewildered, after a day of publicity unprecedented in the annals of the German submarine force, which is the least publicized of all branches of the German fighting forces, marched in single file, and sat around long tables that had been arranged in horseshoe form.

The were some 30-odd in all and they sat and listened in silence while Dietrich described them as "living proof" that "Churchill lies suppress new German victories."

In silence also they sat and listened to their young commander recite his story—how he "wormed and twisted his way through the mine barrier," then "suddenly found himself inside the bay."

In silence, but some of them with smiles, they filed out again, young men all, some with blond clipped beards, others new shaven and rosy-faced. It seemed that none of them, with the possible exception of the higher officers, was over 25. One queried as to his age answered briefly "19." Their commander himself is said to be in his middle thirties.

Sub Was Small

Judging them by their number, they apparently manned a German U-boat of about 500 tons displacement, characterized as the "seagoing" type. These submarines—one class 500 tons, the other 517 tons—carry a crew of 35 and are armed with one 3.5-inch gun, mounted forward off the conning tower; one anti-aircraft machinegun; five 21-inch torpedo tubes; four of them in the bow, one in the stern.

The Fuehrer presented Prien with the highest honor accordable to a German soldier—the "Knights Cross of the Order of the Iron Cross." Following the presentation and a brief address to Prien and his crew, Hitler invited all to lunch in his private residence adjoining the Chancellery.

Almost snowed under in the storm of publicity attending the activities of the submarine crew is the report of the army high command, which for the first time gives a hint that large scale actions are taking place on the Western Front. Laconically, it announces that French troops have evacuated further stretches of German territory between the Moselle River and the Palatinate Forest.

"German troops, pushing after them, occupied the territory and took numerous prisoners."

Deny Big Offensive

Whether the Germans are pushing the advance or the French are retreating voluntarily is still unclear in Berlin. Today, however, as yesterday, it was denied that any large-scale offensive was taking place. That Germany is prepared to attempt an offensive, however, is evident from the fact that there are now, according to rough estimates about a million and a half men stationed along the western frontier quarters as far back as central Germany. However, there is no evidence here whatsoever that Gemany is planning to hurl them against the Maginot Line now or in the near future.

Yesterday, German anti-aircraft and fighters shot down five more enemy planes over German territory, it is reported. In the course of the last two days, it is claimed that 10 French and British machines were brought down by the anti-aircraft, and five by German planes.

The success of the submarine attack at Scapa Flow started many people in Germany to discussing how torpedoes could be successful when the Royal Oak and Repulse both had special devices against submarine thrusts.

One current explanation was that torpedoes are exploded by a new method, not by striking a ship laterally, but by magnetic currents operative when a torpedo is directly underneath a ship.

Much discussion concerned the effectiveness of German bombs.

The Cologne newspaper Koelnische Zeitung said a 160-pound bomb is large enough to destroy a submarine. For annihilating a destroyer it said "a bomb of threefold this weight would be necessary."

"For a light cruiser," it continued, "a 660-pound bomb can spell destruction. For a heavy cruiser presumably 1,100-pound bombs would be most suitable. For destroying large battleships, even heavier bombs are being held in readiness."

Russia Turns Eyes Toward Baltic Again

Sends Troops Into Estonia, Prepares to Resume Finnish Talks

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Oct. 18.—Soviet Russia, concealing any disappointment over failure to reach an agreement with Turkey, turned her attention northward again tonight, sending troops into Estonia and preparing for a resumption of talks with Finland.

The Moscow press said troops leaving for Estonia were taking numerous Soviet books and films and even linotype machines. They are marching in to implement the mutual assistance pact by which Estonia conceded three bases on her soil to Russia.

Soviet officials have insisted the independence of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania will be respected, although these three segments of the old Russian empire now are virtually Soviet protectorates.

Pravda, Communist Party organ, in a dispatch from Leningrad, said the "commanders used every free minute for political talks" prior to departure for Estonia.

Unofficial British circles were said to regard the inconclusive result of Russian-Turkish talks as greatly strengthening Britain's stand against Germany.

That Turkey and the Soviet are maintaining close relations was shown, however, by the arrival of Muhlis Erkemen, Turkish minister of agriculture, to pay a visit to the all-union agricultural exhibition.

Trade Treaty With Latvia

Tass, official news agency, also announced a trade agreement between Russia and Latvia, second of the small Baltic states to sign a mutual assistance pact with her big neighbor.

The agreement, said Tass, provides for a three-fold increase in trade between the two countries. Soviet waterways to Murmansk, the Arctic port, and to Black Sea ports are made available for the commerce of Latvia, while a large extension of transit of Soviet goods to Latvian ports is allowed.

The Russian press bitterly attacked the French government for continuing the war against Germany and for France's treatment of the French Communist Party.

Tass announced that a German commission which arrived yesterday would negotiate for removal from Western Ukraine and Western White Russia (parts of Eastern Poland occupied by the Russian armies) of Germans desiring to migrate to Germany.

From east to west the German towns of Bergzabern, Zweibrucken, Saarbrucken, Saarlautern and Uerzig remain within range of French guns. Outside of these two sectors, which were active Monday, the positions remain unchanged. In particular, the Warndt Forest west of Saarbrucken remains in French hands.

The net result, therefore, has been to ascertain at great cost the exact location of the French line of resistance in two key sectors. The method employed presented some unusual features. Artillery preparation in either case has not exceeded some 30 minutes, no tanks were used and there was very little aerial cooperation. Strangest of all the main attack was not begun until 5 o'clock in the evening, only a short time before dusk, and in very overcast weather.

This rather leads to belief that the Germans, despite the intensive patroling of the last fortnight, were still in the dark regarding the nature of the French positions. They possibly expected to meet a first line stronger than scattered troops, and did not anticipate the line of resistance to be so strong. The forces used would lead to the supposition it was intended to exploit a first success, but this proved to be impossible.

As to losses, it apears that the German divisions, probably 10 to 12, engaged only 2 or 3 battalions of each, with the remainder in reserve ready to intervene. So that of 100,000 men participating in the operation, only about 23,000 were actually on the line of fire when darkness intervened. The French estimate the enemy casualties at 12 per cent of the units engaged, or about 4,000. Some speak of 6,000 to 7,000, but nothing is more difficult to compute than the other side's casualties, and it is very easy to exaggerate.

French losses are claimed to be light. This claim seems justified by the circumstances. Apart from the outposts which were in actual contact with the enemy as they withdrew, troops on the line of resistance were strongly entrenched and well concealed. Moreover the German artillery had not obtained accurate ranges.

Since Monday night the Germans have been doing precisely what the French did as they advanced in September—rectifying their line by removing salients and digging trenches before attempting the next move forward. In other words they are preparing to lay siege to the French line of resistance just as the French laid siege on the outworks of the Westwall before the high command decided to change from an offensive plan to a defensive plan.

Stalin Sending Gold to Hitler, London Fears

17½ Tons Reported To Bolster Nazi Credit; Dutch Reserves Up

By James B. Reston.
Copyright by New York Times.

London, Oct. 18.—The British government stated today that there is some foundation for belief that Soviet Russia recently shipped 17½ tons of gold to Germany, and no attempt was made in officials quarters to minimize this as evidence of growing Russo-German co-operation.

The prospect that Josef Stalin might supply Fuehrer Hitler with the gold he needs to purchase war materials outside of Germany has long alarmed British officials, and when the report of this shipment originally circulated several days ago foreign office officials not only refused to confirm it, but counseled that it be treated with utmost skepticism.

(The 17½ tons of gold mentioned would be worth about $17,024,000 at the United States Treasury price of $35 an ounce or $15,923,040 at the Bank of England's price of 168 shillings—$33.85—an ounce.

(Gold stocks of the Netherlands Bank have increased about 8,000,000 guilders—$4,200,000—during the last month and the Amsterdam newspaper Die Telegraaf said the increase was caused by gold shipments from "an eastern country."

(The paper said that it was known Russian gold was being sent to Germany and that therefore it was presumed Berlin was sending the gold to Amsterdam to establish credit.)

This official statement plus growing evidence that Germany and Russia have made some kind of a deal over both the Baltic and the Balkan areas are causing some anxiety here. Until two days ago foreign office officials believed Russia was prepared to sign a treaty with Turkey to complement the Anglo-French-Turkish treaty of mutual assistance. Since then the Russo-Turkish talks have been suspended and reports have increased of a Russo-German Balkan understanding.

What is most feared is that Germany, Russia, Hungary and Bulgaria might combine to settle their various grievances with Rumania. Germany is interested in the granaries and refineries; Russia wants Bessarabia, which she had before the last war; Hungary wants Transylvania and Bulgaria is demanding the return of Dobruja.

Rumania and Hungary recently agreed to reduce their common frontier garrisons to peacetime strength and the Bulgarians had been talking about Balkan unity, but what is feared is a German or a Russian move against King Carol's country that would induce all these countries to jump in and grab the particular part they covet.

For Great Britain and France, who have guaranteed Rumania, and for Turkey whose position would be endangered, if Rumania disappeared, this would create a dangerous position. It is felt here that Great Britain and France could not afford to see the Black Sea turned into a Russian lake and Anglo-French communications through the Mediterranean threatened but, on the other hand, they are not eager to bring Russia and any other country into the fight on the side of Germany.

Diplomatic circles here are convinced that Germany and Russia have reached a definite agreement to divide the Baltic into spheres of interest. The cold reception given to the Finns who recently went to Berlin and the transfer of Germans out of the Baltic states indicate that the entire upper Baltic region has been allocated to Russia and Norway. Sweden and Denmark are believed to have been earmarked for Germany.

Wives Navy Left Behind In France Make Way Home

Orders Suddenly Sent Husbands, Most Of Funds to Sea

Copyright by New York Times.

New York, Oct. 18.—The Exeter of the American Export line docked in Jersey City today with 120 passengers, including the wives of six American Naval officers who were stranded on the French Riviera when their husbands were ordered to duty on September 20.

The women were living in rented homes in Villefranche, 2 miles east of Nice, in the fortified bay where the United States squadron was anchored. As they expected to be evacuated by the ships and a French restriction prevented them from taking more than $100 out of the country, most of their luggage and money was on board the warships.

When their husbands were ordered aboard their ships, the wives remained on shore with no information as to when the vessels would leave or where they would go.

"We got up one morning," Mrs. William Porter, of Washington, said, "and found the ships had gone. We have not seen our husbands since."

Mrs. Porter, whose husband is a lieutenant on the destroyer Jacob Jones, said she "did not have a penny." Most of the other women were short of funds also.

"But we pooled what we had," she said, "and had enough so that we were all able to get home."

Other women in the party were Mrs. Russell Smith, of Los Angeles; Mrs. Truman Patterson and Mrs. Byron Rhodes, of Norfolk, whose husbands also were on the Jacob Jones; Mrs. Belle Bossio, of San Francisco, whose husband was on the destroyer Badger, and Mrs. Charles Pasco, also of San Francisco, whose husband was on the cruiser Trenton.

They went to Marseilles and boarded the Exeter, which crossed and recrossed the Mediterranean, since it went as far as Beirut and Lebanon before returning. It was stopped both when it entered the Straits of Gibraltar on September 10 and when it left them on October 8.

The ship also was searched at Marseilles by the French. While there it had to comply with the port regulations and remain blacked out at night.

Rome Expects Big Nazi Push Within 10 Days

Believes Germanys Will Try to Crack Line At Several Points

By International News Service

Rome, Oct. 18.—Confidence prevailed in informed Italian circles tonight that Germany would launch her major offensive against the French and British on the Western Front within a week or ten days.

Germany will throw her full might into the attack, it was predicted, in order that the initial big-scale battle of the war "will be an initial victory so decisive as to show the trend of the war."

Italian quarters do not exclude the possibility that the German offensive may be directed against the principal fortifications of the Maginot Line. The attack may cover a long front, Italian observers declared, in the hope of penetrating the Maginot Line at numerous points and to provide a wide field to maneuver Germany's highly mechanized attack troops.

The impression in Italian circles tonight was that the Germans are determined not only to penetrate the Maginot Line but to drive their advance far into French territory in order to confine the fighting to enemy country.

The success or failure of this anticipated offensive is expected to have tremendous effect upon Italy's future actions, which are being readjusted daily to meet the changing events.

Italy is rapidly strengthening her defensive measures, and is maintaining in effect food and fuel restrictions. Otherwise, however, normal peacetime activity prevails throughout the country.

Quick Nazi Victory Seen

Copyright by New York Times.

Rome, Oct. 18.—The Italian press today sees Germany winning the war quickly. Newspapers have gone as strongly pro-German in the last few days as they ever were at the height of the Axis, yet there is no reason to suppose that the government's attitude has changed in any way.

Italian correspondents clearly have their orders to favor Germany to the hilt and they do so even from Paris and London, writing with a freedom that censors there do not allow even to American correspondents.

The air raid on Scotland and the attacks on the Western Front provide the basis for today's glorification of German might.

Amoy Incident Settled, Hull Says

Secretary Hull announced yesterday settlement of the incident at the International Settlement at Kulangsu, Amoy, China, which forced the United States to land 42 sailors after the Japanese had landed the same number last May 11.

The American bluejackets, Hull said, were to be withdrawn yesterday at the same time that the Japanese troops leave.

The incident involved a Japanese blockade of the Kulangsu Settlement.

"Again The River," published recently, is a first novel which many experienced writers might be proud to claim. Somewhere in her experience the author, Stella E. Morgan, has gained a sympathetic insight into the lives of those who live close to nature. She has portrayed this understanding through Jasper Morton's family—simple, rugged characters who cling to their land in spite of floods—floods which seem diabolically obsessed with the will to destroy. This story of a rugged individualist who maintains his faith in spite of hardships and chastisements seems symbolic of the American nation as a whole $2.50

Pope Declares Church Won't Let Faith Die

Pontiff Welcomes New Lithuanian Envoy to Holy See

By Herbert L. Matthews.

Copyright by New York Times

Vatican City, Oct. 18.—A declaration that the church would not get involved in controversies and territorial competitions now taking place, but that it would, if necessary, defend Europe's Christian heritage, was made by the Pope today.

This declaration came during a speech of welcome to the new Lithuanian minister to the Holy See after a rupture of diplomatic relations dating back to 1931.

The Pope's statement constitutes a definition of the church's attitude which is so important that Vatican circles said that His Holiness' first encyclical would contain the same principle as one of its fundamental thoughts.

"Conscious of the duties proper to our charge of supreme pastor," said the Pontiff, "we will not permit —without being asked—that our activities, always directed toward the well-being of souls, should be involved in purely temporal controversies and territorial competitions among states.

Shadow Over Europe

"But the demands of this task do not permit us to close our eyes when there arise new and immeasurable dangers precisely directed at the well-being of souls; when on the face of Europe which is Christian in all its fundamental traits, lengthens each day more threateningly and nearer the sinister shadow of the thoughts and works of the enemies of God.

"In such circumstances, more than in any period of history, the preservation, the culture and, if necessary, the defense of the Christian heritage acquires for the future destinies of Europe and the prosperity of each of its peoples, great or small, a decisive importance."

Authoritative Vatican quarters called attention to certain features of this passage, aside from its obvious meaning. When the Pope said he would take no initiative, he put in that qualifying phrase, "without being asked."

"Apart From Temporal Conflict"

That refers to a provision of the Lateran accord by which the Holy See "declares it desires to remain and will remain, apart from temporal conflict among other states . . . unless the parties in the conflict make joint appeals to admission of peace."

That the Pontiff repeats this principle today is held to mean, first, that not even the European war has shaken his resolve to stay out of international politics, but second, that he wants the nations to realize he would gladly lend his services for peace if asked.

At the same time attention is called to the fact that this war has brought "new and immeasurable dangers" caused by "the enemies of God." Russia is certainly one of those "enemies of God," but it is believed that it would be arbitrary to conclude that Germany is placed in the same category despite the Pope's use of the same phrase in his September 30 speech to the Poles.

Nevertheless, the Pontiff has made it clear that Europe's "Christian heritage" faces the greatest danger in its 2,000 years and that neither he nor the church intends to stand aside and see it destroyed.

73 Hurt, U. S. Ship Struggles Home

in the Hamilton's ample hospital.

It was presumed that the medical supplies which the ship's doctor, Thomas Fister, needed so badly, were put aboard by a line. In addition to ministering to the needs of the scores of injured passengers and seamen, Dr. Fister had been required on Tuesday at the height of the storm to perform an appendectomy on Henry Heinsoth, an engine room storekeeper.

The story of the ship's battle against the mountainous waves was told cryptically in her radio reports —beginning at 11 o'clock Tuesday night when Capt. James E. Fisher, her master, appealed for the medical supplies, and ending this afternoon when he notified his superiors in New York that his ship was still sound and was proceeding for New York. Earlier in the day he had reported that the heavy waves and the prevalence of injury might force him to run for Halifax, Nova Scotia.

The Tuesday night message, sent while the ship was 1,000 miles east of New York and about 800 miles south of St. John's, Newfoundland, said: "Many seriously injured in heavy weather. Send morphine, codine, splints, fracture supplies. Remove injured. One seriously burned."

The Hamilton, 150 miles out from Boston on neutrality patrol duty, was dispatched immediately toward the liner. A few hours later the British freighter Blairbeg sent an SOS from near the same position that her rudder was broken and she was wallowing helplessly in the same big waves that pounded the President Harding.

After the Hamilton gave medical supplies to the President Harding, she left immediately to help the Blairbeg, but late today the British ship notified the Boston Navy Yard that she needed no "further assistance." It was presumed that the Coast Guard cutter Duane had reached her.

Meanwhile, the President Harding had amplified her first radio message with the following grim inventory: "One seriously burned, four fractured ribs, one broken leg, one skull fracture, two fractured femurs, one fractured spine, several fractured lower legs, two fractured ankles, one fractured scapula (shoulder blade), several fractured humeri (upper arm), one avulsion of the scalp."

This list, incomplete of the most serious injuries, obviously was intended to guide any rescue parties in the stocking of necessary medical supplies. While they were arriving on the Hamilton, Dr. Fister already had filled his 12-capacity ship's hospital and was treating passengers and crew members in emergency hospital quarters with the assistance of five doctors among the passengers while the ship bucked and rolled.

These physicians who assisted Dr. Fister were Dr. Max Schur and his wife, Dr. Helen Schur, of Vienna, and Dr. W. V. Livingstone, Dr. H. J. Bonner and Dr. W. Wickman.

Dr. Schur and his wife were mentioned in the first radio report the United States Lines received this morning. It told how they assisted in the appendectomy and closed with "At present hove to in heavy gale."

A little after 10 o'clock this morning a second message was received: "During heavy storm many sustained injuries. Crew and passengers. Ten seriously injured. Also lifeboat No. 9 and davits and starboard side-rail aft deck carried away. May have to make Halifax. Heavy sea at present."

The ship's estimate of "ten seriously injured" was corrected in a message received at 1:35 o'clock in the afternoon when Capt. Roberts radioed: "Regret to report injuries as follows—passengers 45, crew 28, of whom 13 passengers and 10 crew serious. Paul Johnson, cabin waiter, missing, presumably lost overboard."

Babies Without Destination Loaded on Trains by Nazis

By Felix Cotten.

Post Staff Writer

The Nazi regime last winter placed on trains going out of Germany, unaccompanied and without destination, "many hundreds" of small Jewish children, many of them too young to recall their names, according to information in the possession of the Intergovernmental Committee for Refugees.

Officers of the committee, meanwhile, concluded yesterday their two-day meeting at the State Department, and agreed to meet here agian a week from today to discuss President Roosevelt's proposal for a gigantic program for resettlement of war refugees.

The group discussed, at the concluding session, the problem of relocating between 150,000 and 200,000 refugees from Germany now temporarily domiciled in adjacent countries. This is the "short-range" or immediate phase of the program laid down by President Roosevelt at a White House luncheon Tuesday.

It was generally agreed that some 60,000 refugees in European neutral countries—principally Belgium, Holland and Switzerland— should receive prior consideration, owing to their desperate plight.

The story of the children, full facts of which are before the committee, was said to have had few parallels in the tragic history of "mans' inhumanity to man."

Many of these victims of Nazi Jewish persecution were described as "just toddlers," although their ages in some cases ranged up to 8 or 9 years. Some knew their first names, but not their last names, and they were unable to tell anybody where they came from.

Each had a ticket, and there was usually a tag on the child's clothing. The tag, designed to get the child out of Germany, frequently said, "I am going to meet mama" at some named place across the border. But there was nobody at this place to meet the child.

How many children were exported in this way is a guess. The number may run into the thousands. "Many hundreds," therefore, is considered a conservative estimate.

More of them landed in Belgium than anywhere else. The explanation, it is said, was that the Belgian border guards were rather softhearted and let them come in. Numbers, however, were sent to Holland and Switzerland.

The problem presented by these child outcasts was such, it is said, that the Red Cross had to organize special units to care for them. They are not part of the refugee problem now, however, since they have been absorbed to a large extent in homes in the countries to which they were sent.

The exodus of children from Germany, it is said, occurred after the Jewish persecutions of last November and later during the winter. The November excesses followed the fatal shooting on November 7, 1938, of Ernst vom Rath, third secretary of the German Embassy at Paris, by Herschel Grynszpan.

What had happened to their parents, of course, is unknown, it was said.

If guards at the border wanted to turn the children back, it is said, the Nazi authorities frequently would protest that they did not know who they were or where they came from. Since the alternative was a sentence to possible starvation or death, it was pointed out, they usually were allowed to cross the border.

Meanwhile, the American Jewish Congress, through its officers, Dr. Stephen S. Wise, president, and Louis Lipsky, vice president, announced that it had submitted to the intergovernmental committee a memorandum calling for the immediate rescue of 5,000,000 Jews in eastern and central Europe threatened with extermination.

The congress submitted a six-point program, as follows:

Expansion by the committee of its functions to include refugees from Poland, Italy, Hungary, and "possibly Rumania."

Redefinition of the term "refugee" to enable aid to be given persons imprisoned in these countries "who are seeking release from oppression through emigration."

The states represented on the committee should set an example to the world by "opening their own doors to a reasonable Jewish immigration and settlement."

Expansion of Jewish emigration to Palestine.

Consideration of forming a special Jewish body to cooperate with the committee.

Aid from non-Jewish sources in a program of rescue on a scale commensurate with the situation.

A petition, signed by 238,199 persons, including members of Congress and other public and civic leaders, urging that "prime consideration" be given to Palestine as a place of refuge for persecuted Jews was presented to committee officers by Lipsky, Rabbi Isadore Breslau, director of the American Zionist Bureau, Henry Montor, New York executive vice president of the United Jewish Appeal, and Morris Simon, of Washington.

Lord Winterton, chairman of the committee; Myron C. Taylor, a vice chairman and American representative, and Sir Herbert Emerson, director, between now and the meeting next Thursday, will discuss the question of raising funds for resettlement work with leaders of private organizations in New York.

the Washington chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management.

Gathered ostensibly to reorganize the "U. S. A.," the administrative talent emerged instead with a discussion of general Government reorganization, featured by proposals to merge the Budget Bureau with a national planning body, absorb the Civil Service Commission by the President's executive establishment, and formulate a national budget by joint Government-business consultations.

Carmody declared that the time had come when it was possible for "responsible" business groups to tell the Government their plans for expenditures during the year. In this way, he said, the national budget could be drawn up on the basis of how much additional Federal money was necessary to keep industry going.

Smith made the suggestion that there be a "wedding" of the Budget Bureau with a planning body to lay a program for Federal expenditures. He also said he thought it desirable that the "over-all management function" of the Civil Service Commission be placed in the President's office.

Gen. DeWitt is a former quartermaster general of the Army. He served in numerous skirmishes in the Philippine Insurrection and during the World War was in charge of supply for the First Army. He received the Distinguished Service Medal for his war service. Commandant of the War College since 1937, he has headed the Philippine Division and the First Brigade at New York. DeWitt's elevation to lieutenant general, a rank held by few officers in American history, will break up the "brother act" of local military circles. His brother, Brig. Gen. Wallace DeWitt, is commandant of the only other Army post in the District—the Army Medical Center.

Gen. Stone, a West Pointer, served in Cuba during the Spanish-American War and in many engagements in the Philippines. He was wounded in the campaign against the Moros in 1904. In the World War he was assistant chief of staff of the Third Division in France.

The new War College chief was a classmate of Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, at Virginia Military Institute in 1901. Gen. Peyton commanded the Sixty-first Infantry in the Meuse-Argonne and St. Mihiel offenses of the World War. He is now in command of the Twenty-first Infantry Brigade in Hawaii.

Gen. Bowley is one of the few Army officers still on the active list who served as a general officer in France. He commanded the Second Field Artillery Brigade and served as chief of artillery of the Second Army. He commanded the Second Division in 1928-29 and the Third Corps Area from 1935 to 1938.

70 Tons of Polish Gold in Paris After 6,000-Mile Trip

Copyright by New York Times.

Paris, Oct. 18.—After a hazardous 6,000-mile journey by car, rail and boat, 70 tons of Polish gold arrived safely in Paris today by the way of Rumania, Turkey, Syria and the Mediterranean.

The gold was still in the vaults of the Bank of Poland when hasty evacuation of Warsaw was ordered at the end of the first week of the war. The $80,000,000 worth of gold treasure was taken by a caravan of 18 trucks to Swiatyn, transferred to a specially chartered Rumanian train and taken to Constanza, where a Turkish boat already was waiting.

The ship cruised in the eastern Mediterranean for over a week, until it was arranged with the French government to unload the gold in Syria, to be transported to France by the French navy.

The new Polish cabinet made it clear that not one ounce is to be used for the government's current expenses—it will form a reserve for a restored Polish currency in a reconstituted Poland.

Allies Await Repeal to Buy 5,750 Planes

French Mission Here For 2,750; British Would Take 3,000

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 18.—The French and British governments are ready to place additional orders for 5,750 American-made warplanes—cash on the line—if and when Congress repeals the arms embargo.

A French mission now in Washington is authorized to contract for 2,750 planes, and a British mission, now in Canada, for 3,000 planes, in United States factories.

With engines and accessories, the total cost would approximate $330,000,000.

More than 1,200 warplanes were contracted for with American plants by the two countries prior to the outbreak of the war. Less than half had been delivered when the neutrality law went into effect.

Several neutral countries, including Belgium and Sweden, are anxious to obtain American warplanes. Sweden has a contract with one factory for pursuit planes. A Belgian mission is en route to the United States to discuss the purchase of aircraft.

Service Board Approves

Representatives of the French government want to buy 3,000 airplane engines here, though whether those would be in addition to the engines fitted to the warplanes they hope to buy could not be learned.

Favoring the acquisition of up to date warplanes by France and Great Britain if the embargo is lifted was a decision reached by a joint Army and Navy board within the last week that each export application would be considered on its merits, regardless of the "age" of the type of aircraft involved.

Heretofore, no type less than a year old could be shipped. All experts, of course, are still contingent on deliveries of planes ordered by the American armed services.

The French are anxious to buy three types of American planes—pursuits, observation ships and 2-engined bombers. The British want reconnaissance planes, single-engine attack planes and 2-engine medium weight bombers.

Curtiss Planes Praised

France has inquired exhaustively into the possibility of buying additional hundreds of Curtiss pursuits. Two hundred of these machines, capable of "more than 300 miles an hour" top speed, were delivered prior to the start of the war. Censored dispatches, plus private advices from Paris, relate that the planes have performed exceptionally well against faster but less maneuverable German pursuits.

A tentative order for more, contingent on erasure of the embargo, has been placed. One report, unverified, said it was for 530.

Britain is understood to want to purchase more Lockheed "Hudson" bombers. Some of these warplanes, delivered prior to the war, are being used on submarine patrol duty.

American aircraft manufacturing circles hear the British will invite United States factories to establish branches in Canada if the embargo is not lifted. Tooling and raw materials for warplane manufacture would be imported from this country under that plan.

Twenty American plants now produce military airplanes of one type or another. Some larger ones manufacture several different types. It has been estimated that as high as 25 plants could be utilized for warplane making, if training planes are included in the category.

Dean Skinner Ascribes War To Versailles

Educator Speaks At Town Meeting of Church Convention

If the men at the Versailles Treaty table had had the spirit of liberalism in their hearts, the world would not be at war today, Dean Clarence R. Skinner, of the Tufts School of Religion, declared last night at a Town Meeting held in connection with the Universalist Church convention. Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of District schools, was moderator.

Sharing the panel with Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of the Methodist Church, and Dr. John Ray Ewers, of Pittsburgh, Dr. Skinner spoke at the Mayflower Hotel, where earlier in the day a $100,000 plan for reorganizing the Universalist Church's activities was unanimously approved by the delegates.

The town meeting will be continued tonight at 8 with a discussion on "Religion and Future America," in which Prof. Harry F. Ward, of Union Theological Seminary; Dr. Frederick M. Eliot, president of the American Unitarian Association, and Chancellor Joseph M. M. Gray, of American University, will take part. Dr. Eliot is a descendant of the founder of the local All Souls' Unitarian Church.

The convention's approval of the four-year plan followed an appeal for an ecclesiastical housecleaning from Dr. Robert Cummins, youthful superintendent of the denomination, who disclosed that the church had gained only 2,000 members in 50 years; that 160 out of 544 existent churches were receiving financial aid from the convention, and that 80 lacked pastors and 97 were dormant.

Dr. Cummins, who has been in office just 14 months, scored the present system in the denomination, and insisted that "we must get every unit off the dole." He added that "there is no reason for us to function as sort of a glorified ecclesiastical PWA."

The plan, he explained, would call for $50,000 to be appropriated by the board of trustees of the Universalist Church from unrestricted funds, and the balance from small contributions.

"Old Glory" has a checkered history. Born as an oak tree, she grew into a scrub New England pine, then coiled into a rattlesnake, struck for freedom, and transformed herself into the stars and stripes.

The development of the "Star-Spangled Banner" from colonial origins is traced in an exhibit just completed at the National Museum.

According to Theodore T. Belote, Smithsonian Institution's curator of history and the exhibit's designer, the American flag is unique. "Its development depicts symbolically the history of the American people from their meager beginnings in the 13 original colonies," he says.

All about the walls of the West Hall of the Arts and Industries Building hang tattered pennants in red, white and blue.

Faded and torn, its colors hardly discernible against the grey backing to which it has been attached, is the flag flown on the U. S. brig Enterprise during the engagement between that vessel and the British brig Boxer on September 5, 1813.

Beside it hangs the flag carried by the Washington Volunteers in the Mexican War. The flag flown from the ironclad Monitor during the engagement with the Confederate Merrimac is draped on the West Hall wall.

Nearby, in show cases that radiate like spokes of a wheel about the towering statue of Freedom, lie 42 paintings, reproductions of colonial emblems and the early American flags.

Old Glory Is There

To the left, in the huge, glass-roofed North Hall, hangs the enormous banner that inspired Francis Scott Key's composition of the national anthem. About 28 by 32 feet, its torn bunting is quilted to a backing of Irish linen for permanent preservation.

The series of paintings, executed by WPA Artist Nicholas Mallis, start with the New England banner of 1636, a white flag with a red cross and a brown and green oak tree in the upper left-hand corner. American naval vessels in the early period of the Revolution carried a white flag with a green pine tree and a black painted slogan, reading "An Appeal to Heaven."

Natural symbols appealed to the colonists, Belote explained. From 1775 to 1777 most naval vessels carried the famous rattlesnake flag with the legend, "Don't tread on me." The coiled reptile, with its tongue extended, was the symbol of resentment—the rattlesnake does not attack unless trodden upon.

A Constellation Born

Later, the rattlesnake was stretched diagonally across a background of 13 red and white stripes, the first of the striped flags. The snake disappeared and 13 stars were placed on a background of blue when the Second Continental Congress, in 1777, made the flag represent "a new constellation."

Two more stars and two more stripes were added in 1795, when there were 15 States. The original "Star-Spangled Banner," used in the War of 1812, is a flag of this design. In 1818, however, the stripes were fixed at 13 and the practice begun of adding a star for each new State.

Not until 1912, when Arizona, the forty-eighth State, was admitted, was the flag fixed at its present design.

Hazen Receives No. 1 Season Pass To Auto Show

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday received the No. 1 season pass to the twentieth annual auto show, which will open Saturday at 11 a. m. in Riverside Stadium, Twenty-sixth street between Constitution avenue and D streets northwest. The presentation was made by Richard J. Murphy, show manager.

Five candidates for queen of the auto show were present. They were Evangeline Rice, Catherine Berberich, Jane Anderson, Hope Layne and Betty Robey. Tonight is the deadline for nominations for the post of queen.

Candidates for queen are being invited to attend the preview of the show which will be tomorrow night. The full Washington orchestra of the National Broadcasting Company will broadcast a concert from the show.

Chamberlain Declares War Has Begun Well

Before Commons, He Cites Destruction of Eight German Planes

By Raymond Daniell.
Copyright by New York Times.

London, Oct. 18.—In another weekly report to the House of Commons, Prime Minister Chamberlain said today that despite an intensification of submarine activity and the beginning of a new phase of the war marked by enemy air raids on the fleet bases, the navy and antiaircraft defenses were proving their ability to hold their own.

Pointing out that at least 8 of the 30 German planes engaged in the raids on Rosyth and Scapa Flow were brought down by defending forces, Chamberlain said that this meant the Nazi losses exceeded 25 per cent.

With pride in his voice, Chamberlain told Commons, "We have at least the satisfaction of knowing we have made a good beginning" in the war on Germany.

More Planes Sighted

More enemy planes were sighted today snooping around Scapa Flow, but they turned tail without dropping bombs when the antiaircraft batteries opened fire.

Meanwhile the official casualty lists disclosed that of 1,234 officers and men aboard the Royal Oak when she was sunk at anchor in Scapa Flow by a German submarine, 810 were killed and only 424 were saved. Among the officers killed was Rear Admiral H. E. C. Blagrove.

(At Bergen, Norway, passengers arriving on the Norwegian-American liner Stavengerfjord said they saw the German raid yesterday at Scapa Flow and that damage inflicted by the Germans appeared slight.

(The Stavengerfjord sailed from Kirkwall, one of the British naval London, Oct. 18.—In another examination stations for neutral vessels in the Orkney Islands just north of Scapa Flow. The passengers said they saw several explosions near warships in Scapa Flow.)

Planes Battle Warships

[A brisk battle in which 12 unidentified warplanes attacked six warships off the Netherlands island of Schiermoonikoog was reported today, according to the Associated Press.

[Residents of the islands in the North Sea near the German coast, said they saw the attack but were unable to distinguish the nationality of the participants. It was not known, consequently, whether the vessels were British or German.

[Neither Great Britain nor Germany announced action in that vicinity.

[Billagers said they could not tell whether any planes were shot down or whether the warships were damaged.—Editor's note.]

"A Good Beginning"

"In these early days, we must not of course, indulge in foolish boasts," said Chamberlain. "The attacks so far have been few and on a small scale and it would be unwise to assume we will always be as successful as we have been in these first exchanges. There are many surprises in the war and they cannot all be pleasant. But we have at least the satisfaction of knowing that we have made a good beginning."

In the carrying out of the task of removing the submarine menace from empire trade routes, Chamberlain said, the navy sustained "severe losses of officers and men," but, he added, a "heavy toll" has been taken of submarines.

The extent of the enemy's disappointment over the failure of air attacks to inflict serious injury upon the navy could be measured, he said, by "the fantastic nature of the claims which they have felt obliged to invent. He reiterated denials that the Hood, the Repulse or the Ark Royal had been injured in the slightest.

People Are Resolute

Continuing, Chamberlain said:

"The people of this country are resolute enough to bear bad news and the government have not hesitated to publish the full extent of the losses they have sustained. Those imaginary losses which the German broadcasts described with such unblushing impudence may serve for a time to raise their spirits but in the end their falsity will be demonstrated and the consequent disappointment will only be more depressing.

"We on our side have no intention of claiming successes of which we are unconvinced. It is far more important that the world should be able to believe implicitly in the truth of the communiques we issue than that we reap the shortlived advantages which distortions of truth may bring."

The prime minister commented on the fact that apart from comment in German newspapers there had been no indication from Berlin of the views of the Nazi government on the views he expressed in his speech October 12 when he said that Great Britain could not make peace with the present rulers of the Reich on the terms outlined by Fuehrer Hitler.

Finds Neutrals Appreciative

Opinion in other countries, to judge from the bulk of comment in neutral nations, he said, had shown a "full appreciation of the attitude of the Allied governments."

He noted that the British expeditionary forces at last had taken over "their allotted sector of the French line and that all divisions are in position."

"Such are the harmonious relations with the French and so great is the unity of command that has been established," he said, "that British forces are under the command of the French commander-in-chief and French troops are serving under the command of the British commander-in-chief."

In the debate which followed, opposition members, while expressing satisfaction with the work of the fighting forces, expressed considerable concern over the state of defenses on the economic front.

Simon Questioned

The chief question raised was whether the committee under the chairmanship of Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, could carry out the economic planning necessary for victory as well as a minister who could give his full time and attention to the task.

Replying, Sir John said decisions in the economic field were so intimately connected with the political, diplomatic and military policy that he questioned whether they could be treated "as such in a communique, as come commentators suggest."

Composers Urged to Strike Popular Note To Link Americas by Music of the Hemisphere

Artistic snobbishness and the legal and mechanical difficulties of exchanging music, artists and instruments among the 21 American republics yesterday drew the fire of delegates to the Conference on Inter-American Relations in the Field of Music.

Temperamental stiffness on the part of conductors and artists will have to be overcome if closer musical relations between the United States and the other American nations are to be brought about, Dr. Howard Hanson, director of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y., told the gathering at the Library of Congress.

Emphasizing that improved musical relations with Latin America can be achieved only by the cooperative efforts of musicians and music patrons in the Western Hemisphere, he declared himself in agreement with other speakers who stressed the need for elimination of copyright difficulties.

Urges Popular Note

Evans Clark, director of the Twentieth Century Fund, urged the conference to concentrate its efforts upon attainment of greater liking throughout the Americas for the popular music of the various nations.

Popular music, both for singing and dancing, offers opportunity for the greatest understanding between peoples, since it reaches the greatest proportion of the population and is more expressive of national characteristics, he asserted.

Called by the division of cultural relations, State Department, to devise methods for achieving closer musical cooperation between the United States and the other Western Hemisphere states, the conference was told by Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle that cultural understanding "can be reached only by realizing it rests on the principle of the two-way street."

Cherrington Speaks

Dr. Ben M. Cherrington, chief of the division of cultural relations, told the meeting that "through decades most of the countries of the hemisphere have aided cultural pursuits."

The Federal Government, he asserted, "can perform a real service by providing channels of interchange."

Swedes Demonstrate Solidarity for 3 Kings, Finn President

Later the states' head had a separate talk in the palace while the foreign ministers and their aides continued the conversations at the foreign office.

The first day's conferences were described tonight as having produced a "rather more optimistic attitude" in high political quarters.

The reply of Soviet President Kalinin to President Roosevelt saying that Russia respects Finland's independence was credited with achieving some relaxation of the tension in the northern conuntries, existing since Finnish-Russian talks began.

Russian demands upon Finland, however, still remained a closely guarded secret.

The principal question facing the conferees was how to preserve neutrality while maintaining normal trade relations. To that problem was added the situation of Finland whose negotiations with the Soviet, the Finns fear, may threaten their independence.

The press of Norway and Denmark stressed northern European solidarity.

Copenhagen's Berlingske Tidende said:

"Northern people are not bound together by perishable pacts which often, once signed, seem to lose their effectiveness. Events have shown that they, by nature, are more closely knit together than treaties could make them. Whatever is about to happen will not shake this solidarity."

In Oslo, the conservative Morgenblad said:

"Scandinavia's border is identical with Finland's eastern border. Infringement on Finland must have grave consequences also for Norway and Sweden."

Helsinki, Oct. 18 (AP).—Thousands of Finns, with their capital city partly emptied and guarded against possible air attack, tonight staged a mass demonstration for Finn-Scandinavian solidarity.

Germans Told to Leave

Copyright by New York Times.

Helsinki, Oct. 18.—The German legation in Finland today advised German nationals resident in Finland to wind up their affairs and return to German voluntarily, before being compelled to do so.

A special bureau has been opened for advising and assisting nearly 4,000 Germans in Finland in regard to settlement of their affairs.

Many are reluctant to leave, and there is a good deal of resentment over families having to abandon their homes in a country where they have thrived. A few seem to understand the necessity of repatriation, and the severance of Finno-German trade relations which the evacuation implies. Among those about to leave are many prominent businessmen, also teachers, scientists, clerks and agents who have done well here. Their permanent departure would mark a new turn in Finno-German business relations and a blow for Germany, who supplied most of Finland's imports.

Germany Disinterested

Berlin, Oct. 18 (AP).—Authorized sources were quick to let the world know today that Germany was disinterested in the Stockholm meeting.

"We placed our relations with the Soviet Union on a satisfactory basis," so the comment ran, "so let the Nordic and Baltic States do likewise. They always maintained correct, normal and decent relations with Germany, but, on the other hand, made a point of keeping up a cetrain reserve.

"Then why should we inflict ourselves upon them by attemting to break through this reserve?"

Phone Service Cut Off

Copenhagen, Oct. 18 (AP).—Estonia halted normal telophonic communication today—the day scheduled for the entrance of the first units of the Soviet Russian army to establish military bases granted under the Russian-Estonian agreement. Press calls were refused and apparently only government calls were accepted.

Germans Being Resettled

Berlin, Oct. 19.—The resettlement of about 40,000 Germans in the Baltic countries, which have become a sphere of Russian influence, apparently is well under way.

Allied, Turkish Generals Confer

that he was returning.

Official Turkish circles now admit that Turkey was irrevocably committed to support Rumania in the event of invasion by Bulgaria or Russia.

All the Russian proposals to Saracoglu were reported immediately submitted to the French and British Ambassadors in Turkey.

Franz von Papen, former German chancellor and now German Ambassador to Turkey, arrived here from Ankara en route to Berlin, where he was said to have been summoned by his government [Von Papen is expected to see Hitler immediately after his arrival, according to the New York Herald-Tribune.

[Berlin diplomatic circles refused to believe their efforts to enlist Turkey in the totalitarian bloc against the west has failed. It is common report in Berlin that von Papen will receive the final version of Germany's demands that Turkey repudiate its engagements with France and England, and that the demands this time will be phrased in the short and simple "or else" language of Nazi diplomacy.—Editor's note.]

(Turkey and France signed a mutual-assistance agreement June 23 to help each other "in case of an act of aggression which might lead to war in the Mediterranean." Embodied in that declaration was the prediction that it would be followed by a "definite accord of long duration carrying reciprocal engagements in the interest of their national security."

(A similar British-Turkish agreement was announced May 12, but has not yet been formalized.)

[Turkey coupled her diplomatic activity with intensified military measures, the Associated Press said. A number of heavy duty trucks and other large vehicles were requisitioned. Additional military measures included complete blackout drills at Symrna and environs and placing of mobilized troops on the Bulgarian and Russian Caucasus frontiers.

[The new precautions were considered evidence Turkey was working steadily toward a condition of complete preparedness for any emergency.

Quick Treaty Forecast

London, Oct. 18 (INS).—Negotiations for a sweeping mutual assistance pact between Great Britain and Turkey, and possibly between France and Turkey, were almost completed tonight, according to diplomatic circles.

The Daily Mail doplomatic correspondent was even more emphatic in his statement, predicting signature of the Anglo-Turkish pact "within 24 hours."

The French foreign office, questioned about reports of a Franco-Turkish pact, issued a statement through an official spokesman declaring "it is not impossible that something will be done on the subject within a week."

Turkey Held Ready to Sign

Paris, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Turkey has agreed to sign the conventions initialed with France and Britain three weeks ago, a reliable diplomatic source said tonight, putting into effect the military, financial and economic agreements inlcuded in the June treaties.

The treaties provide:

Automatic mutual assistance in the Eastern Mediterranean.

Turkish aid should the Western powers have to execute the guarantees given to Rumania and Greece.

Vatican, Italy Pleased

Rome, Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Both the Vatican and the Italian government hoped tonight that the collapse of Turko-Russian conversations would prevent the spread of communism in the Near East.

Vatican satisfaction was indicated in the Osservatore Romano, official news organ, which praised Turkey's firm attitude and hinted negotiations failed because Russia attempted to treat Turkey as she had treated the "defenseless neutral Baltic republics."

Italy hoped the Turkish attitude would remain one of neutrality and thereby help preserve Balkan neutrality. It has been the Italian viewpoint that once one Balkan nation gets involved in war the others are bound to follow in rapid succession.

Rumania Has Fears

Bucharest, Oct. 18 (AP).—Breakdown of Turkish-Soviet negotiations left vitally interested Rumania in suspense and anxiety today with undiminished fears that Soviet Russia might attempt to regain Bessarabia which Rumania gained after the World War.

Officials circles insisted the Moscow negotiations merely were suspended and would continue at Moscow and Ankara.

Some diplomatic observers said the lack of definite results at Moscow was a strong indication of powerful German influence with the Soviets. This view was predicated on the assumption that Germany exerted pressure to bring new Soviet demands on Turkey, forcing the stalemate.

There was no word concerning Foreign Minister Gafencu's previously announced plan for conferring with Foreign Minister Saracoglu of Turkey on his way back from Moscow or Sofia for discussions inreports Gafencu might go to Mosco wor Sofia for discussions involving Rumanian interests in Bessarabia, the Black Sea and the mouth of the Danube.

Reds Concentration on Sofia

Copyright by New York Times.

Belgrade, Oct. 18.—Reports circulated tonight that Sofia is to become the center of Soviet diplomatic activities in the Balkans. The arrival of the new Russian Minister Arkadi Laurentiev is expected in the Bulgarian capital soon.

It is said that arrangments have been made for an unusually large legation staff while at the same time, it is stated that Soviet representation in other Balkan capitals will be confined to charges d'affaires. Only Russian minister resident now in the Balkans is at Athens.

Dealers Say GMC Tried to Force Sales Financing

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 18 (AP).—The Government presented six more witnesses in Federal Court today to support its charges that General Motors Corporation violated the Sherman anti-trust act by forcing its dealers to finance conditional sales contracts through General Motors Acceptance Corporation.

General Motors, three subsidiaries and 17 officials are defendants.

C. C. Disher, a Winston-Salem (N. C.) automobile dealer, testified that he was told by Thomas Hunter, Chevrolet zone manager at Charlotte, that if he didn't give his finance business to G. M. A. C. he couldn't be a Chevrolet dealer.

Disher said his contract was canceled "four or five times" before he took another line of motor cars. He said Hunter once informed him, "We broke one dealer in this town and damned if we don't fix you."

Others who testified along similar lines were H. C. Patterson, of East St. Louis, Ill.; Henry Hellman, of Parma, Ohio; William S. Harris, of Clayton, Mo., and Eugene Light, of Iowa City, Iowa.

Latin-American Talks Here Nov. 15

Experts from each of the 21 American republics will meet in Washington November 15 to discuss economic repercussions of the European war on North and South America, the Pan American Union announced yesterday.

The meeting was ordered by the recent Panama Conference of American foreign ministers.

The union's governing board began work yesterday on establishment of an inter-American neutrality committee, as provided in another resolution adopted at Panama.

Organization and procedure of the committee will be planned by Felipe A. Espil, Argentine Ambassador; Diogenes Escalante, Ambassador from Venezuela, and Adrian Racinos, Minister from Guatemala.

Text of Speech To Commons by Chamberlain

Britain 'Has Made A Good Beginning' In War, He Asserts

London, Oct. 18.—The text of Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement in the House of Commons:

The statement which I made in this House on October 12 was chiefly concerned with the attitude of His Majesty's government to the speech of the German Chancellor on October 6. Apart from the comment which has appeared in the German newspapers, there has been no indication from Berlin of the views of the German government upon the issues which I sought to define.

There is, therefore, nothing that I can add to my statement last week. Meanwhile, opinion in other countries has had an opportunity of finding expression, and German propaganda organs have used all possible ingenuity so to twist foreign comment as to make it somewhat less unfavorable to their own point of view.

I should doubt whether this effort has had any success outside Germany itself, for it is difficult to conceal the fact that the vast bulk of comment of nearly all shades of political color in neutral countries has shown appreciation of the attitude of the Allied governments.

Issues Not Obscured

It seems evident that the inconveniences which war inevitably brings for all nonbelligerent countries and which, for their part, His Majesty's government intend to do their best to mitigate, have not obscured the fundamental issues at stake, the determination of which must affect for good or ill the moral and material welfare of the neutral peoples no less than that of the belligerents.

The honorable members are already familiar, from statements made in this House and official communiques, with the main events of the war by land and sea and in the air. On the Western Front the British Expeditionary Force has now finally taken over their allotted sector of the French Line and all divisions are in position.

We are proud to know that our men are thus standing to arms beside the soldiers of France, for whom patriotism, determination, and magnificent fighting qualities we have so deep an admiration.

The understanding between the French and British higher commands is complete. The fact that our Expeditionary Force is under the command of the French commander in chief and that unity of command has thus been achieved at so early a stage of the war is one proof of this accord.

Gratiful to Navy

Another is to be found in an agreement by which French troops are serving under the orders of the British commander in chief in France.

Since I last spoke about the progress of the war at sea, activity has been unremitting both in attack and defense. I am sure that the whole nation is grateful to the Royal Navy for their untiring efforts to ward off enemy attack and to remove the menace of the submarine so that the steady flow of trade to and from our shores may remain unbroken.

In carrying out their task the Navy has, during this week, sustained severe losses both in officers and men, and the House will desire to pay their tribute to the memory of all who have given their lives in the defense of their country whether on sea, on land or in the air.

The success achieved against U-boats has already been referred to by my right honorable friend, Winston Churchill, in his statement yesterday. A heavy toll has been taken of the U-boats since the war began. The failure of this form of attack to interfere with our trade may be judged when I inform the House that it is estimated that the losses sustained by British shipping entering and leaving our ports during the week ended October 17 represented only about one-half of 1 per cent of the total number of sailings.

Makes Report To Parliament

Air Attacks Expected

Attacks by enemy aircraft on our fleet bases have begun. This is a new feature of the war but one which was fully expected. The extent of the enemy's disappointment at the failure of these attacks to inflict any serious injury upon our ships may be measured by the fantastic nature of the claims which they have felt obliged to invent.

It is not true and I must repeat it once again, though by now the news grows stale through repetition, that the Hood, or the Repulse, or any other capital ship has suffered the least damage. The same is true of the Ark Royal.

The people of this country are resolute enough to bear bad news, and the governments have not hesitated to publish the full extent of any losses they have sustained. Those imaginary losses which the German broadcasts have described with such unblushing impudence may serve for a time to raise their spirits, but in the end their falsity will be demonstrated and the consequent disappointment will be only the more depressing.

We, on our side, have no intention of claiming successes of which we are not convinced. It is far more important that the world should be able to believe implicitly in the truth of the communiques we issue than that we should reap the short-lived advantages which distortions of the truth may bring. We know that in the air battles which during the last two days have, for the first time, been fought over our own coasts, we have destroyed eight enemy aircraft without losing a single machine of our own. We believe that several more German bombers may have failed to reach home. The total number of aircraft taking part in the raids did not exceed 30.

Encouraged by Defenses

The casualties which we have inflicted upon the enemy have thus certainly exceeded 25 per cent of the attacking force, and may have been higher. These results are a splendid tribute to the courage and determination of the officers and men of the Royal Air Force, and the House will be glad to know that the auxiliary air force has won a first and resounding success by bringing down three out of the four German aircraft destroyed in the raid on Rosyth. We may, indeed, be encouraged by the knowledge that our defenses have proved so successful in these first tests of their strength, and that our fighter aircraft have been shown to possess the excellence for which we had hoped.

In these early days we must not, of course, indulge in foolish boasts. The attacks so far made upon our coasts have been few and on a small scale, and it would be unwise to assume that we shall always be as successful as we have been in these first exchanges. There are many surprises in war and they cannot all be pleasant. But we have at least the satisfaction of knowing that we have made a good beginning.

A Herculean Task

The resignation of Elmer F. Andrews from the position of wages-and-hours administrator, after only a year and three months of service, is a disappointing close to the first chapter of a pioneering effort launched under the most promising auspices.

Mr. Andrews, who succeeded Secretary Perkins as industrial commissioner of New York State, has behind him a record of accomplishment in both the framing and the enforcement of labor legislation. Hence he appeared exceptionally well-equipped to discharge the duties of one of the most difficult administrative positions in the Federal service. Mr. Andrews' official statements, as well as the cautious deliberation with which he approached the task of enforcing the wages-and-hours law, have tended to confirm the original impression that he was the right man for a very hard job.

Unfortunately, Mr. Andrews has not achieved the results expected and has withdrawn under a fire of criticism that evidently left him little choice in reaching a decision. His duties will be taken over by Col. Philip Fleming, of the Army Engineering Corps, in the capacity of assistant to a nonexistent administrator.

Mr. Andrews' successor has also had considerable experience in an administrative capacity, as an executive officer of the PWA, as district engineer in charge of power developments for the abandoned Passamaquoddy project, and as coordinator of the Resettlement Administration.

Although this experience will unquestionably be of great value to Col. Fleming, the position of wages-and-hours administrator calls for much more than executive ability and skill in dealing with large-scale organizations. It requires above all else a well-informed judgment in the selection of men to serve on industry committees and a technical ability to determine the economic feasibility of recommended schedules of wages.

Except for the rigid minima prescribed for wages, and the maximum limits upon hours, the law gives the administrator far-reaching discretionary powers over terms of employment. Indeed, it is not an exaggeration to say that effective regulation of wages and hours under a Federal law calls for most exceptional qualities in the official who interprets and enforces it.

The fact that an appointee of Mr. Andrews' caliber has retired with so little to show for his efforts strongly suggests that at least a part of his failure is inherent in the law, rather than in any shortcomings of administration.

Millions Of Them

Because of the overwhelming tragedy of the war, involving the fate of hundreds of millions of people, the older tragedy of the homeless victims of racial and religious persecution in central Europe has inevitably been obscured. At first glance, therefore, the meeting at Washington of the Intergovernmental Committee on Political Refugees savors of an anachronism. It is, on the contrary, a wholly timely undertaking.

This was clearly brought out in President Roosevelt's address of welcome to the committee. It was he who took the initiative a year and a half ago in summoning a conference which met at Evian, France, to seek a long-range solution of the refugee problem. And while that conference was productive of little more than good intentions, its very existence has helped keep the problem to the fore. Now the President suggests that the committee, without abandoning the specific task for which it was created, should address itself as well to the larger task which looms ahead.

Nearly every great war, he points out, leaves behind it "vast numbers of human beings whose roots have been literally torn up." The present war is likely to have a similar result and, the President estimates, there may be ten or twenty million men, women and children of many races and many religions who will become refugees.

In view of the fact that so little was done by way of solving the refugee problem during the last few years, when the problem was still of relatively modest dimensions, President Roosevelt's advice to the committee to make provision for a manifold extension of its activities seems like the counsel of perfection. Yet he can do no less.

If that larger problem of refugees which is certain to arise when the present war is over is to be handled with even the slightest measure of success, preparations must be made in advance. The problem will require a vast international effort, which if well thought out may ease the always painful transition from a period of destruction to one of reconstruction. And no one government nor even group of governments can do the job. It will require the combined efforts and the best thought of all.

The Sense Of Morality

The steps whereby war was precipitated between Germany and Poland are in general fairly well known to the American public. But certain important evidence is added by the admirable documentation of the official British Blue Book, containing the state papers of that government bearing on the Polish issue for the period immediately preceding the outbreak of hostilities.

With the supplementary White Paper issued this week, containing Sir Nevile Henderson's final report on his ambassadorship in Berlin, the British government has presumably completed the presentation of its case. And the accuracy of this presentation has not yet been challenged in any particular by the German foreign office.

The documents show clearly that Hitler hated the thought of war with Great Britain. So anxious was he to avoid this conflict, at the present time anyway, that on August 25 he suggested an Anglo-German understanding amounting to an alliance between the two countries. The Fuehrer was even "ready to pledge himself personally for its (the British Empire's) continued existence and to place the power of the German Reich at its disposal" if he were first given a free hand to settle the Polish problem.

This German offer was one of truly extraordinary scope. Subject only to the eventual restoration of former German colonies, and to safeguarding of German obligations toward Italy and Russia, Hitler was willing to give "an assurance to the British Empire of German assistance regardless of where such assistance should be necessary."

In other words, granted another Munich at Poland's expense, Hitler was willing to fight Japan to keep Hongkong for Great Britain, or to take on the United States if this country should show a desire to annex the British West Indies.

It does not appear that the British government ever regarded these ideas as the "blessing for Germany and also for the British Empire" which Hitler thought they might prove to be. But great care was taken not to rebuff Hitler, on the one hand and, on the other, to keep his attention focused on the necessity of a peaceful settlement with Poland. The British government could not, it was stated in a note sent Berlin on August 28, "for any advantage offered to Great Britain acquiesce in a settlement which put in jeopardy the independence of a state to whom they have given their guarantee."

As the further correspondence amply shows it was this British insistence on respecting its obligations toward Poland which primarily infuriated Hitler. "He kept saying," said Sir Nevile Henderson in reporting an interview with the Fuehrer on August 29, "that he wanted British friendship more than anything in the world, but he could not sacrifice Germany's vital interests therefor, and that for His Majesty's government to make a bargain over such a matter was an unendurable proposition."

The documentary evidence thus gives strong support to Sir Nevile Henderson's observation, in this week's White Paper, that one of Hitler's cardinal blunders was "his complete failure to understand the inherent British sense of morality."

The observation, put that way, sounds rather smug. But undoubtedly it does much to clarify the fundamental issue at stake now that Great Britain and Germany are locked in a death struggle. The "inherent British sense of morality" has not always been strong enough to direct British policy. But it has, on the whole, operated consistently in behalf of democracy, of justice and of individual freedom. If Great Britain should go under, a great progressive force would be lost to the world.

A sense of morality is certainly no less inherent among the Germans as individuals than it is among the English. But it has never proved very effective in directing the course of German statecraft. And, under the Nazis, the suppression of the individual moral sense has become almost a matter of state policy.

That is why Nazi Germany, foiled in its ambition to make an alliance with Great Britain at Polish expense, could overnight swing round to an alliance of similar character with Soviet Russia, so long denounced by Hitler as a "subhuman force."

And that is why Chamberlain could reasonably address to Germany words which Hitler could not possibly put in reverse for the English—that "in this war we are not fighting against you, the German people, for whom we have no bitter feeling, but against a tyrannous and forsworn regime which has betrayed not only its own people but the whole of western civilization and all that you and we hold dear."

Some Price Truths

Addressing a group of financial and industrial leaders in New York, Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of Brookings Institution, warned against the dangers of rapidly rising prices. "The economic goal of the United States at this time," he said, "should be to make a full utilization of our economic resources in expanding production without permitting a general inflation of prices and a destruction of equilibrium in the economic system."

After analyzing certain fundamental factors in the present situation Dr. Moulton concludes that there is no scarcity basis for a great advance in the general level of commodity prices. We have today exceptionally large stocks of most primary agricultural and industrial raw materials, and, barring a few lines, the scale of manufacturing and distributive operations has been far below capacity.

In Dr. Moulton's opinion there is reason to believe, therefore, that price increases in many raw materials, resulting from the buying spurt that began last August, have been greater than warranted by the fundamental demand and supply factors.

Whether buying for inventory purposes will prove to be excessive, however, will depend to a very large extent upon the size of European war demands. Dr. Moulton presents a suggestive analysis of various factors affecting these war demands, stressing the adverse effect upon our producers of raw materials of further advance in raw-material prices. "The sharp rise which has already occurred both in the prices of raw materials and foodstuffs, intensified for foreign purchasers by the relative rise of the dollar, has," he warns, "played directly into the hands of competing areas."

So far, fortunately, the prices of manufactured goods have not risen to any marked extent and Dr. Moulton thinks that "in general the increases in raw-material prices have not been sufficiently great as to offset the gains resulting from increased volume of output." He emphasizes the fact that for an industry which has been operating well below capacity an increase in volume of output means a decline in unit production costs which may offset large increases in direct operating costs.

The moral of Dr. Moulton's discussion is that few really benefit and most people lose as a result of rapidly rising prices that check production by stifling demand. "The only real profits, like the only real wages," he says, "are those which arise from increased production."

This may be an economic truism, but it is also one of those fundamental facts that is apt to be forgotten in periods when speculation is rife and men are inclined to sacrifice solid gains for the hope of sudden windfalls.

Budgetary Prospects

Budgetary prospects are brighter as the result of the current business upturn, which promises to bring with it increased tax revenues.

Until next March the Treasury will still be collecting income taxes based on 1938 incomes. Hence the full effect of better business will not be reflected in Government receipts until the fiscal year 1940-41. But if the amount of the national income should rise to $85,000,000,000 in the near future, as some business forecasters predict, revenue receipts during the coming year might approximate $9,000,000,000—a sum equal to the estimated expenditures of the Government during the current fiscal year.

Assuming, therefore, that outlays for work relief do not rise next year and that no new forms of spending are authorized, there is a real possibility of achieving a balanced budget.

Unfortunately, these fiscal possibilities are none too likely to become realities. Any increases in revenues obtained next year will probably be offset, in part at least, by additional expenditures for national defense. The War Department, for instance, has just completed a plan which is said to call for extraordinary expenditures of about $900,000,000 above regular budget appropriations. And there will doubtless be other requests for funds to meet various emergency needs created by the war in Europe.

Furthermore, any efforts to cut relief appropriations for next year are certain to encounter stiff opposition, as there is no good reason to expect that the current business improvement will absorb all the millions of unemployed eligible for WPA jobs.

Consequently, it would be rash to assume that we are headed toward budgetary balance. And even if such an optimistic prediction were to be realized, we could not count upon the permanence of balance gained by a war-induced business boom.

The restoration of sound fiscal conditions calls for retrenchments in outlays that will permit reductions in excessively high taxes and make it possible to balance the budget at a lower level of both income and outgo.

It's a wonder that fools get along as well as they do, considering the enormous competition they have.

Lindbergh Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Col. Lindbergh's radio speech the other evening was probably the most honest, the least demagogic and the greatest speech on American foreign policy Americans have heard in many a year. The colonel, a man of deep understanding, is doing more good by his radio addresses than he did in flying the Atlantic or in any other aeronautical venture he has entered into.

I feel sure that greater things are in store for the colonel. I should like to see him a Senator, or Secretary of State, or even President.

HENRY STONER.
Washington, Oct. 15.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just why Col. Lindbergh's judgment should be considered any more important than "Wrong Way Corrigan," or any other successful flier, I cannot understand.

He made a marvelous first trip across the Atlantic, of course.

It would not seem to take an astute mind to reason out that—no matter what we may think of the kind of statesmanship England sometimes displays—any legitimate help we may give the Allies at this crucial time is simply protecting our own shores.

This may be called "selling agents of death and destruction," by some, but when forced to combat an unscrupulous and brutal adversary, one is at a disadvantage if one does not make use of the same kind of weapons which he employs. Otherwise, one must outwit him, and the only effort at that game is being made by one little overworked Dies committee.

America was not settled or maintained by "pussy-footers" but by good red-blooded men and women who were not afraid to stand for what they believed right and just before God. MARY BRAND.
Washington, Oct. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Lindbergh says he has the answer to America's neutrality problem—and this is so sudden! What is his background? What is his interest? Why didn't he speak before, and to the proper authorities? What did he do in Russia? In Germany? What did he see there? Did he want to become a British subject, and what happened to the wish? Is anything "rankling" within him concerning his stay in Britain? Did he have anything to do with scaring Britain and France into the Munich surrender? Did he "fall" for Hitler's blandishments and decorations?

Lindbergh did say, "Sell defensive arms." Well, after Memel, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Danzig and Poland (with Belgium, Denmark and Holland as future "pickings") does Lindbergh mean to say that any weapon obtainable by Britain and France is not a defensive weapon?

Frankly, I'm still one of those who feel that we need not and should not get into the war; but I'm getting more and more unneutral in my thinking. I can't get away from thinking what balance of power would mean with a Hitler in control. We might, then, have no use for a Borah. America would, indeed, be isolated. The Hitler navy would literally swarm the seven seas, waving "verboten" flags at every American trading ship. So, why allow our wish and will to remain neutral to black out our knowledge that final victory "over there" is important to us. And, since Britain and France have the only policemen on the beat, why "kick 'em in the shins" so that Adolf "can get away with the loot?" D. D.

Hitler's Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hitler seems anxious for peace. Perhaps he is wondering what the German soldiers think of him. Will they go over the hill with their arms raised crying kamerade as they did in the last war to get away from the brutality, hunger and misery in Germany?

German Toys

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recent news item reports that 1,200 tons of German-made Christmas toys arrived in the United States. The toys were shipped from Hitler's Reich after the outbreak of the war at the very time when the German armies were eradicating defenseless Polish villages.

What brazen cynicism! While busily and ruthlessly engaged in the persecution and extermination of the Jews, the Nazi government is anxious to sell to gullible Americans toys for the celebration of the nativity of one who racially was 100 per cent a Jew. While endeavoring to terrorize into silence every free expression of the Christian church, both Catholic and Protestant, the Nazis are anxious to profit by the celebration of one of the church's major festivals.

The purchase of Christmas toys made in Germany—like the purchase of all German-made goods—strengthens the Nazi government. The profit made on the German Christmas toys sold to American Christian children will help pay for the Gestapo agents who censor all sermons and church teachings in the Reich. It will help to pay for the Nazi spies who terrorize every freedom-loving individual.

The profit from the German Christmas toys will help to pay for the Storm Troopers who guard the concentration camps where prominent Catholic and Protestant ministers are imprisoned for the crime of worshiping God instead of Hitler. The German-made Christmas toys bought by American children will pay for bombs to be dropped by Nazi planes upon innocent women and helpless children. The profit from these German Christmas toys for sale in America may just about pay for the expense of the Nazi mission to Moscow to invite Stalin and his aggressive Society of the Godless to share in the invasion and destruction of Poland.

The Struggle Here

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since public opinion agrees that "neutral" America shall have to preserve her civilization so as to be a guide for the loser and winner of the European war, I think that we Americans should begin to put our house in order. That this is needed cannot be denied by any thinking American. Today, right "over here," we have situations and conditions that are frightful to contemplate.

Past events, in the course of our growth, should be a basis of experience for all of us. We should profit by our past indiscretions and steer clear of the same mistakes. Consequently, our youth, upon whom falls our success or failure, are the most important features in our housecleaning, and the primary tangent to youth betterment is an unbiased education.

This education shall have to be one that keeps the good things now held and discards the bad things now practiced. Education, only part of which goes on in the school room, prepares our youth, well or badly, for the choices generations must make.

The "Juggernauts" have their answers. They have devised an education to warp young and old alike to their goals. What are America's answers? Explorations must begin with major problems. First, a critique of inadequate aims and a resolute facing of democracy's goals. Second, the failure, yours and mine, inherent in the fact of idle youth, jobless, ready timber for demagogues. These things reveal where we must take hold if schools are to measure up to the responsibility we lay upon them.

Criticizes Mr. Moley's Criticism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Like many Americans, I have often questioned with some resentment the propriety of Mr. Raymond Moley's criticisms of President Franklin Roosevelt's first Administration, as contained in a series of articles which appeared recently in the Saturday Evening Post. I think that a letter addressed to the late President Taft by the late Elihu Root on May 15, 1912, offers a standard of propriety as well as loyalty to which Mr. Moley might well aspire.

Philip Jessup, the author of the life of Elihu Root in which the letter appears, reminds us that Mr. Root was thoroughly out of sympathy with Theodore Roosevelt's candidacy for re-election to the Presidency at the time the letter was written:

"When, however, we came to questions as between the two Administrations (Taft's and Theodore Roosevelt's) and questions of Theodore's personal right or wrong conduct during his Administration, and comparisons between his course and yours, the fact cannot be ignored that I was a member of his Administration, bearing the most high confidential relations, cognizant of his acts and the reasons for them, consulted about them, and with a knowledge of them derived from him under the highest obligations of confidence and loyalty. I could not enter upon a discussion of the matters to which I bore such a relation in an adverse attitude towards him without being subject, and I think justly subject, to the charge of betraying confidence and loyalty. Nor could I discuss him personally nor contrast you with him in public discussion without involving the knowledge which I obtained in this way and using against him the qualifications for the discussion which I obtained through his trust in me. I have no question that you are justified in attacking him in your own defense, because he attacked you, but he has not attacked me. He has never said a word so far as I know, certainly in public, regarding me which was not kindly and laudatory. There has been nothing to relieve me from my obligation, and I feel that if I were to take part in a public attack upon his Administration or upon his qualities as exhibited in his public career I should be subject to universal condemnation in which I should be forced myself to join."

Perhaps Mr. Moley's failure to attain Mr. Root's high order of dignity, loyalty and statesmanship is due to that brand of egotism and that degree of frustration so apparent in his articles, which Mr. Root probably could never have felt and certainly would never have displayed.

The Post Impressionist

Not What It Used To Be

It was just a year ago that I was snubbed by 40 WPA laborers. And a shattering experience it was. I am recovering slowly, but I fear something very beautiful has gone out of my life, never to return.

Last fall, during my first trip through the South, we drove past a large company of road workers. As is often the case with road workers, they rested on their picks at our approach and surveyed us solemnly. It was one of my little-girl days, so I grinned and waved a grimy paw in their direction. Just a casual gesture, you understand, but it came from the heart.

The workmen continued to rest on their picks and stare at us solemnly. My smile froze. I made a futile pretense of inspecting my finger nails, then gave it up and covered my confusion with a road map.

That was the first of a long series of rebuffs. All my life I had been waving at road workers, railroad engineers and assorted wayside moppets, and never before had I failed to get a response. "If this is the sunny South, home of hospitality and mint juleps on the house," I mused, "I guess I'll go back to New England, where everyone is repressed, prudish but polite."

So this fall we drove through New England, where an even greater shock awaited me. There, too, the scourge of apathy had struck. Ditch-diggers merely looked the other way when I waved; Fair-bound fellow tourists seemed too preoccupied with their speedometers to return a friendly gesture. But saddest of all were the children we passed along the road. They simply stared in droop-mouthed amazement at the kerchiefed female who flourished her hand in their direction. Obviously the youth of the land no longer looks on the tourist as the symbol of light-hearted, dim-witted adventure he represented in days gone by.

As one who grew up with touring, I indeed must view the situation with alarm. Twenty years ago, when our family piled into the majestic Cole for our annual trek to Vermont, we felt somewhat the trepidation which must have thrilled the Pilgrim fathers as they loaded their luggage on the Mayflower.

Road maps did not exist. The roads themselves sometimes seemed highly mythical. But the knowledge that we had done it before gave us courage, and with courage came a certain bravado. We were heroes in our own eyes, anyway, and possibly in the eyes of envious farm hands who waved encouragingly from their fields.

I well remember one episode from those days. My father had turned us and the Cole over to mother for a brief side trip. At one point the route paralleled a railroad, and on the track was a handcar—a real man-powered handcar, none of your modern motorized jobs. We waved at the men, and the men waved back. The handcar speeded up a little and so did we. The race was on. Suddenly I glanced at the speedometer and cried ecstatically, "Mother, we're going 40 miles an hour!" Mother's foot flashed from the accelerator to the brake. In that hushed tone which we knew meant business, she said, "Never tell your father about this."

Half the fun of touring in those days was to spot a license plate from your own State and hoot vigorously at the car's occupants. Once, on a lonely road in the Green Mountains, we hooted with such vehemence at a Pennsylvania car that the driver came to a full stop. My father applied his brakes, too, perhaps thinking the man wanted to make something of it. Instead, he walked toward us, smiling broadly. "Well, for Pete's sake, if it isn't Jack Wright!" Father shouted incredulously. They hadn't seen each other for years.

Our hand-waving period reached a climax with Dottie. Dottie originally had been part of a cardboard sign advertising motor oil which we had seen propped before many a gasoline station. A buxom blonde, she grinned a broad, perpetual grin and held one arm high in a peculiarly effective wave. We wanted her from the moment we first saw her. Finally father prevailed upon a gas station attendant to give us his edition of Dottie.

With a penknife, we pared away the advertisement and amputated the girl's raised arm at the shoulder. For the rest of the trip, the hours were as minutes. One of us supported Dottie so that her roguish smile was clearly visible through the rear window of the car. The other held the severed arm and waved it slowly back and forth.

The effect on motorists behind us was devastating. Succumbing to Dottie's glamour grin, they would wave back enthusiastically. Then the unreality of the thing would grip them, their flattered smiles faded and they either passed us at dangerously high speed or sought refuge in a service station. (We always hoped it was a service station selling Dottie's brand of motor oil.)

Dottie never would go over today. The camaraderie of the road has been put out of business by the unfair competition of high-powered cars, superhighways and the urge to get places in a hurry. Tourists are no longer the daring Launcelots of 20 years ago; they're just the Quixotic characters who don't travel by air.

The Bigelow Plan

THE PEOPLE of Ohio will vote on two proposed amendments to the Constitution in the election of November 7. The first would provide pensions of $50 a month to each single person over 60 and of $80 a month to each married couple living together.

The second would reduce to 100,000 the number of signatures required for a petition to place proposed constitutional amendments on the ballot and to 50,000 the number of signatures required to submit a proposed law to the voters. At present about 280,000 signatures are necessary to place either an amendment or a proposed law on the ballot, and there are provisions which make it impossible for one city or one region to supply the adequate number of signatures.

Cincinnati Pastor Advocates Proposal

THIS PROPOSED No. 2 amendment would enable advocates of confiscation to obtain sufficient petitioners for any such proposal in poor neighborhoods and if both amendments pass doubtless will be invoked to permit the have-nots to vote for confiscation of property to provide revenue for the pensions. It would tend to dodge the Legislature and submit to a direct vote of the people all proposed laws or repealers.

The sponsor of thes proposals is the Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow, of Cincinnati, a man now in his seventies, who was in some degree responsible for the municipal reform there and served one term in Congress as an independent New Dealer.

His private life has been fraught with tragedy, and as a churchman in Cincinnati he long ago parted company with his denomination and carried on as an independent, preaching charity and human kindness to a nonsectarian congregation a little more intellectual than the average.

His Pension Plan Signed By 250,000

HE WAS a follower of Tom Johnson and preached at his funeral and in the World War was abducted into Kentucky and tarred and feathered, possibly for his pacifism but, in his own belief, for harassing the public utilities. His personal following may not be large, but his pension proposal received almost 250,000 signatures even under the existing restrictions which require that the sentiment shall represent area rather than local concentration.

Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the author of the revolving pensions scheme to provide $50 a week to each senior citizen by a national transaction tax, has denounced the Bigelow plan as economically unworkable under the capitalistic system.

He has said that it will doom business and therein, for once, finds himself in agreement with the businessmen and the middle class of Ohio. Nevertheless, the Townsend following is devoted to the Bigelow plan as something that will do for a substitute until the Townsend plan becomes a beautiful reality.

Bigelow once was a Townsend man himself, but couldn't wait.

66% Tax Boost On Real Estate

NATURALLY, there is great alarm in the business community, and the campaign of the opposition probably will bring out an uncommonly large vote, because the scene calls for a State income tax as well as a boost of 66 2/3 per cent in the taxes on all land worth $20,000 an acre or more.

This might raise the taxes on homes in the city and suburban neighborhoods. Nobody knows exactly whether the amendment means just land or land and the improvements, and the home-owning citizen doesn't trust his luck. His 50-foo' front with his mortgaged home, considered with its surroundings, might be subject to this raise because the amendment lays the tax on land whose value exceeds "the rate of" $20,000 an acre.

The pension amendment is a sloppy piece of writing. It would pension all Ohio citizens over 60 who are retired from gainful occupations "as wage earners," and that is being interpreted as an exclusion, probably unintentional but nevertheless effective, of farmers, housewives and some others

Might Live Apart For Bigger Pension

AND THE SHOCKING possibility has been discovered that elderly couples entitled to only $80 might feel compelled to live apart to qualify for the rate of $50 each, a net gain of $20 a month, for the assistance of their indigent or tired offspring. Mother and father love of the young ones being what it is, that possibility of brave, tragic sacrifice must be weighed.

There is one screaming clause in the pension amendment, however, which outshrills all the rest of it in the present campaign, as dear to the heart of the eligibles as it is poisonous to the opposition. That one requires that these pensions, amounting, at a rough estimate, to $300,000,000 a year, about twice the present State budget, would become the first obligation of the State.

This would leave no money for any other function of the Government and, in fact, would require new, high taxes, as yet not even invented, to augment the present and proposed taxes to the level of the pension fund itself.

The old people would get it all, and still new revenues would be needed even beyond Bigelow's income and land taxes to reward for the achievement of living 60 years.

Roosevelt Bans Submarines From American Ports, Seas

merchant vessels from the ports and waters of the United States, the proclamation applies only to the undersea craft.

The Canal Zone is exempted from the proclamation because special regulations regarding passage through the canal already are in effect.

Submarines violating the proclamation, it was said unofficially, could be interned and the neutrality law provides a term of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine for any person convicted of a violation, which presumably would apply to the commander of the craft.

The proclamation was issued, the President said, because he found that the restrictions "will serve to maintain peace between the United States and foreign states, to protect the commercial interests of the United States and its citizens, and to promote the security of the United States."

A proposal that belligerent submarines and other warcraft be barred from all ports of the 21 American republics was before the recent Panama conference of foreign ministers of the American nations, but action was left to the individual governments.

However, the conference did call for establishment of a "safety belt" around all the American republics in which the nations at war should engage in no belligerent activity.

By the President of the United States of America,

A Proclamation

Whereas Section 8 of the joint resolution approved August 31, 1935, as amended by the joint resolution approved May 1, 1937 (50 Stat. 127; U. S. C., Sup. iv, Title 22, Sec. 245E), provides:

"Whenever, during any war in which the United States is neutral, the President shall find that special restrictions placed on the use of the ports and territorial waters of the United States by the submarines or armed merchant vessels of a foreign state will serve to maintain peace between the United States and foreign states, or to protect the commercial interests of the United States, and its citizens, or to promote the security of the United States, and shall make proclamation thereof, it shall thereafter be unlawful for any such submarine or armed merchant vessel to enter a port or territorial waters of the United States or to depart therefrom, except under such conditions and subject to such limitations as the President may prescribe. Whenever, in his judgment, the conditions which have caused him to issue his proclamation have ceased to exist, he shall revoke his proclamation and the provisions of this section shall thereupon cease to apply."

Finds Restrictions Needed

Whereas there exists a state of war between Germany and France; Poland; and the United Kingdom, India, Australia, Canada, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa;

Whereas the United States of America is neutral in such war;

Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, acting under and by virtue of the authority vested in me by the foregoing provision of section 8 of the joint resolution approved August 31, 1935, as amended by the joint resolution approved May 1, 1937, do by this proclamation find that special restrictions placed on the use of the ports and territorial waters of the United States, exclusive of the Canal Zone, by the submarines of a foreign belligerent state, both commercial submarines and submarines which are ships of war, will serve to maintain peace between the United States and foreign states, to protect the commercial interests of the United States and its citizens, and to promote the security of the United States;

Must Come to Surface

And I do further declare that it shall hereafter be unlawful for any submarine of France, Germany, Poland, or the United Kingdom, India, Australia, Canada, New Zealand, or the Union of South Africa, to enter ports or territorial waters of the United States, exclusive of the Canal Zone, except submarines of the said belligerent states which are forced into such ports or territorial waters of the United States by force majeure; and in such cases of force majeure, only when such submarines enter ports or territorial waters of the United States while running on the surface with conning tower and superstructure above water and flying the flags of the foreign belligerent states of which they are vessels. Such submarines may depart from ports or territorial waters of the United States only while running on the surface with conning tower and superstructure above water and flying the flags of the foreign belligerent states of which they are vessels.

And I do hereby enjoin upon all officers of the United States charged with the execution of the laws thereof the utmost diligence in preventing violations of the said joint resolution, and this my proclamation issued thereunder, and in bringing to trial and punishment any offenders against the same.

This proclamation shall continue in full force and effect unless and until modified, revoked or otherwise terminated, pursuant to law.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State.

G. O. P. Senators Form Sidelines Club for 1940

A dozen Republican Senators who have not been mentioned as 1940 Presidential possibilities began having a little fun yesterday at the expense of six Republican colleagues who may compete for the nomination.

Senator Reed (Republican), Kansas, as spokesman for the dozen, announced formation of the "Republican Senatorial Neutrality Club."

The members pledged strict impartiality and also agreed to "accept any and all entertainment offered by any" of the Presidential aspirants, providing this entertainment was "not contrary to the Constitution or the ordinances of the District of Columbia."

The "rules" of the new group were sent to Senators Vandenberg (Michigan), Taft (Ohio), Bridges (New Hampshire), Capper (Kansas), McNary (Oregon), and Nye (North Dakota).

Neutrality Viewpoints

Confused Thoughts

LETTERS that come to the writer of this column, and scores of evidences that come to everyone, show that America is thinking, universally and earnestly, about this war. Their primary thought is about one phase of it—what America ought to do. ("What America ought to do" includes, of course, what America ought not to do.) Their thinking is sincere and disinterested. Yet in many cases it arrives at confusion.

There is a device that can help our thinking. It is not a device that will lead always to one conclusion—the fact is there is more than one tenable conclusion. But this device will help toward, so to speak, sorting out the possible conclusions. It will help toward avoiding confusion.

The device is, in every argument, to oneself or with another, take one point of view in the beginning and keep it to the end. That rule is more often broken than kept. In the letters this column receives, and also in many public statements from high sources, there is a frequent characteristic. The writer or speaker starts out with a point of view. One frequent starting point is that America's course about this war should be based solely on America's own self-interest. So long as this one point of view is kept, the argument is clear, it marches toward a logical conclusion.

U. S. Self-Interest Is Soundest Basis

BUT, AFTER a few paragraphs, an extraneous thought occurs to the arguer, a different viewpoint. Starting with a viewpoint strictly limited to America's self-interest, it occurs to the arguer that the Versailles Treaty was very wrong and that Germany is justified in discarding it; or that Britain during her career as an empire has on occasion seized territory by force; or that Germany has been a ruthless nation; or what-not. And once the arguer gets his mind on any second point of view, he is off the track and rarely gets back on the rails.

America's self-interest is of course a sound viewpoint to take and keep. True, that very term admits more than one definition. Who can be sure just what is America's best self-interest. What seems America's self-interest today may not seem, five years from now, to have been its best self-interest.

Among possible definitions of America's self-interest, "choose one. Choose, if you wish, the view that America's highest self-interest is to keep out of the war. But again, "keep out of the war" admits more than one definition. Let us say we mean that America shall never send a conscripted army abroad. That view is held by a vast majority of Americans. This fact, that practically all Americans feel this way, is itself a reason for taking and keeping this viewpoint. Even those who think we ought, in some contingency, to send a drafted army abroad, must admit that the very unpopularity of such a step is a reason for not taking it.

Help For Allies But Not Man Power

THAT AMERICA shall never send a conscripted army abroad is a kind of irreducible minimum. Short of that, any one can say, if he feels that way, that America ought to help the Allies by other means.

In any event, for clarity of thinking, take and keep the viewpoint of America's self-interest. Let us say that by that test alone we will judge every proposed policy or action. Our thinking, even if we keep to that one objective, will still not be easy. Measuring all proposals by that one yardstick will still involve frequent difficulty of judgment. But keeping that one viewpoint is a long step toward clarity.

Many start with this objective, but get involved with others. One could make a long list of viewpoints that intrude themselves most frequently in Senate speeches and radio addresses. These other viewpoints are possible, and some are tenable. All that is suggested here is that, merely for the sake of clarity, all other viewpoints be regarded as secondary to the main one, the self-interest of America.

Other Possible Viewpoints Cited

AMONG OTHER viewpoints are those which say:

That this is merely a struggle between rival ambitions of empire and that America should not favor one more than another.

That this is a fight between democracy and dictatorship and that America should help the democracies.

That the German immigration that came to America a generation or more ago is one of the very best strains of our population and that therefore we should be sympathetic to Germany.

That America inherited its language, its system of law, and practically all its traditions and culture from Britain and therefore we should help Britain.

That for several centuries Britain oppressed Ireland and therefore we should take no interest in Britain's fate.

That the Nazis have oppressed Jews and that therefore we should be against Germany.

That Britain and France did not repay the money they borrowed from our Government in the Great War, therefore we should give them no help now.

What is said here should not be understood as finding fault with the current discussion of neutrality. On the contrary, in the judgment of the writer of this column, the Senate debate on this issue has been as illuminating and adequate as any that ever took place in that body.

Today And Tomorrow — By Walter Lippmann

Lindbergh's Speech Called Disturber Of Canadian Relations

THERE IS NO subject which it is more important to study carefully, none about which it is more necessary to think clearly and speak responsibly, than the relations between Canada and the United States.

Canada is our immediate neighbor across the longest unarmed frontier in the world. Canada is a small country with 10,000,000 inhabitants, as against our own 130,000,000. The Canadian people have essentially the same culture, the same system of law, the same political philosophy as the people of the United States, and their economic life is closely interwoven with our own.

Canadians are a free, self-governing, independent nation, allied with, but in no sense of the word subject to, the British government in the United Kingdom. They are not a British colony; their allegiance to the British crown comes from no compulsion that Great Britain can exert, but from their own deliberate choice and free consent.

3,000-Mile Frontier Long Unfortified

FOR MORE THAN a hundred years we have enjoyed the best possible relations with Canada; our common frontier, 3,000 miles long, is unfortified. Never at any time has this country had designs against Canada; never at any time has Canada seriously felt itself threatened by the United States. The fact that Canada is a part of the British commonwealth has preserved the Canadian people against that feeling of inferiority, with its attendant fears and suspicions, that weak nations have in regard to powerful neighbors. The fears and suspicions that are so strong elsewhere in this hemisphere have been almost nonexistent in Canada.

We, on the other hand, had learned to recognize that the connection between Canada and Great Britain, plus the unfortified frontier, constituted an absolute guarantee of peace between the British Empire and ourselves. With Canada providing an unmistakable pledge of British good behavior, no one in his senses could look upon the British possessions in this hemisphere as even a potential and theoretical menace to our own country.

In the past weeks our relations with Canada and with the rest of this hemisphere have been disturbed much more seriously than appears on the surface, more dangerously than most people in this country have yet realized. There has been Col. Lindbergh's speech which, though this may not have been his intention, seems to say that Canada should disassociate herself from Great Britain and accept the United States as her guide, mentor, protector and suzerain. There has been the very crude speech of Senator Lundeen proposing that we undertake armed aggression against British and French colonial possessions. The people of this country may think these speeches are isolationist and neutral, and evidently the pacifist organizations who are circulating some of them are under this illusion. But everywhere else in this hemisphere and in the rest of the world these speeches will be taken as a manifestation of American imperialism.

Imperialistic Talks Will Haunt U. S.

IT WILL BE hard for this country to live down those speeches: they will be remembered long after the people of this country have hoped they are forgotten. For the weak who live next to the strong have long memories: they are disposed to fear the strong, and when they have been threatened as the British people in this hemisphere have just been threatened they tend to believe what their weakness has already prepared them to suspect.

This suspicion will haunt us, and it will poison in a degree that it will not be easy for us to remedy the whole effort of this country to achieve a solidarity of peace and order in the Western Hemisphere. For let us have no illusions whatever about it. We are immeasurably the stronger power in this hemisphere, and the other peoples will never willingly accept our protection if they have reason to suspect that they must submit to our domination. How are they to know whether Col. Lindbergh's remarks are the unconsidered opinions of an inexperienced young man or whether they express the sentiments of a party which may win the next election? But surely they will in their hearts suspect the worst, especially since the rest of Col. Lindbergh's speech agrees so perfectly with the proposals of an important faction of his party.

For these reasons we cannot dismiss the matter from our minds as a deplorable incident about which the least said the better.

WALTER LIPPMANN

The suspicion which has been planted in the relations of this hemisphere can be eradicated only by full and free discussion which will clarify our true relationship to Canada, and to the British commonwealth, and to the British colonial possession, and to all the Latin nations who are within the scope of the Monroe Doctrine.

It would have been better if these great questions, could have been discussed in a quieter time, in an atmosphere free of the hysteria of war. But we have no choice: against the spread of such imperialist ideas in this country and the repercussions among all our neighbors in this hemisphere, it is necessary now to erect a barrier of true and sound and responsible opinion.

Now More Solidly Bound to Britain

THAT WILL TAKE time and much serious thought. But we must begin, I submit, by recognizing as one of the great circumstances of our life, the fact that our nearest neighbor is a member of the British commonwealth of nations. We may like or dislike this historic fact: we cannot change it. Indeed, were we to follow Col. Lindbergh by proposing that Canada separate from the British commonwealth, we should instantly provide the Canadian people with the invincible reason why they must never separate from the British commonwealth. For if Canada separated because we asked her to separate, Canada would become in fact, even if not in name, a protectorate of the United States. Being a nation of 10,000,000 to our 130,000,000, the position of Canada would be like that of Cuba.

It follows that Canada will remain a member of the British commonwealth, ever more solidly a member in so far as opinions like those of Col. Lindbergh and Senator Lundeen are believed to be current in the United States.

We have then to recognize, I submit, that whatever the result of the war in Europe, Canada is destined to become a great, interior stronghold of the British system.

Once, Canada was a colonial outpost of the Empire; then, it became a self-governing dominion; latterly, it has been an independent nation allied with the other British nations. Tomorrow, it will be an inner citadel, perhaps the inner citadel, of the British world. For since the British Isles are no longer invulnerable to attack by sea and by air, since Canada has grown in industrial maturity, Canada will almost certainly be developed as a vital strategic base of the British power.

This will be one of the great changes of modern history. The change is proceeding rapidly under the pressure of the war, which demonstrates the vulnerability of the British Isles, and under the influence of such measures as the arms embargo, which demonstrate the danger to Britain of her dependence upon uncertain supplies from this country. Indeed, if the arms embargo is retained, the very existence of Great Britain may depend upon the development of Canadian industry.

Canada to Become Strategic Base

WE MUST LOOK forward, therefore, to seeing Canada become a strategic base rather than a mere distant outpost of Britain. Then, obviously, the wise conduct of our relations with Canada will become the paramount question in our foreign policy.

That question will not be disposed of, in fact it will be made totally insoluble, if we follow Col. Lindbergh and challenge Canada's right and her interest as a member of the British commonwealth. Such a challenge must inevitably be interpreted as a threat to Canadian independence and as a threat of imperialism from the United States. Such a challenge can engender only the invincible suspicion of a weaker people against its stronger neighbor.

That is a dangerously bad atmosphere to create for the discussion of the great problem which is now arising because Britain and the United States are becoming so much more closely neighbors than they have ever been before. It is a problem, a momentous problem, perhaps in its consequences our greatest problem. It is delicate, difficult, and complex, and if there is any statesmanship in us, let us not begin by poisoning the atmosphere with suspicions like those which have made so tragically difficult an understanding across the political frontiers of Europe.

Changed Canada Must be Faced

LET US INSTEAD recognize clearly, let us ponder calmly, let us discuss in a cool and generous spirit, the fact—the great historic fact—that in our own time, now before our eyes, our northern land frontier is becoming a frontier 3,000 miles long between the United States and a Canada which is destined to be one of the main citadels of the British power.

A fact of that kind shapes the destiny of nations. For when a vital center of the British power is on one side of that frontier and the center of our own power is on this side of it, then for weal or for woe the fundamental policies of the two countries will be weighted with immeasurable consequences. For their policies will have either to remain parallel and reciprocal, or to become divergent and antagonistic.

This is the great question which is now already visible on the horizon, and the whole capacity of both nations for sober thought and responsible speech and statesmanlike conduct will be needed to answer that question rightfully.

Roosevelt Advised Oil Is on Tap for Any Emergency

By the Associated Press

Members of the seven-State interstate oil compact commission advised President Roosevelt yesterday that all the oil needed "under any emergency" could be provided merely by "opening the valves."

The President received a report on progress being made in conservation and proration of oil production from E. O. Thompson, member of the Texas railroad commission and chairman of the compact commission, and W. J. Holloway, of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma's representative.

Thompson said they reported there was now a reserve of 17,500,000,000 barrels of oil, compared with 5,500,000,000 in 1925 and that the reserves were being increased.

He expressed the opinion that the various States were doing "an adequate job" of controlling oil production and that there was no need for Federal regulation. He said the President "seemed pleased that the States were doing a good job."

57,500 Idle, C. I. O. Claims Auto Lockout

Chrysler Officials Say 'Slowdown' Makes Production Impossible

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Oct. 18.—Thousands of C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers stayed off their jobs in Chrysler Corporation's big Dodge plant today, but:

"It's not a strike; it's a lockout," Richard T. Frankensteen, regional director of the union, said tonight.

The new complication in the fight over production speed, now in its thirteenth day with 57,500 men idle here and in Evansville, Ind., developed as the State labor board pressed both sides to hasten a settlement.

The corporation, accusing the union of a planned "slow-down" making proper production impossible, has been sending men home every day since October 6. Today unionists did not enter the Dodge plant.

A corporation spokesman reiterated that the Dodge plant, in suburban Hamtramck, and other units were being kept open but that "union members have made it impossible to maintain production."

Because of the tie-up of this key plant, nearly all other Chrysler units here and two plants of the Briggs Manufacturing Co. have been shut down.

Chrysler and Briggs plants at Evansville, Ind., closed at noon today because of a shortage of materials from Detroit, and 2,500 workers became idle. This brought the total to 57,500.

David T. Roadley and Edward C. McDonald, Federal labor conciliators, will be present at the meetings in Lansing.

Pickets appeared around the Dodge plant today for the first time since the dispute started. Police were placed in 12-hour shifts. Picketing was orderly, however.

Quit Party Offices, U.S. Attorneys Told

tee of any political party organization or political club, to state whether or not you have resigned therefrom and the date of such resignation."

Murphy announced that he had instructed Department officials that no ruling should be made "for the time being" which might be construed as curtailing the application of the Hatch act.

This applies, he said, "to the situation in the District" and to persons receiving relief through Works Progress Administration jobs. The announcement raised a question as to whether the Department would issue its projected order exempting employes of the District Government from the act.

Murphy said it might be that a sound interpretation of the act would exempt District employes and WPA workers.

"It seems to me, however," he said, "that the Department should do nothing except encourage enforcement of the act."

Representative Hook, Michigan Democrat, has invited violation of the act and has threatened to test its constitutionality, but Murphy declared:

"I think the law will stand up."

He said department attorneys under his direction, had made studies with a view to drawing amendments to extend application of the law for proposal in case President Roosevelt asks for them. The department likewise will be in a position to work with Senator Hatch, New Mexico Democrat and author of the act, in drafting any proposals for extension which Hatch may desire.

Murphy said he knew of no plans to seek an amendment to the act permitting Government employes residing in nearby Maryland and Virginia to hold local elective offices in those States. The President, in his message to Congress at the time he signed the Hatch act, suggested such an amendment.

An anomaly of the Hatch act is that it prohibits solicitation of funds from WPA workers, but does not specifically bar them from political activity. Federal officers and employes, on the other hand, can make contributions, but are barred from political activity.

Fast Machines Back Britain's Thin Red Line

Small Mechanized Army Faces Vastly Superior Numbers

By Drew Middleton.

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, Oct. 17 delayed—passed by field censor).—The new British field army, moving into front line positions beside its French allies, is composed of highly mobile forces organized primarily for defensive warfare against German foes who apparently outnumber them.

A week's tour of artillery, tanks and airdromes has revealed little that is spectacular, much that indicates realistic preparation to repulse a strong attack—an attack that may come at any hour during the next three weeks.

Tools and personnel are fit to attack as well as defend. But there is evidence in all the officers, from Commander in Chief Lord Gort down, of a desire to conserve men and machines and to stick to defensive tactics.

The chief surprise to observers is the absence of masses of men. The front line is strongly garrisoned, but the troops are almost invisible. A large percentage of them are employed in communications and in artillery well back of the line.

How well the British army, officially placed at 158,000 men, compares with the opposing German forces no one knows. The German strength in 1917 was 64 divisions. Neutral observers believe that last summer the Germans mustered between 55 and 60 and that 25 divisions, or 250,000 men, may be on this front.

The British are holding a short line with an apparently numerically inferior force, but in firing power reconnaissance and artillery are believed to equal or better the enemy.

The front is well trapped for tanks and with all sorts of obstacles. Blockhouses are considered tankproof.

The Bren machine gun is the present pride of the army. Its fire power and mobility are proudly pointed out by officers. Brens are brought to the front on fast caterpillar carriers and ammunition is moved the same way. Men and materiel apparently couldn't be better.

Soviet-Chinese Military Pact Seen in Making

Russian Mission at Chungking; Deserted By West, Chiang Says

By the United Press

Shanghai (Thursday), Oct. 19.—Reports reached neutral diplomats here today that a large Russian delegation arrived at Chungking from Moscow yesterday and that rumors are circulating in the nationalist capital that China and Russia shortly may sign a military alliance.

The Russian group includes two generals and a number of military experts. Chinese were reported to have said that nominally the Russians will be styled "advisers" to China for the present but that actually they will discuss far-reaching agreements with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Nationalist representatives here have been hinting for days that important Russo-Chinese negotiations were imminent.

Russia Only Recourse

They said Britain and France have refused further aid to China, because of their preoccupation with the European war, that the United States has offered no "effective assistance," and that Chiang has no choice but to turn to Moscow.

It was reported last month that Chou En-Lai, representative of the Chinese Communist Party in Chungking, had flown to Moscow.

Unconfirmed reports also were received that Russia had sent large bodies of troops into Sinkiang (Chinese Turkestan).

(London heard reports some days ago that French representatives informally had advised Chiang to make peace with Japan and that Britain presumably had supported the feeler.

(In Paris the newspaper L'Intransigeant reported yesterday that a renewal of the old Anglo-Japanese alliance is believed imminent. This statement followed an address by Sir Stafford Cripps, a Labor party leader, in London on October 10 in which he warned renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance was to be expected.)

Blow at Wang

Chiang is said to feel he must make some sensational move to forestall the Japanese plan to launch a new central government for China next month under the leadership of former Chinese Premier Wang Ching-Wei, who has been gaining adherents daily. It is agreed that his regime, if and when it is launched, will be able to present a formidable obstacle to the Chungking regime.

Feeling he can expect no help from Europe or the United States, Chiang finally has yielded to his pro-Russian advisers, headed by Sun Fo, Mme. Sun Yat-Sen, and representatives of the Communist Party, and has agreed to negotiate with Moscow. In the negotiations, it was believed, Chiang will demand major Russian military assistance while Moscow will ask for a free hand in Sinkiang and other parts of northwest China.

Indicative of an impending Russian move, all Russian consular and diplomatic establishments in Japanese-controlled areas of China were closed last week.

Diplomats also received reports that Russo-Japanese border delimitation negotiations on the frontier between Russia's outer Mongolian protectorate and Japan's Manchukuoan dependency have broken down.

These negotiations were started after the "cease fighting" agreement between Russia and Japan in Moscow, which ended the bloody clashes between forces of the two powers, on the Manchu-Mongol frontier.

Both sides were reported to have increased their border garrisons again this week.

British White Paper Disappoints Gandhi

Wardha, India, Oct. 18 (AP).—Mohandas K. Gandhi described as "profoundly disappointing" today a white paper in which India's viceroy forecast British willingness to discuss dominion status for India after the war.

He said the declaration "shows clearly that there will be no democracy for India if Britain can prevent it."

Soviets Erased Foes in Poland, Paris Hears

Landlords, Intellectuals Shot, Officers Hunted Down in Marshes

By Sonia Tomara

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Paris, Oct. 18.—Information received here in Russian and Polish circles has brought light on the fate of eastern Poland, fallen under Soviet rule.

Carefully checked and filtered from any propaganda elements, this information should dispel any belief that the Soviet regime has changed in 22 years. What has happened in Poland appears to be an exact repetition of what happened in Russia after the revolution except that the change of regime in Poland was more sudden and therefore more ruthless.

The class of landowners, of Polish intellectuals and particularly of Polish officers, was wiped out in two weeks. Many were shot and many were taken into Russia. The same thing happened to priests, while hundreds of churches were closed.

Welcomed by the Poor

Much land has been distributed to peasants, although the poorest among them, who live in White Russia, did not profit much by the reform because there were few big estates in that region. The occupation of eastern Poland by the Russians seems to have found an enthusiastic welcome among the majority of the poor population who hated the Poles. The reforms have pursued two purposes—to install the Soviet regime and to get rid of the Poles who occupied a dominant position.

Knowing they were doomed if they fell into Russian hands, the Polish officers fought desperately in the Pripet marches. The Polish staff had equipped a small fleet of nine gunboats to defend Pinsk. According to Soviet reports the sailors deserted the boats, swimming across the marshes and leaving the officers alone.

A manhunt has been going on there in the last two weeks and some officers have been found living in semianimal state, clad in rags and half demented.

Punishment was administered to them by their former subordinates and the Soviet press does not conceal that in most cases this punishment was death.

Russian Hears of Spies

Copyright by New York Times.

Moscow, Oct. 18.—Moscow is receiving reports of the presence of Polish "spies and agents provocateurs" in the former Polish parts of the Ukraine and White Russia.

Unless these persons are acting on behalf of Germany it is difficult to imagine to whom they convey their reports or who else can be directing their alleged counter-revolutionary activities. It would seem more probable that these persons are supporters of the former Polish anti-Soviet regime and are fugitives trying to escape detection.

Several stories of such alleged spies and agents provocateurs are told by a correspondent of the army newspaper, Red Star. He gives the statement of a tailor in Lwow who caused the arrest of a former agent of the Polish political police who had joined the Red Guards.

"Priests, monks and nuns also engaged in subversive activities during the fighting, when the Red army marched in. No few priests were caught using machine guns."

WOMEN IN YOUR "40's" NEED NOT LOSE PHYSICAL CHARM AND ATTRACTIVENESS

Important medical tests now explain WHY for over half a century Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been helping weak, rundown, nervous women

GET NEW ENERGY!

Are you one of those women who dreads "middle age"—who has suddenly lost all pep and enthusiasm—who has let yourself become nervous, moody and depressed? Are you letting life, youthful vitality and the power to attract slip through your fingers. If so—

Snap out of it! Life can be just as glamorous to you now as to your younger friends. Many women grow even more physically attractive as the years roll by. So why shouldn't you?

Just get more fresh air and sleep. See your doctor if necessary. And in case you need a reliable "woman's" tonic—try famous Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made especially for women.

Medical Tests Prove Merit!

Recent medical tests under the strictest laboratory and clinical supervision have proved beyond doubt that Pinkham's Compound is a MOST EFFECTIVE "woman's" tonic—and here's WHY—Pinkham's Compound stimulates gastric juices to aid better digestion and assimilation of your food so that it is more easily changed into rich red blood to nourish your glands, tissues, nerves and muscles. This builds up physical resistance and thus helps calm upset nerves, lessen female functional distress and give you MORE ENERGY and PEP to really enjoy life.

Important!

And if you ever foolishly thought Pinkham's Compound just an old-fashioned proprietary medicine—listen to this! Over 60 years ago Pinkham's was the same as a formula prescribed by many doctors all over the country. Medical science progressed and so did Pinkham's Compound. Improvements have been steadily made—the latest being the addition of important Vitamin B_1. Today Pinkham's Compound ranks as one of the best "woman's" tonics you can buy.

So in case you need a good reliable builder-upper—don't delay—telephone your druggist right NOW for a bottle. Results should delight you!

Glazing Cost $4,300 More Than 1937-38; Senior Guidance Plan Approved

Renewed efforts to check vandalism in the schools and an expanded program of guidance to help senior high school students "find themselves" were among the matters set in motion yesterday at the meeting of the Board of Education.

Superintendent Frank W. Ballou reported that damage to windows brought an increase of $4,300 in the cost of glazing in 1938-39 over the previous year and that ten schools were broken into between July 1 and October 16, of this year.

Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, board member, put forward a proposal that signs be hoisted on the exteriors of buildings to point out that "this school building is provided at the expense of taxpayers" and with additional wording to encourage community respect.

The board referred the matter to Dr. Ballou for consultation with other school officials after Charles D. Drayton, board member, proposed that manual training classes make metal placques to serve for these signs.

Cost Rose to $16,000

Robert A. Maurer, board member, pointed out that all the damage should not be considered "vandalism," but that some of it was inevitable "the more we use buildings." The cost of glazing rose to approximately $16,000 in 1938-39.

Rock Creek Citizens Association, in a letter to the board, expressed "unanimous opposition" to disbanding the schools for tubercular children and to any change in the "present regime." The letter referred to the proposal, which the board now has under consideration, for transferring tubercular children with arrested cases from the Health School to regular classes, and for the remodeling of that school to accommodate crippled children from the Langdon School. This matter will be among the discussions at the meeting of the advisory committee on handicapped children, at 8 p. m. Friday, at the Franklin School Building.

The board yesterday voted to ask the District Commissioners to request the Bureau of the Budget to make a survey of the custodial employes and service in the schools. From time to time the school system has asked for an increase in the number of custodians, and this survey will be intended to establish whether such a need exists.

Senior Guidance Approved

An expended program of guidance for senior high school students in the choice of studies, of a career and in personal adjustments will be furthered by a plan which the board approved on recommendation of school officials.

Although funds are not yet available for a director to head the guidance program, the plan takes advantage of existing facilities. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent in charge of senior high schools in divisions 1-9, and G. C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent in charge of senior high schools in divisions 10-13, will coordinate the program. An advisory committee will be appointed in addition to guidance committees in the various schools.

Dr. Ballou reported that a majority of the teachers had voted against their new rating sheet in trial use during the last year. In a recent poll, 1,873 teachers voted "no;" 1,045 voted "yes," with 200 not voting. Some of the teachers have expressed objections to the new system as being too complicated. In the new sheet, teachers' self-improvement and activities outside classroom are given more consideration.

Playground Plans Asked

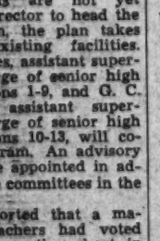
The board approved Dr. Ballou's proposal that he meet with the committee on the preparation of the rating sheet to see whether further revision can be made by January 1 to put it into effect by the end of the school year.

Lewis R. Barrett, co-ordinator of recreation for the District, who attended the meeting, was asked by Maurer to keep the board informed on any moves to provide expanded playground facilities for children in areas north and northwest of the Capitol, where, Maurer said, the needs were great.

The board put on record the opinion of Corporation Counsel Seal that employers' liability insurance is not required for students in the vocational schools who work in the school cafeteria as a part of their school work.

McGuire, Justice Aide, Considered For D.C. Judgeship

Attorney General Murphy said yesterday that Matthew F. McGuire, special assistant Attorney General, was being considered for the District Supreme Court judgeship vacancy caused by the death of Justice Joseph W. Cox.

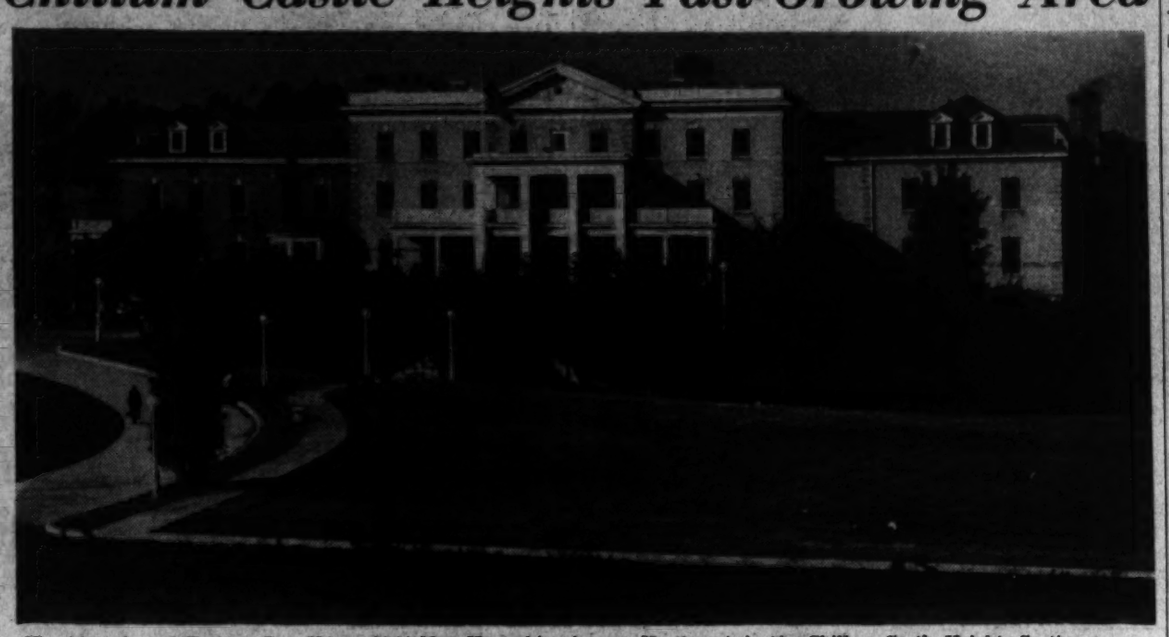


McGUIRE

McGuire is the department's patronage official, and his job entails investigation and report on prospective candidates for judgeships. Murphy said, however, that he was only one of about 25 lawyers, including several local attorneys, under consideration for the place.

Our Town:

Chillum Castle Heights Fast-Growing Area



The Masonic and Eastern Star Home, 6000 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, in the Chillum Castle Heights Section

By Christine Sadler

For evidence of what happens when one of the District's "paper streets" is opened up, get on New Hampshire avenue and drive into Maryland, noticing particularly the area above Concord avenue.

On both sides of the new thoroughfare—which represents a 20-year struggle by groups of citizens—new houses and rows of houses are going up. The section of the city in the Chillum Castle Heights vicinity, around Lamond, and the fringes of Takoma Park are getting new citizens at the rate of more than 500 families annually.

In the "new" section around Fort Totten Park, the increase is probably greater in proportion, thanks to improvements in Rock Creek Church road and some paving on North Capitol street.

Streets First in Needs

It is obvious why David W. Gabelein, of 5419 North Capitol street, president of the Chillum Castle Heights Citizens Association, puts streets first on the list of community needs.

"North Capitol street should be paved from Blair road to Farragut," he said. "We can't get our trees until we get the curbing and so our neighborhood in some places looks bare. Kansas avenue north of Kennedy street needs opening up, and Eastern avenue should be cut through. South Dakota avenue is now being opened from Riggs road to Brookland avenue and a block of Eastern from New Hampshire to Queen's Chapel road is under construction.

"We need an outlet to the east very badly. The overpass at Bates road and Taylor street is going to help a lot."

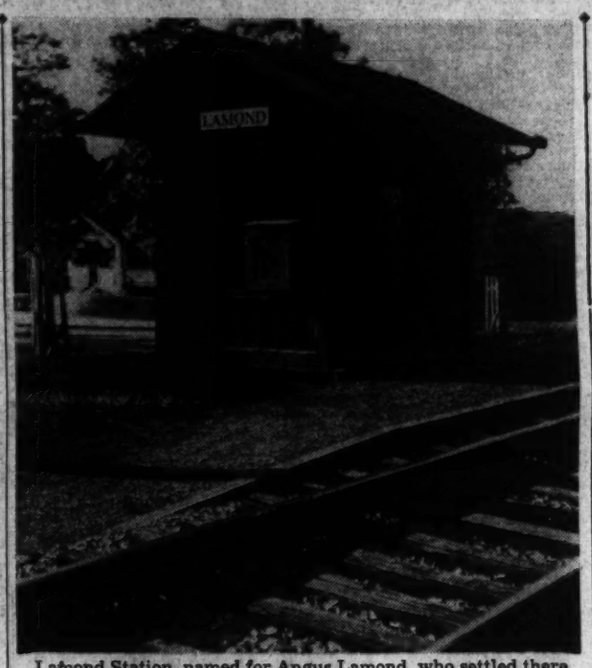
"Five Minutes From Town"

Depending on the railroad for transportation for many years and shut off from downtown by lack of thoroughfares, the section developed with roads running in every direction. Today it is only "five minutes from town," but the first suburbanites to settle there were "out in the country."

Chillum Castle Heights—and older residents insist on the "Castle"—took its name from Chillum Castle Manor, old estate of William Dudley Digges, whose broad acres covered most of the vicinity—but who actually lived almost 2 miles across the line in Maryland. Digges is the man who opened his home to L'Enfant after he "was thrown out of Washington." In fact, the impoverished planner of Washington died there and was buried in the Digges garden until fame caught up with him and he was reburied in Arlington.



Lamond Station, named for Angus Lamond, who settled there to open the terra cotta plant now in operation

Important to the development of the whole area was the arrival in 1876 of Mr. and Mrs. Angus Lamond, whose children and grandchildren are active in so many present-day District activities. Lamond, a Scot, settled there to open a terra cotta plant, which is still in operation and is now owned by Mrs. Lillian S. Lamond, wife of his son, B. Bruce Lamond.

Through the friendship of Lamond and Andrew Carnegie, the Takoma Park area got one of the first good libraries of the Carnegie era. Through the work of his wife, Mrs. Ancena Lamond, the Masonic and Eastern Star Home at 6000 New Hampshire avenue was assured. Mrs. Lamond was instrumental in getting Mrs. Sarah Main Seek to give ten acres of land for the home, and was its president for 21 years.

Mrs. White Recalls Early Era

Mrs. Mary Lamond White, their daughter, who lives at 110 Kennedy street on part of the land purchased by her father, was the first woman to be elected president of the Takoma Park Citizens Association, in which she is still an active member. Another honor came to her when she was elected a "vestryman" of historic St. Paul's Church, in Rock Creek Parish—an office she still holds.

She recalled yesterday that her father awakened one morning to find a railway station on his property with "Lamond" on it. The railroad company had brought it down from Takoma Park, making his place into a real train stop. The little station is still on the B. & O. tracks near Underwood street—and can still be used as a flag stop.

In the large basement recreation room at Mrs. White's home are enough valuable and interesting historical pieces to stock a good sized museum. Six generations of Lamond teapots and a chest of priceless homespun coverlids are among them.

"We never had a fire and my mother was a great collector," is the way she explained them. Her husband was a descendant of Capt. James White, one of the first Maryland settlers—so it may be that helps some, too. History seems to run in both sides of the family.

"When father moved out here, his place was in sight of seven Civil War forts," she said. "Two of the headquarters offices still were standing. Mrs. Mary Bladen's home is one of the oldest out here, and the old Hagen home adjoins industrial property on Rittenhouse street. And then there's the old O'Hare house on North Capitol street.

Langley Early Builder

"Judge Woodford D. Harlan bought a large tract out here several years ago. Dr. Ford Thompson was one of our neighbors, and B. H. Warner and Charles J. Bell were among the early comers."

Charles A. Langley, who was president of the Chillum Castle Heights Citizens for 34 years—and even while it was called the Woodburn Association—moved to Chillum in 1890. He is probably the best known of Washington's older builders of fine residences. His own home, at 5925 Blair road, reached up a long lane, is three doors from the first house he built in the area. He contracted for 10 acres and built the first home for his friend, Albert Dane. Later he bought back 3 acres for his own plot.

On a large map of the suburb he yesterday showed how the opening through of proposed streets is going to take more than 1½ acres from his plot. "I am for civic improvement, but that does seem to be a lot. The Government owns acres here adjoining me and they will become a playground. The Fort drive is going to cut through our property somewhere, too. We don't know just where," he said.

Mr. Langley led a long fight to keep New Hampshire avenue from being deflected from the straight line along which it was later cut. Thomas W. Joy, also a former president of the association, helped with the fight and is credited with securing the good bus service of which the section now boasts. Cyrus T. Bright and Frank Joy are other names to which the citizens refer when talking of development of the area.

Tomorrow—St. Paul's Church, in Rock Creek Parish, started 20 years before George Washington was born.

Southwest Citizens Urge Expansion of Police Force

Expansion of the Metropolitan Police Department sufficient to create an "adequate" force last night was urged by the Southwest Citizens Association.

Pointing out that 125 recent appointees still left the force inadequate to cope with traffic and crime conditions, members recommended the increase in number of patrolmen long sought by Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown.

Harry S. Wender was re-elected president. Others named to office were: Robert Marshall, vice president; Mrs. Bessie Parrish, recording secretary; Joseph Schneider, corresponding secretary; Raymond Robinson, treasurer; J. Byrd Cantrell, sergeant-at-arms, Wender and Harry V. Porter, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The association authorized President Wender to appoint a committee to study sites for the penal wharf, now located on Maine avenue.

16th Street Highlands

William E. Stoutameyer was re-elected president of the Sixteenth Street Highlands Citizens Association last night. Other officers named were George M. Gooch, first vice president; Haviland Hobbs, second vice president; Miss Mildred Green, secretary; J. T. Guilfoyle, treasurer, and Dr. A. H. Richwine and Dr. J. P. Turner, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Members requested the elimination of parking on the south side of Kennedy street between Fourteenth and Sixteenth streets. Indorsement of the National Guard recruiting campaign also was given. A speaker from the Community Chest was heard, urging cooperation in the campaign for funds.

Chevy Chase

A Halloween party for 3,000 children living in Chevy Chase, D. C., was planned last night by the Chevy Chase Citizens Association. The Woodrow Wilson High School and the E. V. Brown elementary school auditoriums will be used on Halloween eve, following last year's precedent.

Meeting in the Brown School auditorium, the association also admitted 192 members, indorsed David Pine for District Judge, and elected J. H. Heiser, 5540 Nevada avenue northwest, editor of its new publication, the Chevy Chase Citizen.

H. H. Goebel, of the National Rifle Association, addressed the organization, after which a resolution was adopted urging the school board to complete the rifle range at Woodrow Wilson High.

Following up recommendations, the association went on record as favoring one-side parking on Military road, reducing the length of Connecticut avenue bus stops, and making Jocelyn street a one-way thoroughfare east of Connecticut avenue.

A. F. L. Joins In Building Trust Drive

Federation Offers To Help Murphy Purge 'Bad' Elements From Trade Unions

Attorney General Murphy revealed yesterday that he is working with "certain Americ... Federation of Labor leaders" who were anxious to co-operate to end anti-trust law violations in the building industry so far as building trades unions are concerned.

These leaders, he said, will call at the Justice Department today for a conference with him on the action that they can take toward cleaning house. Aside from saying they were leaders in the building trades unions, Murphy did not reveal their identity.

Murphy's announcement indicated the organization of a group within the A. F. of L. to combat "types engaged in violating the law." The Justice Department's antitrust drive in the building trades industry was bitterly assailed at the A. F. of L. convention in Cincinnati this month.

Calls Indictments "Pioneering"

Indictment of officers of a local teamsters' union for engaging in a jurisdictional dispute, meanwhile, Murphy said, is a kind of pioneering undertaking which has good possibilities if handled properly and may be extended to other fields.

Indictments recently were handed down by the local grand jury against five officers and local 639 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, charging conspiracy to tie up building here. The trouble grew out of a dispute with the Operating Engineers' Union on jurisdiction over drivers of concrete mixers.

Murphy announced that evidence would be presented to the local grand jury covering other activities in the building industry here adjudged to be in violation of the antitrust laws. This will be done immediately, he declared.

He said he had been informed by Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general in charge of anti-trust enforcement, that the building industry drive definitely had held down building prices.

Drive Nation-wide

He pointed out that the drive was being laid down simultaneously all over the country. Aside from Washington, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, San Francisco and St. Louis, he declared, grand jury investigations will be started in six or seven other cities.

Due to building industry costs, Murphy declared, about half the people of the country cannot afford to buy or rent new houses. The costs are holding up prosperity in the building industry, he said, and acting as a brake on general prosperity.

Price-fixing and practices in restraint of trade by manufacturers, contractors, sub-contractors and labor unions will be prosecuted, he declared. With regard to the latter, he said, there is some evidence of graft, although not much.

Murphy emphasized that the department was not cracking down on labor union practices that had anything to do with their collective bargaining functions.

Md. U. Sophs 'Scalp' Defiant Frosh Prexy

ALBERT RUPPERSBERGER,

Albert Ruppersberger, freshman class president at the University of Maryland, who made so bold as to defy sophomore class supremacy, yesterday was sporting a type of haircut popularly known among American Indian tribes as a "scalplock."

The haircut, he said, was administered by a sophomore vigilance committee, which objected to a statement he had published in the student paper, the Diamondback. The freshman president suggested that the wearing of "rat" hats, traditional upperclass regulation imposed on freshmen students, be ignored.

After leaving only a tuft of hair on top of his head, Ruppersberger said the sophomores—and there were a lot of them, he declared—forced him to go swimming in the chilly waters of Paint Branch.

Roll Call Ends Today, 51,732 Short

Headquarters to Stay Open Until Nov. 1 in Attempt To Reach 125,000

The annual Red Cross Roll Call will close today with 51,732 enrollments necessary to reach the campaign's goal of 125,000. In an effort to reach the mark, headquarters will remain open until November 1.

Pointing out that a total of 95,000 memberships had been reported in the final day of last year's campaign, and three days later 101,450, General Chairman Edgar Morris declared last night:

"Every man and woman in Washington should be a member of the Red Cross. If you have not already joined you have that opportunity today. Take a few minutes, give a dollar. Your dollars alone make possible hundreds of thousands of hours of service performed by trained Red Cross volunteers in alleviating human distress, preventing loss of life from accident, and teaching preservation of health and safety in the home and community."

The Treasury Department yesterday took the lead among Government units in the roll call, according to Admiral Ray Spear, Government chairman. Treasury units, under the direction of Chief Clerk F. A. Bergfeld, replaced the Department of Agriculture as the leader.

In the window display contest, the exhibit of the John S. Jacobsen florist shop was honored as the most dramatic. The window of Woodward & Lothrop was judged the most beautiful, and that of Hahn's shoe store at Seventh and K streets northwest the most original. Honorable mention awards were given Hecht Co. and Gude Brothers.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Cohan, in 'Madam, Will You Walk,' Here Nov. 20; Germany May Protest 'Margin for Error'; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THIS COLUMN'S recent lament that the Playwrights' Company seemingly had forgotten its enthusiasm over Washington as a desirable spot in which to exhibit its new productions prior to their New York openings apparently was a shade premature, just as the New York Herald-Tribune's declaration—recanted the following Sunday—that the Playwrights would open none of their new plays at the National this season, and probably would delete the Capital completely from its itineraries, was ill-founded.

BELL

Yesterday's good news, relayed to this department from Victor Samrock, general manager of the Playwrights' Company, by Manager Edmund Plohn of the National, was that George M. Cohan will be seen on E street the week of November 20, in the late Sidney Howard's last completed play, "Madam, Will You Walk?," production of which has been under the supervision of Robert E. Sherwood, close friend and business associate of the author.

The Howard play is reported to be a whimsical comedy in which its star will be seen in a role remotely comparable with the one in which he appeared in his own "Pigeons and People," on the same stage several seasons ago.

This happy booking of the posthumous production of a brilliant playwright's last work by a distinguished producing company keeps the National's new season bookings unbroken through Thanksgiving week. Next week will view the metropolitan premiere of the new Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein 2d musical comedy—their first collaboration in something like seven years—after three preliminary out-of-town performances. "Very Warm for May," dealing with the vagaries of the "straw hat" theater, is a Max Gordon production, boasting what is declared to be one of Kern's most tuneful scores. After that will come "Leave It to Me," with William Gaxton, Victor Moore and Sophie Tucker; Laurette Taylor and Florence Reed in "Outward Bound," and then Ethel Barrymore in "Farm of Three Echoes."

Those booking sheets do not fill up too rapidly, but the important thing is that they do fill up.

And speaking of "Very Warm for May," the new Kern-Hammerstein opus will have both its stage and radio premieres next Monday night. At almost the precise moment that the curtain will be rising at the National, a medley of tunes from the production will be heard over C. B. S. as a feature of "Tune Up Time." To make sure the music is played exactly as its composer would have it, a telephone line will be kept open between Andre Kostelanetz, maestro of the C. B. S. revue in Hollywood, and Mr. Kern, in the Capital, during the entire radio show rehearsal. Kern will listen in, offering suggestions, when, as and if necessary.

The German authorities seem to coincide with this typewriter's view that the outbreak of war in Europe has not dulled the significance of Clare Boothe's new mystery romance to American audiences. It is being bruited about, as the saying goes, that "Margin For Error," now at the National, may be made the subject of an official protest by the German Embassy. This action, it is being pointed out by the grapevine, would not be taken until the proper members of the embassy staff had seen the play and passed personal judgment upon its possible affront to their country and Fuehrer. It was rather expected yesterday afternoon that last night would be the occasion of the official appraisal of Miss Boothe's acerbity. Whether it was or not is not known as this is written at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

The three-day policy of combination stage and screen attractions that has been pursued these past few weeks by Managing Director Charlie Olive at the Atlas Theater, 1331 H street northeast, has been so successful that it will be extended to cover the full week, beginning in November. Pat Rooney, John Steel and Hoot Gibson are among the recent stage stars who have convinced Mr. Olive that he is right.

There is a motion-picture technician out in Hollywood who is the daddy of them all, in a manner of speaking, when it comes to achieving montage effects on the screen that are considerably better than anyone else seems able to manage. His name is Slavko Vorkapich—no kidding—and he it is who was responsible for the kaleidoscopic views of Washington that do so much to make Frank Capra's production of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" the first picture in history that ever made the National Capital look like the National Capital on the silver sheet. He has caught up in a quick succession of flashes everything in town that the resident Washintonian ought to know all about—and usually doesn't.

Which gets around by magnificent indirection to the question of when is a "world premiere" really a world premiere. "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" was given its Hollywood preview—comparable to the National Press Club's in Constitution Hall Tuesday night—many days ago. It has been viewed, I believe, by a selective New York audience and opens today at the Radio City Music Hall. Its first public presentation here will be at the Earle Theater tomorrow. It will be reviewed on this page Saturday morning, after the cash customers have had a turn at it. The only problem facing the Earle Theater management would seem to be how to get all of the cash customers in without breaking down the walls of their opera house.

Following the letter from Herbert Wilcox, noted British film producer, quoted in this space yesterday, comes this wire:

"Anna Neagle will star in, I will produce and direct, screen version for RKO-Radio of the noted New York musical comedy, 'Irene.' Picture starts at RKO's Hollywood studios early in November and will be the first modern film in which Miss Neagle has appeared in the past five years. As you know, Government officials have suggested I remain here until my services are needed in England. This advice and flood of kindly letters from critics, exhibitors and fans who saw 'Nurse Edith Cavell' prompted decision to star Miss Neagle in 'Irene' at this time. The play's greatest song hit, 'Alice Blue Gown,' will be retained in picture. Original composers, Harry Tierney and Joseph McCarthy, also have written new music for screen production. Alice Duer Miller is writing the screen adaptation."

Mr. Wilcox seems to be the week's most prolific source of happy tidings.

That eminent cymbal-whanger, John Montague, here doing a little missionary work on behalf of "Leave It to Me," coming to the National the week of October 30, is practically agog and a half over the reception accorded the Gaxton-Moore-Tucker musical in Philadelphia, which has more or less been dying on its feet, theatrically, these past many months. Even the staid old city hall was festooned with electric lights emblazoning the importance of the attraction and acclaiming Vinton Freedley, the producer and one of the Quaker City's home-town boys. A standing-room audience r'ared up on its legs and cheered the piece Monday night.

Incidentally, the mail-order demand for seats at the National is such as to hint at a new box-office record when "Leave It to Me" gets here. That's hinting pretty far ahead, but, after all, a hint is a hint no matter when it catches up with you.

So today, Dick Powell arrives to be Arkansased by his fellow Statemen and Ann Rutherford comes to town to be feted by the Loew executives at the Shoreham this evening as a preliminary to her week of personal appearances at the Capitol, beginning tomorrow. That amiable buffoon, Lew Parker, will emcee the stage bill of which Miss Rutherford will be the star.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 18.

WHILE JO DAVIDSON, the sculptor, was doing a head of Albert Einstein, the scientist kept watching Davidson while he worked . . . "Tell me, Mr. Davidson," asked Einstein, "do you understand people as well as you see them?" . . . "I'm afraid that's a tall order," the sculptor confessed. "I sense them—like a dog" . . . "You know, Mr. Davidson," replied Einstein, "I'm rather like that, too—only I'm so often wrong."

THE DIES COMMITTEE is interested in the National Lawyers Guild—because of Earl Browder's declaration that it is one of the "transmission belts." The story will break soon . . . Sid Grauman, the Hollywood theater operator, is negotiating for the purchase of Adolf Zukor's 1,000-acre estate in New City. With government aid he expects to transform it into a new realty development.

HARRY BRANDT, who issued that famous "poison-at-the-box-office" blast against Hollywood stars, will make his first trip to the film colony next month. He will investigate conditions there in behalf of the Independent Theater Owners Association.

REINOLD NEIBUHR, professor at Union Theological Seminary, is one of the three great American philosophers who have been awarded the Gifford lectureship at Edinburgh . . . The other two were John Dewey and William James . . . He took his wife and children to Scotland with him, and when the war rumors began he was undecided as to whether he should return to America.

PROF. NEIBUHR was informed that during the last war the lectures continued, undisturbed, and so he sent his family back to America and remained in Edinburgh. "Because," he explained his determination to remain in the city which was bombed, "I'll be damned if I'll upset the precedent."

HARPO MARX will play the role of Banjo in the Woollcott road company of "The Man Who Came to Dinner"—the No. 1 exhibit in New York's Fun Parade . . . The song used in that show was written by Kaufman & Hart, with the assistance of Cole Porter . . . A representative of the Dies Committee will broadcast on the "Town Meeting of the Air" next month. Pietro di Donato, author of "Christ in Concrete," will appear on the same program.

KATHARINE HEPBURN will take a one-week vacation from "Philadelphia Story" the week before Christmas . . . Princeton's Triangle Club is negotiating for the Casa Manana, to house its annual show here. The plans are to present a dinner, musical comedy and then cabaret—all in one evening.

Arch Selwyn, the producer, has returned to Manhattan after a long stay in Hollywood. He met George White last night and confessed his relief at what the doctors told him—that his absentmindedness was nothing to worry about and that it was due to the lethargy-inducing California weather . . . "It's wonderful now," Selwyn beamed. "Manhattan fixed it. I'm no longer forgetful. I'll see you after the show" . . . "It's a date," White agreed. "Now, remember" . . . "I don't forget anything any more," Selwyn assured, walked out of the room—and forgot his overcoat.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 18 (IN).—Mickey Rooney trains East tomorrow to Dearborn, Mich., where he will study the exhibits at the Thomas A. Edison Foundation, personally collected by Henry Ford. This v. is being made so that Mickey will get into the spirit of Edison's biography, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's contribution to the fiftieth anniversary of his kinetoscope invention, which made motion pictures possible.

LOUELLA PARSONS

So far as I know, when Spencer Tracy and Mickey face the cameras in "The Life of Thomas Edison" early next month it will be the first time the same picture has been filmed under two directors with two stars. While Mickey as the boy Edison is being directed by Norman Taurog, Spencer Tracy will be playing the Wizard of Menlo Park under the guidance of Victor Fleming. Young Gene Reynolds goes into Mickey's version as Frank Allen, Edison's boyhood friend. When completed, the biography will run in two parts, one telling the life of the boy and the other the life of the man.

Tennis Champ Alice Marble, who has been warbling at the Lamaze for the past two weeks, has checked out as a night club entertainer. She takes a brief rest and then starts extensive singing and acting tests at M-G-M. She will also make some tennis action shots in which the casting directors hope to prove to the high moguls that tennis can be exciting on the screen. With Sonja Henie, the ice skating star, and Johnny Weissmuller, the Olympic swimmer, both hits in pictures, there's no reason why Alice, who is a very pretty girl, shouldn't make as big a name on the screen as she has on the tennis courts.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Unconfirmed rumor is that Maureen O'Hara, Charles Laughton's protegee, was secretly married in Ireland the day before she left for America; Bette Davis is in Littleton, N. H. She stepped out of hiding when she read an Edgar Guest poem at a charity luncheon there; Cecelia Parker underwent a serious operation last week and is still a very sick girl; Claire James and Busby Berkley are getting ready to announce the date; Ginger Rogers showed up at the studio with her hair much shorter and very becoming too; It's now Judith Barrett for whom Lin Howard is buying dinner; Barbara Bennett took the three older Downey children to the Cocoanut Grove to hear their dad do his stint and was Morton pleased!

Madeleine Carroll and David Niven, who leaves for England as soon as retakes on "Raffles" are finished, dining tete-a-tete at the Villa Nova; Bill Tilden, tennis champ, greeting old friends at the Brown Derby; Vivien Leigh's picture with Charles Laughton, made in England two years ago, will be released by Para directly after "Gone With the Wind" makes its appearance; Nancy Lyon and Bill Frawley, taking up where they left off a few months ago, stepping out together for the first time in ages; Cesar Romero, after one day in Coronado, was paged to return for a comedy role in "He Married His Wife" at T. C. F.; Bill Fields and Fay Adler making merry at Earl Carroll's.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Season's First Musical Heads Incoming Bills

'Very Warm for May' To Compete With Next Week's Films

"VERY WARM FOR MAY." The first new, Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein, 2d, musical comedy in seven years opens Monday evening at the National prior to its New York engagement. The collaborators of "Show Boat," "Sunny" and "Music in the Air" return under the banner of Max Gordon. Mr. Hammerstein's "book" is said to concern the players of a summer "barn" theater. Noted favorites and established younger players have the leads in a cast that includes Jack Whiting, Eve Arden, Hiram Sherman, Grace McDonald, Donald Brian, Hollace Shaw, Frances Mercer, Royal Beal, John Cherry, Ralph Magalssen, Ray Mayer and Selden Bennett. Vincente Minnelli has designed the settings and costumes and the orchestra will be under the baton of radio's Robert Emmett Dolan. Matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Earle

Capitol

"20,000 MEN A YEAR." Suggested by the surge of new student flyers the country over, this new air film features Randolph Scott, Margaret Lindsay, Preston Foster, Mary Healy, Jane Darwell and Maxie Rosenbloom. It is a Cosmopolitan film and will remain on the Capitol screen six days only, through next Wednesday. Ann Rutherford, the Hollywood ingenue, noted for her Polly Benedict in the Hardy family series, headlines the stage portion of the bill, the supporting feature of which will be Lew Parker and his "Follies of 1939." The dance team of Pritchard and Lord, songstress Gypsy Farmer, accordianist Leon LeFell, the Nathane Brothers and the Rhythm Rockets are others on the stage. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"RIO." Sigrid Gurie and Basil Rathbone costar in this film drama of a crooked French financier whose duplicity is discovered and rewarded with a term in a South American penal colony. His wife and friends set out to save him at Rio, but Miss Gurie, as the wife, falls in love with a young American, played by Robert Cummings. Victor McLaglen and Leo Carillo share top-billing with Rathbone and the young feminine star who scored so definitely in "Algiers." "The Battle Fleets of England," the latest release of "The March of Time," is Keith's supplementary feature. Opens this morning.

Palace

"THE RAINS CAME." Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy and George Brent remain for a second week in the screen adaptation of the Lewis Bromfield best-selling novel. Employing present-day India as its setting and a cataclysmic outburst of nature as its climax, the film was directed by Clarence Brown. Its supporting players include Mary Nash, Maria Ouspenskaya, Brenda Forbes, Henry Travers and Marjorie Rambeau.

Metropolitan

Columbia

"THE WOMEN." A fourth week is in store for this star-studded screen version of the Clare Booth satire on those lilies who toil not nor spin. Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Joan Fontaine, Mary Boland, Paulette Goddard, Phyllis Povah and Hedda Hopper are among those present.

Little

"HEART OF PARIS." Raimu and Michele Morgan have the leading roles in this importation from France. The story relates what happens to a middle-class shopkeeper when he takes his jury duty seriously. Bringing about the acquittal of the pretty defendant, he takes her home only to have the very situation develop for which she had been tried. English subtitles—or the French dialogue.

Belasco

Trans-Lux

"TRAILING THE JAGUAR." The central short subject at the newsreel house for the new week concerns a hunt for the wild beast in the interior of Mexico, with Tex Stone and Dan Brennan as the hunters. Mickey Mouse and his parrot represent Walt Disney in a bill which is predominately devoted to news of the day. Opens tomorrow morning.

Gayety

Open-Air

"GIRLS' SCHOOL." Ann Shirley, Nan Grey and Ralph Bellamy have the leading roles in this story of life in a young ladies' boarding school, which will be the final film at the drive-in auto theater this season. Opens this evening to run through Sunday.

KAY HAMILTON, the "Princess of Swing," will headline the new vaudeville bill opening on Sunday afternoon at the northeast film and variety theater. The Moore Twins, Boris Bonnell and Doris Bay and her company are others on the bill, the screen features of which will be "Stanley and Livingstone" and "Blondie Takes a Vacation."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 18.—Just talked to Bob Montgomery and the story of the days before and after his return from England is more dramatic than any story he's ever played on the screen. The drastic changes war clouds bring upon peaceful citizens was brought forcibly home to the Montgomerys when the entire population of the tiny suburb in which they were living, 90 inhabitants, were asked to arrange billets for 125 London school children, 10 of them to occupy the modest home which Bob had rented.

HOPPER

"The Denham Studio, where I was supposed to make my picture," Bob said, "whittled its staff down from 60 to 12; and now it houses the Bank of England and the stock exchange. The sound stages are food depots. One of the last pictures made in the studio was 'Goodbye, Mr. Chips' and it's ironic because in that picture Mr. Chips went through the ravages of war changes, too!" Bob also revealed that the Pinewood Studio houses the famous firm, Lloyds of London—with the stages there also used as food depots. Noel Coward has given up all thought of writing and producing plays and is an aide to Anthony Eden in the intelligence department. Heather Thatcher, whom we all learned to love, is doing canteen work and even Bob's most conservative friends aren't hoping for a shorter war than three years.

But to get back to the nerve-wracking hours that preceded their dash home, Bob phoned to London for ship reservations and missed obtaining a cabin on the ill-fated Athenia by an hour. He did manage to get a stateroom on a boat with accommodations for his children and their nurse only. A few hours before the ship was scheduled to sail the children boarded the boat alone—their father not being permitted to go aboard.

Worried Bob asked an official if, in case war was declared before the ship sailed, he would be able to take the children off. The official agreed—but by the time news that Germany was marching on Poland became public the ship had sailed with his children and $17,000,000 in English gold, and for 12 days there was no word as to the fate or whereabouts of the ship or the children. Not until the day before Bob and his wife arrived in New York did they receive the comforting news that all was well. When they stepped off the pier Bob said he was never happier to see a news photographer in his life—for the photographer thoughtfully brought along pictures of the Montgomery children he had snapped when they came down the gangplank and stepped on their beloved America.

"Mrs. Montgomery and I were never more relieved. Then suddenly we got another smash—tuning in on a Hollywood commentator we were startled by a sudden announcement—a flash rumoring that the Bob Montgomerys were getting a divorce. Hedda, you're a parent, you know what agony Betty and I went through. We should be used to these rumors, we've had so many of them. What can we do about things like that?" I wasn't able to answer.

HEDDA-LINES: Gene Towne's going around town telling people the new love interest in his life is brunette-tressed Glen Denning . . . When Glenda Farrell returns from the East she'll be the bride of Tom Lewis . . . But the predicted marriage between Dick Arlen and Virginia Grey is shadowed by gray skies inasmuch as Dick has never been divorced from Joby Ralston . . . Barbara Stanwyck has ordered tickets for all the big football games in the East—says she and Bob prefer watching them fight with football helmets instead of tin helmets . . . My whole day was made brighter by learning that Darryl Zanuck had put Mae Marsh back under contract at double her former salary . . . And two days after John Payne cancelled his contract with Warners he started another picture there at double his salary . . . Which items are better than double features . . . When William Dieterle heard that 68-year-old Anna Kraus went from house to house in Chicago and obtained 5,000 signatures on a petition against war he hired her to play herself in a dramatized short on the subject. What makes this a juicy item is the fact that Dieterle is a German . . . Attention Will Hays: When Vincent Price plays in "The Invisible Man Returns" he'll remove all his clothes in full view of the audience! The clothes walk away but Price is invisible—thanks to John Fulton's tricky genius . . . Wonder if Louis Mayer is laying off horses as much as he's laying off actors?

As soon as Ty Power completes Art Arthur and Bob Harari's "The First Kiss," he and Annabella will have Marian McKeen, veteran Celeveland air race speedster, fly them out to their Mazatland . . . The boys around Fox are miffed—they think the "Just Call Me Baby" character played by June Preizer in "Babes in Arms" is a burlesque of Shirley Temple six years from now and I'm hoping Miss Temple will be as good. "Love Laughs at Locksmiths" but Connie Bennett had the last laugh by changing all the locks on her doors before she left for that personal appearance tour . . . That sable-swathed stranger dining at Chasen's Thursday night was the former Mrs. Donald Ogden Stewart with her Russian husband, Count Ilya Tolstoy, a safe place for a Russian these days.

Andrea Leeds hopes that possible retakes on "Swanee River" won't interfere with her honeymoon . . . Here is a typical Hollywood twist: Douglas Kennedy's parents sent him to Harvard to be a doctor, a lawyer, or a man of the arts. Paramount just signed him and of all things, he's their newest singing cowboy! RKO is talking about previewing "That's Right, You're Wrong" in Kay Kyser's home town, Rocky Mount, N. C. . . . I'm getting tired of hearing Howard Hughes called the "Boy Wonder."

If after all the years he's been around he's still a boy they ought to use Orson Welles as a stand-in for Baby Sandy! Did you know our private commercial pilots, automatically in the United States Reserve, have secret mobilization orders in case of emergency?

Richard Greene once a poor relation has written a book about his rise to riches. If it's published the royalties will be turned over to his poor relations . . . Here's one I overheard at a Wilshire beauty parlor: "She's got a bingo figure—filled all along the line!"

Harold Jacobs Acting Head Of Wages and Hours Division

Harold Jacobs got down to cases yesterday after he had been named acting administrator of the wage-hour division of the Labor Department. Jacobs, who has been assistant administrator in charge of information, will hold his new title, it is understood, until Lieut. Col. Philip Fleming assumes full charge of administration

Secretary Perkins Announces Assistant to Andrews, Resigned Administrator, Will Carry On Until Lieut. Col. Fleming Takes Over

Jacobs, who has been assistant wage-hour administrator in charge of information, will hold his new title, it is understood, until Lieut. Col. Philip Fleming assumes the full title of wage-hour administrator.

Fleming was named by President Roosevelt yesterday to succeed Elmer F. Andrews, who resigned.

Fleming is an active army officer and because of military regulations, it is understood that a special Congressional enactment will be necessary to permit his acceptance of the position vacated by Andrews.

Secretary Perkins, in a brief statement, said Jacobs would serve as acting administrator until further notice.

Capt. Wickham Given Command of Quincy

Capt. Williams Carter Wickham yesterday was ordered to command the new cruiser Quincy on duty with the neutrality patrol.

Now assigned to the division of fleet training at the Navy Department, Capt. Wickham is a native of Hanover County, Va. He will relieve Capt. Paul H. Bastedo, former aide to President Roosevelt. The latter's new assignment has not been announced.

Embargo Repeal Seen Within Week

Passage of the neutrality bill by both houses of Congress within a week "would not be surprising," Representative Patrick (Democrat), of Alabama, last night told the Young Democrats Club of Washington at a meeting in the Willard Hotel.

Patrick said he expected the bill by Monday to reach the House, where the opposition, he predicted, would be unable to muster more than 175 votes.

The club adopted a resolution backing cash-and-carry and embargo repeal, as provided in the pending bill.

Cohan, in 'Madam, Will You Walk,' Here Nov. 20; Germany May Protest 'Margin for Error'; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THIS COLUMN'S recent lament that the Playwrights' Company seemingly had forgotten its enthusiasm over Washington as a desirable spot in which to exhibit its new productions prior to their New York openings apparently was a shade premature, just as the New York Herald-Tribune's declaration—recanted the following Sunday—that the Playwrights would open none of their new plays at the National this season, and probably would delete the Capital completely from its itineraries, was ill-founded.

BELL

Yesterday's good news, relayed to this department from Victor Samrock, general manager of the Playwrights' Company, by Manager Edmund Plohn of the National, was that George M. Cohan will be seen on E street the week of November 20, in the late Sidney Howard's last completed play, "Madam, Will You Walk?," production of which has been under the supervision of Robert E. Sherwood, close friend and business associate of the author.

The Howard play is reported to be a whimsical comedy in which its star will be seen in a role remotely comparable with the one in which he appeared in his own "Pigeons and People," on the same stage several seasons ago.

This happy booking of the posthumous production of a brilliant playwright's last work by a distinguished producing company keeps the National's new season bookings unbroken through Thanksgiving week. Next week will view the metropolitan premiere of the new Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein 2d musical comedy—their first collaboration in something like seven years—after three preliminary out-of-town performances. "Very Warm for May," dealing with the vagaries of the "straw hat" theater, is a Max Gordon production, boasting what is declared to be one, of Kern's most tuneful scores. After that, will come "Leave It to Me," with William Gaxton, Victor Moore and Sophie Tucker; Laurette Taylor and Florence Reed in "Outward Bound," and then Ethel Barrymore in "Farm of Three Echoes."

Those booking sheets do not fill up too rapidly, but the important thing is that they do fill up.

And speaking of "Very Warm for May," the new Kern-Hammerstein opus will have both its stage and radio premieres next Monday night. At almost the precise moment that the curtain will be rising at the National, a medley of tunes from the production will be heard over C. B. S. as a feature of "Tune Up Time." To make sure the music is played exactly as its composer would have it, a telephone line will be kept open between Andre Kostelanetz, maestro of the C. B. S. revue in Hollywood, and Mr. Kern, in the Capital, during the entire radio show rehearsal. Kern will listen in, offering suggestions, when, as and if necessary.

The German authorities seem to coincide with this typewriter's view that the outbreak of war in Europe has not dulled the significance of Clare Boothe's new mystery romance to American audiences. It is being bruited about, as the saying goes, that "Margin For Error," now at the National, may be made the subject of an official protest by the German Embassy. This action, it is being pointed out by the grapevine, would not be taken until the proper members of the embassy staff had seen the play and passed personal judgment upon its possible affront to their country and Fuehrer. It was rather expected yesterday afternoon that last night would be the occasion of the official appraisal of Miss Boothe's acerbity. Whether it was or not is not known as this is written at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

The three-day policy of combination stage and screen attractions that has been pursued these past few weeks by Managing Director Charlie Olive at the Atlas Theater, 1331 H street northeast, has been so successful that it will be extended to cover the full week, beginning in November. Pat Rooney, John Steel and Hoot Gibson are among the recent stage stars who have convinced Mr. Olive that he is right.

There is a motion-picture technician out in Hollywood who is the daddy of them all, in a manner of speaking, when it comes to achieving montage effects on the screen that are considerably better than anyone else seems able to manage. His name is Slavko Vorkapich—no kidding—and he it is who was responsible for the kaleidoscopic views of Washington that do so much to make Frank Capra's production of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" the first picture in history that ever made the National Capital look like the National Capital on the silver sheet. He has caught up in a quick succession of flashes everything in town that the resident Washintonian ought to know all about—and usually doesn't.

Which gets around by magnificent indirection to the question of when is a "world premiere" really a world premiere. "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" was given its Hollywood preview—comparable to the National Press Club's in Constitution Hall Tuesday night—many days ago. It has been viewed, I believe, by a selective New York audience and opens today at the Radio City Music Hall. Its first public presentation here will be at the Earle Theater tomorrow. It will be reviewed on this page Saturday morning, after the cash customers have had a turn at it. The only problem facing the Earle Theater management would seem to be how to get all of the cash customers in without breaking down the walls of their opera house.

Following the letter from Herbert Wilcox, noted British film producer, quoted in this space yesterday, comes this wire:

"Anna Neagle will star in, I will produce and direct, screen version for RKO-Radio of the noted New York musical comedy, 'Irene.' Picture starts at RKO's Hollywood studios early in November and will be the first modern film in which Miss Neagle has appeared in the past five years. As you know, Government officials have suggested I remain here until my services are needed in England. This advice and flood of kindly letters from critics, exhibitors and fans who saw 'Nurse Edith Cavell' prompted decision to star Miss Neagle in 'Irene' at this time. The play's greatest song hit, 'Alice Blue Gown,' will be retained in picture. Original composers, Harry Tierney and Joseph McCarthy, also have written new music for screen production. Alice Duer Miller is writing the screen adaptation."

Mr. Wilcox seems to be the week's most prolific source of happy tidings.

That eminent cymbal-whanger, John Montague, here doing a little missionary work on behalf of "Leave It to Me," coming to the National the week of October 30, is practically agog and a half over the reception accorded the Gaxton-Moore-Tucker musical in Philadelphia, which has more or less been dying on its feet, theatrically, these past many months. Even the staid old city hall was festooned with electric lights emblazoning the importance of the attraction and acclaiming Vinton Freedley, the producer and one of the Quaker City's home-town boys. A standing-room audience r'ared up on its legs and cheered the piece Monday night.

Incidentally, the mail-order demand for seats at the National is such as to hint at a new box-office record when "Leave It to Me" gets here. That's hinting pretty far ahead, but, after all, a hint is a hint no matter when it catches up with you.

So today, Dick Powell arrives to be Arkansased by his fellow Statemen and Ann Rutherford comes to town to be feted by the Loew executives at the Shoreham this evening as a preliminary to her week of personal appearances at the Capitol, beginning tomorrow. That amiable buffoon, Lew Parker, will emcee the stage bill of which Miss Rutherford will be the star.

WHILE JO DAVIDSON, the sculptor, was doing a head of Albert Einstein, the scientist kept watching Davidson while he worked . . . "Tell me, Mr. Davidson," asked Einstein, "do you understand people as well as you see them?" . . . "I'm afraid that's a tall order," the sculptor confessed. "I sense them—like a dog" . . . "You know, Mr. Davidson," replied Einstein, "I'm rather like that, too—only I'm so often wrong."

THE DIES COMMITTEE is interested in the National Lawyers Guild—because of Earl Browder's declaration that it is one of the "transmission belts." The story will break soon . . . Sid Grauman, the Hollywood theater operator, is negotiating for the purchase of Adolf Zukor's 1,000-acre estate in New City. With government aid he expects to transform it into a new realty development.

HARRY BRANDT, who issued that famous "poison-at-the-box-office" blast against Hollywood stars, will make his first trip to the film colony next month. He will investigate conditions there in behalf of the Independent Theater Owners Association.

REINOLD NEIBUHR, professor at Union Theological Seminary, is one of the three great American philosophers who have been awarded the Gifford lectureship at Edinburgh . . . The other two were John Dewey and William James . . . He took his wife and children to Scotland with him, and when the war rumors began he was undecided as to whether he should return to America.

PROF. NEIBUHR was informed that during the last war the lectures continued, undisturbed, and so he sent his family back to America and remained in Edinburgh. "Because," he explained his determination to remain in the city which was bombed, "I'll be damned if I'll upset the precedent."

HARPO MARX will play the role of Banjo in the Woollcott road company of "The Man Who Came to Dinner"—the No. 1 exhibit in New York's Fun Parade . . . The song used in that show was written by Kaufman & Hart, with the assistance of Cole Porter . . . A representative of the Dies Committee will broadcast on the "Town Meeting of the Air" next month. Pietro di Donato, author of "Christ in Concrete," will appear on the same program.

KATHARINE HEPBURN will take a one-week vacation from "Philadelphia Story" the week before Christmas . . . Princeton's Triangle Club is negotiating for the Casa Manana, to house its annual show here. The plans are to present a dinner, musical comedy and then cabaret—all in one evening.

Arch Selwyn, the producer, has returned to Manhattan after a long stay in Hollywood. He met George White last night and confessed his relief at what the doctors told him—that his absentmindedness was nothing to worry about and that it was due to the lethargy-inducing California weather . . . "It's wonderful now," Selwyn beamed. "Manhattan fixed it. I'm no longer forgetful. I'll see you after the show" . . . "It's a date," White agreed. "Now, remember" . . . "I don't forget anything any more," Selwyn assured, walked out of the room—and forgot his overcoat.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 18 (IN).—Mickey Rooney trains East tomorrow to Dearborn, Mich., where he will study the exhibits at the Thomas A. Edison Foundation, personally collected by Henry Ford. This visit is being made so that Mickey will get into the spirit of Edison's biography, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's contribution to the fiftieth anniversary of his kinetoscope invention, which made motion pictures possible.

LOUELLA PARSONS

So far as I know, when Spencer Tracy and Mickey face the cameras in "The Life of Thomas Edison" early next month it will be the first time the same picture has been filmed under two directors with two stars. While Mickey as the boy Edison is being directed by Norman Taurog, Spencer Tracy will be playing the Wizard of Menlo Park under the guidance of Victor Fleming. Young Gene Reynolds goes into Mickey's version as Frank Allen, Edison's boyhood friend. When completed, the biography will run in two parts, one telling the life of the boy and the other the life of the man.

Tennis Champ Alice Marble, who has been warbling at the Lamaze for the past two weeks, has checked out as a night club entertainer. She takes a brief rest and then starts extensive singing and acting tests at M-G-M. She will also make some tennis action shots in which the casting directors hope to prove to the high moguls that tennis can be exciting on the screen. With Sonja Henie, the ice skating star, and Johnny Weissmuller, the Olympic swimmer, both hits in pictures, there's no reason why Alice, who is a very pretty girl, shouldn't make as big a name on the screen as she has on the tennis courts.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Unconfirmed rumor is that Maureen O'Hara, Charles Laughton's protegee, was secretly married in Ireland the day before she left for America; Bette Davis is in Littleton, N. H. She stepped out of hiding when she read an Edgar Guest poem at a charity luncheon there; Cecelia Parker underwent a serious operation last week and is still a very sick girl; Claire James and Busby Berkley are getting ready to announce the date; Ginger Rogers showed up at the studio with her hair much shorter and very becoming too; It's now Judith Barrett for whom Lin Howard is buying dinner; Barbara Bennett took the three older Downey children to the Cocoanut Grove to hear their dad do his stint and was Morton pleased!

Madeleine Carroll and David Niven, who leaves for England as soon as retakes on "Raffles" are finished, dining tete-a-tete at the Villa Nova; Bill Tilden, tennis champ, greeting old friends at the Brown Derby; Vivien Leigh's picture with Charles Laughton, made in England two years ago, will be released by Para directly after "Gone With the Wind" makes its appearance; Nancy Lyon and Bill Frawley, taking up where they left off a few months ago, stepping out together for the first time in ages; Cesar Romero, after one day in Coronado, was paged to return for a comedy role in "He Married His Wife" at T. C. F.; Bill Fields and Fay Adler making merry at Earl Carroll's.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Season's First Musical Heads Incoming Bills

'Very Warm for May' To Compete With Next Week's Films

"VERY WARM FOR MAY." The first new, Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein, 2d, musical comedy in seven years opens Monday evening at the National prior to its New York engagement. The collaborators of "Show Boat," "Sunny" and "Music in the Air" return under the banner of Max Gordon. Mr. Hammerstein's "book" is said to concern the players of a summer "barn" theater. Noted favorites and established younger players have the leads in a cast that includes Jack Whiting, Eve Arden, Hiram Sherman, Grace McDonald, Donald Brian, Hollace Shaw, Frances Mercer, Royal Beal, John Cherry, Ralph Magalassen, Ray Mayer and Selden Bennett. Vincente Minnelli has designed the settings and costumes and the orchestra will be under the baton of radio's Robert Emmett Dolan. Matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Earle

Capitol

"20,000 MEN A YEAR." Suggested by the surge of new student flyers the country over, this new air film features Randolph Scott, Margaret Lindsay, Preston Foster, Mary Healy, Jane Darwell and Maxie Rosenbloom. It is a Cosmopolitan film and will remain on the Capitol screen six days only, through next Wednesday. Ann Rutherford, the Hollywood ingenue, noted for her Polly Benedict in the Hardy family series, headlines the stage portion of the bill, the supporting feature of which will be Lew Parker and his "Follies of 1939." The dance team of Pritchard and Lord, songstress Gypsy Farmer, accordianist Leon LeFell, the Nathane Brothers and the Rhythm Rockets are others on the stage. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"RIO." Sigrid Gurie and Basil Rathbone costar in this film drama of a crooked French financier whose duplicity is discovered and rewarded with a term in a South American penal colony. His wife and friends set out to save him at Rio, but Miss Gurie, as the wife, falls in love with a young American, played by Robert Cummings. Victor McLaglen and Leo Carillo share top-billing with Rathbone and the young feminine star who scored so definitely in "Algiers." "The Battle Fleets of England," the latest release of "The March of Time," is Keith's supplementary feature. Opens this morning.

Palace

"THE RAINS CAME." Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy and George Brent remain for a second week in the screen adaptation of the Lewis Bromfield best-selling novel. Employing present-day India as its setting and a cataclysmic outburst of nature as its climax, the film was directed by Clarence Brown. Its supporting players include Mary Nash, Maria Ouspenskaya, Brenda Forbes, Henry Travers and Marjorie Rambeau.

Metropolitan

Columbia

"THE WOMEN." A fourth week is in store for this star-studded screen version of the Clare Booth satire on those lilies who toil not nor spin. Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Joan Fontaine, Mary Boland, Paulette Goddard, Phyllis Povah and Hedda Hopper are among those present.

Little

"HEART OF PARIS." Raimu and Michele Morgan have the leading roles in this importation from France. The story relates what happens to a middle-class shopkeeper when he takes his jury duty seriously. Bringing about the acquittal of the pretty defendant, he takes her home only to have the very situation develop for which she had been tried. English subtitles—or the French dialogue.

Belasco

Trans-Lux

"TRAILING THE JAGUAR." The central short subject at the newsreel house for the new week concerns a hunt for the wild beast in the interior of Mexico, with Tex Stone and Dan Brennan as the hunters. Mickey Mouse and his parrot represent Walt Disney in a bill which is predominately devoted to news of the day. Opens tomorrow morning.

Gayety

Open-Air

"GIRLS' SCHOOL." Ann Shirley, Nan Grey and Ralph Bellamy have the leading roles in this story of life in a young ladies' boarding school, which will be the final film at the drive-in auto theater this season. Opens this evening to run through Sunday.

Atlas

KAY HAMILTON, the "Princess of Swing," will headline the new vaudeville bill opening on Sunday afternoon at the northeast film and variety theater. The Moore Twins, Boris Bonnell and Doris Bay and her company are others on the bill, the screen features of which will be "Stanley and Livingstone" and "Blondie Takes a Vacation."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 18.—Just talked to Bob Montgomery and the story of the days before and after his return from England is more dramatic than any story he's ever played on the screen. The drastic changes war clouds bring upon peaceful citizens was brought forcibly home to the Montgomerys when the entire population of the tiny suburb in which they were living, 90 inhabitants, were asked to arrange billets for 125 London school children, 10 of them to occupy the modest home which Bob had rented.

HOPPER

"The Denham Studio, where I was supposed to make my picture," Bob said, "whittled its staff down from 60 to 12; and now it houses the Bank of England and the stock exchange. The sound stages are food depots. One of the last pictures made in the studio was 'Goodbye, Mr. Chips' and it's ironic because in that picture Mr. Chips went through the ravages of war changes, too!" Bob also revealed that the Pinewood Studio houses the famous firm, Lloyds of London—with the stages there also used as food depots. Noel Coward has given up all thought of writing and producing plays and is an aide to Anthony Eden in the intelligence department. Heather Thatcher, whom we all learned to love, is doing canteen work and even Bob's most conservative friends aren't hoping for a shorter war than three years.

But to get back to the nerve-wracking hours that preceded their dash home, Bob phoned to London for ship reservations and missed obtaining a cabin on the ill-fated Athenia by an hour. He did manage to get a stateroom on a boat with accommodations for his children and their nurse only. A few hours before the ship was scheduled to sail the children boarded the boat alone—their father not being permitted to go aboard.

Worried Bob asked an official if, in case war was declared before the ship sailed, he would be able to take the children off. The official agreed—but by the time news that Germany was marching on Poland became public the ship had sailed with his children and $17,000,000 in English gold, and for 12 days there was no word as to the fate or whereabouts of the ship or the children. Not until the day before Bob and his wife arrived in New York did they receive the comforting news that all was well. When they stepped off the pier Bob said he was never happier to see a news photographer in his life—for the photographer thoughtfully brought along pictures of the Montgomery children he had snapped when they came down the gangplank and stepped on their beloved America.

"Mrs. Montgomery and I were never more relieved. Then suddenly we got another smash—tuning in on a Hollywood commentator we were startled by a sudden announcement—a flash rumoring that the Bob Montgomerys were getting a divorce. Hedda, you're a parent, you know what agony Betty and I went through. We should be used to these rumors, we've had so many of them. What can we do about things like that?" I wasn't able to answer.

HEDDA-LINES: Gene Towne's going around town telling people the new love interest in his life is brunette-tressed Glen Denning . . . When Glenda Farrell returns from the East she'll be the bride of Tom Lewis . . . But the predicted marriage between Dick Arlen and Virginia Grey is shadowed by gray skies inasmuch as Dick has never been divorced from Joby Ralston . . . Barbara Stanwyck has ordered tickets for all the big football games in the East—says she and Bob prefer watching them fight with football helmets instead of tin helmets . . . My whole day was made brighter by learning that Darryl Zanuck had put Mae Marsh back under contract at double her former salary . . . And two days after John Payne cancelled his contract with Warners he started another picture there at double his salary . . . Which items are better than double features . . . When William Dieterle heard that 68-year-old Anna Kraus went from house to house in Chicago and obtained 5,000 signatures on a petition against war he hired her to play herself in a dramatized short on the subject. What makes this a juicy item is the fact that Dieterle is a German . . . Attention Will Hays: When Vincent Price plays in "The Invisible Man Returns" he'll remove all his clothes in full view of the audience! The clothes walk away but Price is invisible—thanks to John Fulton's tricky genius . . . Wonder if Louis Mayer is laying off horses as much as he's laying off actors?

As soon as Ty Power completes Art Arthur and Bob Harari's "The First Kiss," he and Annabella will have Marian McKeen, veteran Celeveland air race speedster, fly them out to their Mazatland . . . The boys around Fox are miffed—they think the "Just Call Me Baby" character played by June Preiser in "Babes in Arms" is a burlesque of Shirley Temple six years from now and I'm hoping Miss Temple will be as good. "Love Laughs at Locksmiths" but Connie Bennett had the last laugh by changing all the locks on her doors before she left for that personal appearance tour . . . That sable-swathed stranger dining at Chasen's Thursday night was the former Mrs. Donald Ogden Stewart with her Russian husband, Count Ilya Tolstoy, a safe place for a Russian these days.

Andrea Leeds hopes that possible retakes on "Swanee River" won't interfere with her honeymoon . . . Here is a typical Hollywood twist: Douglas Kennedy's parents sent him to Harvard to be a doctor, a lawyer, or a man of the arts. Paramount just signed him and of all things, he's their newest singing cowboy! RKO is talking about previewing "That's Right, You're Wrong" in Kay Kyser's home town, Rocky Mount, N. C. . . . I'm getting tired of hearing Howard Hughes called the "Boy Wonder."

If after all the years he's been around he's still a boy they ought to use Orson Welles as a stand-in for Baby Sandy! Did you know our private commercial pilots, automatically in the United States Reserve, have secret mobilization orders in case of emergency?

Richard Greene once a poor relation has written a book about his rise to riches. If it's published the royalties will be turned over to his poor relations . . . Here's one I overheard at a Wilshire beauty parlor: "She's got a bingo figure—filled all along the line!"

Harold Jacobs got down to cases yesterday after he had been named acting administrator of the wage-hour division of the Labor Department. Jacobs, who has been assistant administrator in charge of information, will hold his new title, it is understood, until Lieut. Col. Philip Fleming assumes full charge of administration

Secretary Perkins Announces Assistant to Andrews, Resigned Administrator, Will Carry On Until Lieut. Col. Fleming Takes Over

Jacobs, who has been assistant wage-hour administrator in charge of information, will hold his new title, it is understood, until Lieut. Col. Philip Fleming assumes the full title of wage-hour administrator.

Fleming was named by President Roosevelt yesterday to succeed Elmer F. Andrews, who resigned.

Fleming is an active army officer and because of military regulations, it is understood that a special Congressional enactment will be necessary to permit his acceptance of the position vacated by Andrews.

Secretary Perkins, in a brief statement, said Jacobs would serve as acting administrator until further notice.

Capt. Wickham Given Command of Quincy

Now assigned to the division of fleet training at the Navy Department, Capt. Wickham is a native of Hanover County, Va. He will relieve Capt. Paul H. Bastedo, former aide to President Roosevelt. The latter's new assignment has not been announced.

Embargo Repeal Seen Within Week

Passage of the neutrality bill by both houses of Congress within a week "would not be surprising," Representative Patrick (Democrat), of Alabama, last night told the Young Democrats Club of Washington at a meeting in the Willard Hotel.

Patrick said he expected the bill by Monday to reach the House, where the opposition, he predicted, would be unable to muster more than 175 votes.

The club adopted a resolution backing cash-and-carry and embargo repeal, as provided in the pending bill.

Liquor, Tobacco Said to Affect The Vision

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Does tobacco or does spirtuous liquor affect eyesight?

Yes. The commonest form is called toxic amblyopia. The sensation is of a veil, mist, fog or haziness of vision. It is in the direct vision and occurs most frequently in the morning. It usually affects one eye and is most alarming to the victim. Not only tobacco and alcohol, but many drugs produce it—75 are listed. The optic nerv is affected in most instances. Abstinence fron. the use of the drug—alcohol or tobacco in most cases—results in a prompt cure. Cheap whiskey and cheap cigarettes are most likely to produce it. Chain-smokers, especially women, are frequently affected. In treatment, besides discontinuance of the habit, the use of concentrated vitamin B is valuable.

What is the ketogenic diet, and what is it used for?

The ketogenic diet is a diet high in fats. It is used mostly in epilepsy. It is not universally successful. The average results are 25 per cent good, 12 per cent improved, 40 per cent failures, and in the rest the patients will not stay on the diet. But it is always worth trying in spite of the small percentage of successes.

The diet is also used in migraine, sick headache, asthma, infections of the kidney and to protect the liver.

Breakfast: tomato juice, ½ cup; soybean-bran muffin, ½ muffin; fried egg, 1 egg; fat bacon (crisp), 7 slices, 2 inches by 3 inches; butter, 1 square—1 1-3-inch thick; cream (whipping), ½ cup, scant; coffee (no sugar), sweetened with saccharin.

Luncheon: broiled or fried steak, 2 ounces; "3 per cent" vegetable, ½ cup cooked spinach, head lettuce; mayonnaise dressing, 1 tablespoonful soybean-bran muffin, ½ muffin; butter, use on muffin, steak and spinach; cream (whipping), ½ cup; cocoa, use 50 gm. of the cream, sweeten with ½ grain of saccharin.

Dinner: cream (whipping), ½ cup; tomato, make cream of tomato soup by using 50 gm. cream and adding seasoning; boiled ham (fat), 2 slices; "3 per cent" vegetable, ½ cup cabbage; mayonnaise dressing, 1 tablespoonful; soybean-bran muffin, ½ muffin; butter, 1 ounce; coffee, sweeten with saccharin.

Will you please tell me some suggestions to combat sleeplessness?

Answer—I have a book in which a number of eminent as well as ordinary human beings have given their own methods of inducing sleep. The methods vary widely from the old sheep counting system to composing a poem. The sheep counting and poetry reciting depend upon inducing sleep by a sort of hypnosis by repetition of the same visual or intellectual image. The common bar to sleeplessness is the dread of it. The body is naturally adapted to sleep and in my experience, if one will lie back and relax the muscles all over it will come without any artificial aid.

Twinkling Toes Given Midas Touch

Here is a gala frock for important soirees and a choice of shoes to complement it. Coutourier Jayroyce created the "Whirling Dervish" gown as rich in coloring as a glass of vintage Burgundy. It is in ruddy purple silk taffeta, the top encrusted in glittering gold sequins to harmonize with either of the golden sandals pictured here. At top, the one-strap sandals are of gilt mesh interwoven with a stripe of gold kid. There's a matching bag of gold mesh. The other pair features bandaged gold kid straps, which are elasticized to fit close to the foot. Both slippers were photographed at a new Washington shop whose original designs are inspired by Hollywood movie star footwear

Despite Rouged Appearance, Few Women Color Blind

Hollywood.—Science maintains that color-blind women are extremely rare, but when we see how many pretty girls mar their loveliness by using rosy rouge, sun-tan powder and carroty lipstick, we wonder. Here are the rules of color in make-up, as given by Pere Westmore, Warner Brothers' expert:

Powder and powder base should match the skin or be only a shade lighter. If the skin is at all sallow, a slight pink cast to the powder might improve the skin tones. If the complexion is naturally a trifle too highly colored, a trace of green in the powder will tone down the pinkness.

Lipstick should have the same basic color as the rouge, but can be rosy, bright or dark depending upon one's personal preference and the contour of the lips. Nail lacquer, of course, should be selected to match the lip color.

Only true brunettes should use black mascara or eyebrow pencil. Brown is usually more natural-looking. Gray, gray-blue and brown eye shadows are the only ones we recommend generally.

Stag Line

"How many more boys do you need?"

"I could use at least a dozen."

"Let's look over Miss Gimlet's list again. Have you got Johnny Dizzle?"

"No, the girls don't want him. They say he's a drip."

"Yes but his grandmother was a Stalactite. And that Mrs. Mike Pace—you know the one with all those horses—is his aunt."

"All right. I'll put him down. Say what do you think of Davy Bing?"

"Which school does he go to?"

"Grinds' Hall."

"Haven't you got any more boys from Snoots' Academy?"

"Well—Chett Mutton was kicked out of there."

"I'd put him down. His mother had a lovely debut. Who's that Jack Juniper you've got?"

"He's a new boy—from Miss Sniff's list."

"Who are his people?"

"I think his father's an investment broker."

"That's all right then. I know there's some kind of a Juniper family here that's in the gravy business."

"Well I still don't know what to do about Davy Bing."

"Well—some of those Grinds' Hall boys are really very nice."

"I know. But still they say when he went over to dancing school for his interview, he went straight from the football field in a horrible old sweater."

"Yes, but look how shabby Bob Bellwether's tweeds are."

"That's different. Tweeds are supposed to be shabby."

"Well, you might give Davy Bing a chance—being that boys are so scarce."

"You know I just can't understand what becomes of all the boys. The census figures show there are more boys than girls born."

"For that matter what becomes of all the men? There just aren't any men any more."

"Don't I know it!"

"Say, now here's a boy—Paul Stepp, with a good background, but—he goes to high school."

"Haven't you any more boys from Snoot's Academy?"

Here's Joe Plush, but he always gets tanked and won't go home."

"Is he the George Plush's son?"

"No, he's the Mortimer Plush's son—the ones that drive that big Emerald."

"Well, I'd put him down. Boys will be boys."

"I'd really like to ask that Paul Stepp. The girls say he's very smooth."

"Well, of course, they say some of those boys from the public schools are really very well-bred. Who was his mother?"

"She was a Weevil. They say his grandfather owns a good deal of property."

"I'd put him down. I believe in being democratic about these things. Say, have you got Wally Burlap?"

"No, he can't look at anybody but Tootsie Smirk. He never cuts in on anyone else."

"Isn't that ungraceful, at their age! What about Tom Periwinkle?"

"He won't go to dances. His mother simply can't get him into a dress suit."

"What a shame! And with that big Ruby car. It seems funny to me that parents have no more control over their children than to let them grow up in barbarism."

"Say, I've got to get some more boys. Who's this Tuck Van Wilder—with the question mark after him?"

"That's the one who's been arrested so much for careless driving."

"And, another thing, his mother was a Doe."

"I'll put him down. Now, who else have you got?"

"Well, Puffy Mackerel. But the girls all say he's crumby."

"I don't care. He's been to Silver Lode Camp every summer. I'll put him down. Who else?"

"Eddie Van Stiff; but the girls say he's not smooth."

"Just the same, he spent a summer on a tramp steamer. I'll put him down. Now who else?"

"Archie Dullard—you know, the one that's been at Snoot's Academy eight years."

"Yes; but he's a marvelous jitterbug. I'll take him."

"Then I have Buck Jitney and Pete Chaff—but the girls say they're drips, too."

"Well, their mothers are both in the Social Register. Those girls have just got to learn that you have to make allowances—for men."

Man of Distinguished Background Is Involved With Designing Woman; Can Family Rescue Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am very interested in a relative of mine, a man of fine family and highly educated, who has practically thrown himself away, so far as his family, friends and social position are concerned. He has given up everything for a young woman whom he must love, since she has been living with him in his home since the death of his wife. The sad part of it is that she cares absolutely nothing about him. She cares only for what she is getting out of him and she is taking everything she can get.

She supports her entire family at his expense. We, his relatives, know this, but we are powerless to do or say anything to him. Either he is so wrapped up in her that he cannot see her as we do, or else he realizes his predicament and is afraid of her, in the sense that she might expose him and hurt him in a business way. She has not only ruined her reputation but she is ruining his as well.

I don't think he would care to marry the girl, for he has sense enough to realize that she would only make life miserable for him and for his children. (She has a "nasty disposition," as one of his children said one day). His whole family is mortified by the situation and the ridicule it provokes, yet none of them dares to step forward to break up the affair.

What would you advise relatives to do in such a situation? How can the man be made to see himself as others see him, to realize the mess he has got himself into, and to understand that the girl is coolly stripping him of his possessions? I will appreciate any suggestions.

ANXIOUS RELATIVE

Children's Predicament Overshadows Man's

DEAR A. R.: Your presentation of this problem is remarkable, in that it fails to emphasize the children's deplorable position as the most lamentable aspect of the situation, and the one demanding urgent redress. It appears to me that any father who would bring a mistress of the vampire ilk into his home to have quasi-maternal authority over growing children, is a father who must be considered at least temporarily incapable of rational self government.

If there were no children involved in this problem, then one might have to concede that it is the man's own business if he chooses to make a fool of himself in the manner described. One would say that there was virtually nothing which relatives or friends could or should do, by way of actively intervening to rout the hussy or restore the man's perspective.

But the fact that there are children to be considered makes it imperative, in my opinion, that some trustworthy friend or relative bring the situation to the attention of both a psychiatrist and an attorney. Given a full-bodied account of the man's case history to date, even at second-hand, I am sure that any psychiatrist could arrive at a helpful understanding of the possible reasons for the man's scandalous latter-day behavior, and could offer workable suggestions for reclaiming him, (for his children's sake), from potential ruin.

The function of a lawyer would be to study the story of the woman's unscrupulous invasion in order to decide whether third-person intervention on behalf of the children would be legal and warranted; to outline the steps that would be necessary for safeguarding their financial and social welfare, which unquestionably is being jeopardized; and, possibly, to assist the complainant in determining which member of the family circle possesses the first right to inaugurate such action.

Perhaps if some spokesman for the family were to talk to the man about the shameful injury he is doing to his children, through soiling the family name, alienating relatives and friends, and exposing them to continuous association with a woman of unmoral character; and were to suggest to him that common decency and a desire for justice would compel the family to take united action to protect the children from the vitiating influence of his behavior, unless he reformed immediately — perhaps then he might come to his senses, overnight. Or he might at least, see fit to remove the woman to another place of residence, and that would be one small gain.

My suggestions, then, are these: Have a spokesman for the family deliver some such rebuke and implied ultimatum to him. If it is non-productive of encouraging results, call another family counsel and draft plans for seeing the psychiatrist and attorney aforementioned. Having invited their counsel, be guided thereafter by their recommendations.

Experienced in Heartbreak, Girl Counsels 'Anonymous'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: If I can help "Anonymous," your correspondent of October 14, who wishes to know how long it takes to recover from the heartbreak of losing a person you love, I will gladly tell what I have learned from experience.

Three times I have been obliged to survive heartbreak. I lost the first man I loved through an automobile accident. I was just a kid and although I was in bed for a couple of weeks afterward, and thought that the world had come to an end, I was in love again within the year. (This checks with your opinion that "a new love is the most effective cure of heartbreak for the youngster.")

My second heartbreak was complicated by shame and humiliation. I had fallen in love and permitted pre-marital intimacy. (Why do girls never learn that such things nearly always end that way?) It took me much longer to recover from this experience. Indeed, when I meet this man occasionally nowadays I realize that you never entirely recover from "real love;" but you can go on, somehow, and not let it warp your entire life.

Then I found a third love and married him, unfortunately. And now, for a third time, I am trying to "get over" an ache in my heart. It is much harder to say good-by to the memory of a husband than to the memory of a sweetheart, even though he may have been a very unsatisfactory husband. "Things" remind you and open up old wounds. "Habits of association," formed over a period of years (even a few years), are hard to break. After six months, I'm still trying.

Although I am only 23, I feel that my life has been pretty well messed up, but one has to keep on going and when one has to go on, life just naturally adjusts itself. My present philosophy is this: Cry if you want, but get up refreshed from it. Think, if you will, but don't think in circles. Forget the past and build for the future.

Keep up your appearance, your interest in friends, hobbies and work. Don't wear a long face; it only makes you feel worse. Don't talk about your troubles. Be with people who won't mention YOU. Then find the nearest thing to be done and do it. When you are tired, sleep stills the ache; and, in time, nature heals it—or, at least, so I hope. This may help "Anonymous." If so, I don't mind the time I've spent writing it.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Rolling Exercise Will Reduce Fat Pads Also Aids Circulation and Tones Muscles

THERE ARE TWO kinds of reducers who will find rolling the answer to their exercise problem. Paradoxically, these are the extreme weights and the reducers who are virtually slim.

Rolling is easy. It can be done without the slightest strain, and that makes it safe for the excessively overweight person who must proceed cautiously. As long as you remain excessively overweight, rolling cannot effect any very remarkable changes in your measurements. But it does give your circulation a mild jog and it tones the skin and muscles, all of which puts you in better condition for a more active program later on.

Acts on Fat Pads

Once your weight is nearly normal, however, rolling seems to improve your figure from one day to the next. At this stage you go after those errant fat pads which elude the best exercise programs. You can't always be sure when you are bringing the right muscles into the direct line of pull of an exercise. But when you bring your weight directly to bear on a fat pad, you know it. There is scant chance of error. That's why you get results so fast.

If you are just starting your reducing or if you are about to finish it, roll for a better figure.

Begin with an all-inclusive roll like this one:

Lie on the back on the floor, knees slightly bent so that heels can rest on the floor. Flex the arms and place them straight out on the floor at the sides, shoulder level, forearms and hands in air. Propel yourself with the upper arms from side to side, turning the knees each time to bring the sides of hips and thighs into contact with the floor. That is all-round conditioner which makes for smooth contours of the hips, thighs and upper arms, with a bit of waistline exercise thrown in.

Spanking Also Helps

Now to wear off pads on the outer sides of the hips:

Assume a half-sitting position, partially supporting yourself with the hands on the floor slightly back of the body. Draw the knees up so that the feet are off the floor and go into a regular barrel roll, catching the weight on alternate hands and shoving vigorously from one side to the other. This should take care of the entire hipline, including the sides.

Rolling can be backed with spanking to speed up the streamlining:

Remain in the half-sitting position, but with the legs straight down on the floor. Then use the hands and heels to hoist the hips a few inches off the floor, turning so that you will come down on a fat pad, and spank, spank. Keep hoisting and turning for 50 counts.

Spanking is also an excellent technique for flabby upper arms. Lie on the back on the floor with arms flexed and out at the sides, shoulder level; then spank up and down, bringing the backs of the upper arms smartly down on the floor.

Roast Turkey, Sweet Potatoes Says Raymond K. Kyle

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

SCHNITZ, Knepp and Shoo-fly cake are all Pennsylvania Dutch dishes that have made their cooking renowned throughout the world. But, it is not these traditional dishes that Philadelphia-born Ray Kyle, head of the Commercial Engineering Co., puts at the top of his food preferences. Mr. Kyle doesn't wait for Thanksgiving to order roast turkey, sweet potatoes and cranberries. He doesn't mind carving the turkey either. In fact he is so adept at turkey carving that he has quite a reputation in that art. I asked him if he had any special roasting process, but he was a bit indefinite as to method, although, he said to make it perfect it should have Chestnut stuffing. That is a Dutch way of enhancing the king of birds.

MR. KYLE

There are as many ways of roasting turkeys as there are members of that ancient and majestic tribe. The best arguments in the world can be introduced by the mere mention of turkey roasting. The following is one method of roasting turkey.

Roast Turkey

First select a plump bird, with broad, full breast and pliable smooth black legs, with soft loose spurs. The shorter the neck, the better the bird. The hen turkey is better since it is more tender. A bird weighing not more than 10 or 12 pounds is best. Eight to 10 pounds is the ideal size if the bird is fat. A turkey is prepared and roasted like chicken. Singe the turkey, remove pin feathers, wash thoroughly and wipe dry. Sprinkle the inside with salt, fill the front cavity with stuffing, then fill inside from the rear. Be careful, however, not to pack stuffing to tightly, because this may cause the skin to burst. Truss with skewers or string to hold the bird in shape, folding wings back on skin of neck and tying legs and tail together. Place on rack in open roasting pan, breast side up. Do not add water. Roast in moderate oven, 300 degrees, until tender, basting with melted butter and pan drippings. An 8 to 12 pound bird requires about 20 minutes per pound, and a 12 to 16 pound bird needs about 15 minutes per pound.

If Weather Man Fails to Hit, Blame the War

Climatic Goings On Silenced Because of Aid In Planning Air Raids

By Alfred Friendly

If the Weather Man fails to call his shots with customary accuracy these days, blame it on the European war. The war is doing weather forecasting no good at all.

Cannonading and bombing in the upper air layers has nothing to do with it; the trouble lies in the fact that the international weather broadcasting agreement is suicidal in time of war. As a result, England, doing the job before the outbreak of hostilities, has ceased its twice-daily reports on weather conditions from more than 100 European and island stations that cover the continent and the eastern half of the Atlantic.

Although "weather" travels from west to east, and conditions over the eastern Atlantic are results of weather that has already passed over the United States, these conditions still have a direct bearing on atmospheric conditions to the west. The speed with which storms, pressure areas, and the like, move across the Atlantic, necessarily determines the movement of other weather conditions following them.

Weather Bureau experts here are by no means put out of business by lack of data formerly received, but they confess that they miss it.

The bureau's own broadcasts have also been modified drastically by the war abroad. They no longer carry a word of weather conditions in Canada, birthplace of a good share of our weather. Canada still supplies the information it always did, but only for the "domestic" use of the bureau itself, for the sake of its own forecasts. The Canadian information now comes by wire, not radio, and in Canada itself no forecasts or reports of weather conditions are permitted to be published. As for Bermuda, a dead silence on the subject of weather has prevailed since the war began.

The crucial importance of weather knowledge to belligerents is obvious; in days of motorized attacks, air raids, and chemical warfare. Hence the silence on European climatic goings-on. It is reported that English papers may not even mention a local shower.

On the whole, the Allies have an advantage over Germany in knowing weather conditions in enemy territory, by reason of the general west to east weather movement. England, with ships at sea and its own observation stations at home, can call the turn on climate in Germany before the Germans themselves.

For weather reports of England and future conditions at home, Germany can depend only on espionage and U-boat reports, providing any U-boat would risk revealing its position by sending a radio message.

How much help the broadcasts of American and West Atlantic weather reports are to Germany in figuring future British conditions is problematical. Government meteorologists refuse even to guess on the subject.

Assistant Commerce Secretary J. Monroe Johnson, casting an unhappy eye on the strike-torn history of the Inland Waterways Corporation, has ordered a long-range study of the organization's labor relations. He has specified the addition of a personnel officer and staff as well as a labor relations expert, all to be chosen soon.

He is now combing a list of public and private organizations specializing in personnel problems. One will be employed to do a thorough survey.

Johnson's program followed several weeks of negotiations with three unions that have organized employes of the Government barge lines. The negotiations, which led to certain wage increases, grew out of a strike on the lines last spring, prior to the reorganization order, transferring of Inland Waterways to the Commerce Department.

Federal workers seeking reallocations of their jobs and who are disgruntled at long delays in the Civil Service Commission, can blame the President's limited emergency decree, authorizing expansion of the Army, Navy, FBI, and Civil Aeronautics Authority.

The creation of new jobs in these agencies, gets precedence in the commission, as new jobs always have. The result, however, is that the commission's classification staff, snowed under with the problem of allocating the new positions, has had little time for routine functions.

Busy Day Concludes Centennial For Little Sisters of the Poor

Nonagenarian Colored Women Express Their Happiness in Song While They Work; Most Rev. M. J. Keyes Celebrates Benediction

By Scott Hart

The Little Sisters of the Poor concluded their centennial celebration at their home yesterday with benediction celebrated by the Most Rev. Michael J. Keyes.

And Mother Celestine, thinking about what a success the celebration had been and moving busily the while through the corridors where hundreds of friends and well-wishers of the home were chatting, said as much with her eyes as with her voice, "God never fails us, no matter what we ask."

The three days had been busy, and then, late of the last day, with the crowds yet lingering on, there was still work—refreshments to be served and the entertainment program to be looked after, so many visitors to be greeted. And, certainly, a visit might be made to the floor above where Sister Matilda oversees the colored women and, at times, teaches them Irish songs.

It isn't only in the mornings, but most any time of day that something in Sister Matilda's eyes seems to set them to singing.

Of course, she taught them the songs during her four years at the home, and she is very pleased that they learned them. Mother Celestine was speaking of this when she entered the long room on the floor above the crowd of visitors. But she stopped talking then, for there was Sister Matilda, standing in the center of the floor and by her side a colored woman, very aged, was singing "Kathleen Mavourneen."

Sister Matilda was proud of old voices singing the older songs, and she went about pointing them out by some of their ages. "Ninety-four, 93, 90," she said. Of all the songs, they like "Kathleen Mavourneen" the best, it was said. "But they can sing many songs." And then, at a signal from Sister Matilda, they all began, "Won't We Have a Jolly Time," a song having to do with the pouring of tea.

"And there is no tea at the moment to pour," said Mother Celestine, adding that they take very readily to music and that "they all are very happy."

Possibly 5,000 persons have visited the home since the celebration began Monday, said Mother Celestine. At the concluding benediction the preacher was Mgr. Lawrence J. Shehan, of St. Patrick's Church here. The Rev. Edward Donze was master of ceremonies. Bishop Keyes was the celebrant at the pontifical mass yesterday morning. Later, at the reception, he commended the sisters for their work at the home. And Mother Celestine, around whom it all was revolving, said she wanted everyone to know how good they had been, how grateful the sisters were.

Policeman Watches As Three Youths Break Into Store

Three young burglars made the mistake of crawling through a trap door into a Seventh-street jewelry store early yesterday within full view of an alert police sergeant.

Unknown to the youthful thieves, Sergt. Charles W. Dwyer kept the trio under surveillance for several minutes before they raised the iron trap door leading into the jewelry shop of Leon Tashof at 727 Seventh street northwest. Dwyer said the boys attracted his attention by trying the front doors of two other shops in the block.

After seeing the burglars enter, Dwyer quickly called for assistance. When taken by police, the suspects' pockets were stuffed with stolen articles. Taken to the First Precinct Station they will be questioned in connection with other housebreakings.

Nemone Balfour's Voice Charms Party Here

Mrs. Stanley-Brown's Guests Hear Englishwoman Who Will Make Debut at Town Hall Soon; Quaint Songs Recall Golden Age of Elizabeth

By Hope Ridings Miller,

A SMALL GROUP of capitalites had a rare treat last night when Miss Nemone Balfour, dramatic soprano, was the featured artist at a musicale given in Mrs. Rudolf Stanley-Brown's home at 2123 Bancroft place.

A member of a famous British family (her cousin heads the Bank of England), Miss Balfour made her musical debut in London a couple of years ago; appeared later in concerts in several European cities, and then came over to this country to continue her career. She is slated for her American debut at Town Hall on November 1, but last evening's program was one in a series of small concerts on her schedule before her formal bow in New York.

Arriving in Washington on Tuesday, Miss Balfour has been the house guest of Mrs. Frederick Atherton, while Mrs. Ingersoll Townsend, of New York, who accompanied her to Washington, has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carter in Alexandria. Known professionally as Sally Carter Townsend (she has gathered a good many laurels for herself as an accomplished pianist), Mrs. Townsend is a cousin of Mrs. Stanley-Brown.

Getting back to last evening's musicale. The program included, in addition to Miss Balfour's numbers, a group of old songs, which Mrs. Stanley-Brown played on the virginal. In case you don't know, this keyed musical instrument of the Elizabethan age is similar to the clavichord and under a talented hand yields soft tones admirably suited to the type of numbers Mrs. Stanley-Brown presented last night.

Albert Tipton, flutist of the National Symphony Orchestra, and Walter Robert, pianist of New York, were others who assisted Miss Balfour in her well-chosen program. Among the 40-odd Washington residents who attended the musicale and lingered on for the supper afterward were the Hungarian Minister and Mme. Pelenyi, Sir Owen and Lady Chalkley, of the British Embassy; the French Military Attache and Mme. Lombard; Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, Mrs. Reeve Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carter, Mrs. Frederick Atherton and several others.

ODDMENTS OF INTEREST: Countess Roberti, wife of the Secretary of the Italian Embassy, will be bridesmaid Saturday at the fashionable wedding in Connecticut of Countess Seherr-Thoss, granddaughter of the late diplomat Henry White, and Edgar Morfoe Church . . . William White, son of William Allen White, left Tuesday for Italy on the Rex (the same ship on which Lothrop Stoddard sailed) and will go from there to Germany to gather material for a book . . . Both Mr. White and Mr. Stoddard, who had planned farewell parties on the boat, had to call them off at the last minute . . . No such get-togethers are allowed now . . . Maybe they're taking no chances on stowaways.

SENATOR REYNOLDS takes the medal for quick-trigger comebacks. Here's why. An alert newspaperwoman, on the trail of a scoop, got a tip that the Senator was engaged and would be married before the end of the month. Taking no chances on second-hand rumor, she called Senator Reynold's office, got the Senator himself on the telephone and asked him point-blank about the report. "The day you answer 'Yes,' my dear, the rumor will be true," he replied. The newspaper woman hasn't recovered yet.

BACK FROM PANAMA with a fund of fascinating stories is popular Hugo Johnson, ace cameraman for Paramount newsreel, who went down to cover the recent conference for all American newsreel companies and lingered on for a few days to make several hundred feet of film on the fortifications of the Panama Canal . . . Traipsing around with big-wigs is nothing new for Mr. Johnson, who has had enough colorful experiences at home and abroad to make a book . . . Some of his most entertaining reminiscences center around an assignment in Havana during the revolution, when he kept grinding away at his camera from the roof of a hotel that was being fired on from all directions.

DOWN TO STRATFORD HALL today will go a number of prominent Washingtonians who will be on hand when the old grist mill is dedicated in connection with the current conclave of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation . . . Mrs. Robert Wallace Parker will present the organization with a hand-painted coat of arms of the Lees, surrounded by the crests of the inter-related Virginia families . . . Mrs. Parker made the picture herself . . . Others scheduled to be present for today's festivities at Stratford are Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. Harry B. Hawes, Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mrs. Horace Van Devanter, Mrs. Joshua Green, Mrs. David St. Pierre Gailliard, and Mrs. J. Fred Essary.

LITERARY ACCENT: From Denver, Colo., comes a copy of William E. Barrett's latest book, "Flight From Youth," a novel that appeared serially in a nationally known magazine and will be on the stands soon. Mr. Barrett, who with his wife and family lived in Washington for several years, has a host of friends here. A personal note about the author on the cover of his novel mentions that he is a native New Yorker; has spent most of his life in Denver, St. Louis and Washington; likes all for different reasons, but believes Washington is probably "one of the most interesting places on earth." Before the winter is over, Mr. and Mrs. Barrett hope to get back to the Capital to spend some time. His other book, a best seller, entitled, "Woman On Horseback," was written here.

Mention of one author reminds me of another and his latest book—Frederic William Wile, whose autobiography, "News Is Where You Find It," is the type of tome you can't put down, once you've opened it. Four decades of searching for copy and meeting people who make the headlines has given him a vast store of material, and he has gathered his experience here and elsewhere into an account you can't afford to miss. Incidentally, the Newspaper Women's Club will fete Mr. Wile at tea tomorrow.

Engagement Announced Today

Miss Gertrude Campbell Pearson, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Pearson, announce the engagement of their daughter to Frank M. Durrance, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Durrance, of this city, formerly of Jacksonville, Fla. The bride-elect attended Holton Arms and Mount Vernon Seminary. She made her debut three seasons ago on Thanksgiving Day. The wedding will take place in February

Nora Magee's Bridal Is Today

Wartime simplicity will mark the wedding today in Montreal of Miss Nora Magee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan A. Magee of that city, to William Lawrence Breese, of New York and Washington, son of Mrs. William Lawrence Breese, of Washington, and the late Mr. Breese.

The ceremony will take place at St. George's Church in the presence of members of the two families and close friends. Willing Patterson, of Philadelphia, will be best man and the only attendant. After a wedding trip to Lake Placid, the couple will make their home here.

Among Washington guests at the wedding will be Mrs. Breese and Miss Janet Fish, aunt of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Breese attended Hatfield Hall School in Cobourg, Ontario, and made her debut in 1933. She is a member of the Montreal Junior League.

The bridegroom is a graduate of St. Mark's School and Harvard College, class of 1931, where he was a member of Hasty Pudding Institute of 1770, Porcellian and Signet. He also attended Harvard Business School. He is a nephew of Representative Hamilton Fish and a grandson of the late Hamilton Fish, who was Secretary of State. He is the grandson of Mrs. Henry W. Higgins, of London, and a nephew of Lady Alastair Innsker and of Mrs. John W. Cutler and Mrs. Henry Forster, of New York. He is with the Red Cross here.

Mrs. Charles Maas, Of New York City, On Visit Here

Mrs. Charles O. Maas, of New York City, is making a brief visit at the Mayflower and will return to her apartment at the Plaza the end of the week or the first of next week.

Mrs. Maas is the widow of Commander Maas, who was assistant naval attache to the United States Embassy in Paris during the World War. The main reason for her visit this time was to attend the wedding of the former Miss Florence Harris to Donald Downs, having been a friend of the bride's family for many years.

Charles Lennons Honored at Party

Mrs. Alfred J. Steffen and Mrs. John J. Rodler entertained Sunday afternoon at tea in Mrs. Steffen's home at 9305 Montgomery avenue, Chevy Chase. The party was arranged in honor of the golden wedding anniversary of Dr. and Mrs. Charles G. Lennon, parents of the hostesses.

The house was transformed into a bower of blossoms sent in by the many friends of Dr. and Mrs. Lennon. During the afternoon about 200 guests called. Alternating at the tea table were Mrs. Elizabeth S. Bartels, of Alexandria, sister of Mrs. Lennon; Mrs. Nellie B. Lennon, of Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. E. C. Schneider, Mrs. Hicklin Yates, Mrs. Mary M. Burbank, Mrs. Lucy Lowe and Mrs. George E. Jacobson.

Others assisting in the dining room were Mrs. Gayle Summers, of Norfolk; Mrs. Mason B. Leming, Mrs. Lyda L. Whittington, Mrs. Henry Neff, Mrs. Gordon Porter and Miss Elizabeth Porter.

Linthicums Staying Here Until Monday

Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Linthicum are guests at the Mayflower until Monday, when they will go to Mr. Linthicum's former home in Baltimore for a short stay before leaving for his new post as United States Vice Consul in Pernambuco, Brazil.

He was formerly attached to the United States legation in Kaunas, Lithuania, and returned last Saturday with his wife from abroad. Mr. Linthicum is a nephew of the late Representative John Charles Linthicum, of Maryland.

The Financial Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. G. H. S. Pinsent have as their guest at their house on Thirty-first street J. A. C. Osborne, of Ottawa, Canada.

Last evening they entertained informally at dinner in honor of Mr. Osborne, when the others present were Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Feis, Daniel Bell, Assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury and R. A. Opey, of the British Embassy staff.

Margaret Dooley To Be Bride Of Paul Sallak

Mr. and Mrs. John Frances Dooley, of Albany, Oreg., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Mary Dooley, of Washington, to John Stephen Sallak, of Alexandria, Va. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul T. Sallak, of Colorado Springs, Colo., and is private secretary to Judge Niven, of Alexandria.

Miss Dooley attended St. Mary's Academy and the Northwestern School of Commerce in Portland, Oreg. She is a member of Alpha Gamma and is vice president of Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi. She is employed in the Children's Bureau, Department of Labor.

Mr. Sallak is a graduate of the University of Michigan and formerly was in newspaper work. He plans to resume his connection with the Denver Post following his marriage. No date has been set for the wedding.

Marriage Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Inners, of 127 West Broadway, Red Lion, Pa., announce the marriage of their daughter, Josephine May Inners, to Jacob E. Charles, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Charles, of 171 Merion Road, York, Pa., on July 6. The ceremony, which took place in Manassas, Va., is just now being made known to Washington friends of Mr. and Mrs. Charles. The former is a cousin of Russell W. Dimmock, of 2001 Fifteenth street.

Capt. F. H. Williams And Wife Hosts At Cocktail Party

Entertaining for a number of their friends in the Marine Crops, Capt. Francis H. Williams, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Williams gave a cocktail party yesterday afternoon at their home, 6128 North Dakota avenue.

Assisting the hostess during the hours of 5 to 7 were Mrs. J. O. Butcher, wife of Lieut. Butcher, and Miss Mary Putnam, daughter of Brig. Gen. Russell B. Putnam.

Among the guests were Col. William H. Rupertus, commandant of the Marine Barracks, and Mrs. Rupertus; Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Charles T. Brooks, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Joseph W. Knighton, Maj. and Mrs. W. W. Davies, Maj. William E. Burke, Capt. and Mrs. Jack Juhan, Capt. Robert E. Hill, Commander John Harper, Capt. and Mrs. James Bigler, Lieut. Otto B. Osmondson, Lieut. John A. Saxton, jr., Lieut. and Mrs. John R. Lirette, Lieut. Carl J. Fleps, and Miss Le Claire Joyce, of Annapolis.

Jack Logan Plans 'Round-up' Party

Jack Logan has issued amusing invitations to a "round-up" party at Normandy Farms on Friday evening, October 27. They read "fall round-up of fillies, foals, friskies, flatfoots, friends, to be held at 9 o'clock moontime, rain, hail, snow or blow," with "extra special added purses for bulldozing, calf-loping, gloom-chasing and fence-straddling."

Normandy Farm will be the scene of another autumn party when Miss Marjory Hendricks entertains Halloween night, October 31, at a vaudeville dinner dance. An accordionist will play during dinner and the vaudeville acts will include a magician, skaters, singers and dancers.

Another dance will be given there on Saturday, October 28, when a group of friends under the leadership of Mrs. Robert Knowlton, the former Rebecca Trucco, gathers there for Halloween festivities.

Southern Bachelors To Give Tea Dance

The Southern Bachelors' Cotillion will entertain at a tea dance Saturday at Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street, in compliment to the girls from their respective States who are students at the various schools in and around Washington.

The cotillion, organized last spring, is comprised of young men from 12 Southern States. William Hodges, of Washington, N. C., is president.

Sponsors for the dance include several Senators, Representatives and presidents of the State societies represented in the cotillion. The event will take place from 4 to 6 p. m.

O. A. R. to Meet

The senior group, Lieut. John Shaw Society, C. A. R., will hold its first meeting of the year at the Battery Park Club tomorrow at 8 p. m., under the leadership of Mrs. Richard St. Clair Green. This group graduated six members this month to the Judge Lynn Chapter, D. A. R. The junior group will hold its first meeting at the Battery Park Club on Saturday at 2:30.

Attache Rank Given Woman By Panama

Senorita Anita Ramirez Becomes Diplomat; Has Been Here 9 Years

For the first time in the history of the country, Panama will have a feminine diplomat.

Senorita Anita Ramirez—who has lived in Washington for nine years and has served as Secretary of the Embassy—has been raised to the rank of attache.

There has been a general reorganization of the embassy staff which is to take effect on November 1. News of the change was made known Monday. Arriving the last of the month are the Ambassador and Senora de Boyd. Accompanying them will be their son and daughter-in-law, the Augusto Boyds, who were married this summer in Panama City.

Young Augusto Boyd has been appointed as attache of the embassy. Another young Panamanian diplomat on his way here is Ignacio Febrega, who also will assume duties as attache. Senor Febrega is a bachelor.

Senor Don Miguel J. Moreno, jr., who is attache of the embassy now, will be raised to the rank of second secretary. Other members of the staff will remain as they are.

The Ambassador and Senora de Boyd, accompanied by their daughter, Dora, and son, Augusto, sailed for their homeland this summer to attend the wedding of Augusto to Senorita Lola Paredes.

Dumbarton Oak Tour Enlarged

Since the days are getting shorter, Mrs. Emil Hurja, chairman of the tour of the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss to be held Saturday, has decided that the gates of Dumbarton Oaks will be opened at 12:30 instead of 2 o'clock as originally announced. Tea will be served on the terrace outside the orangery throughout the afternoon.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, a director of the Washington Self-Help Exchange, which is sponsoring this second annual autumn tour, will be among the group assisting Mrs. Hurja at the tea tables. Others include Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., Mrs. Hugh V. Keiser, wife of the president of the organization; Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, second vice president; Mrs. Samuel Spencer, secretary; the Misses Elizabeth and Mary Howry, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mrs. Gardner Jackson, Miss Susan B. Craighill, Mrs. Richard Seelye Jones, Mrs. James Drain, and members of the board of directors, including Miss Mae Helm, Miss Belle Sherwin, Mrs. Morris Betts, Miss Selma Borchardt and Miss Edna Lonigan.

Mrs. E. B. McLean Hostess at Dinner

Mrs. Edward B. McLean entertained last evening at Friendship at another of the series of dinners which she has been giving this fall.

The glassed-in porch at Friendship, scene of many a gay dance, is now to be put to a more serious purpose. Mrs. McLean has offered its use to the Red Cross for any purpose, and it was decided to hold an instruction course there inasmuch as all other facilities of the national organization and the District of Columbia Chapter house are crowded with other Roll Call and war-relief production activities.

Mrs. Douglas and Son Will Visit in New York

Mrs. Estelle W. Douglas and her son, Donald Douglas, will leave today for New York City to attend the dinner dance tonight celebrating the thirty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence G. Crispin.

Mrs. Douglas was bridesmaid at the ceremony. She will remain in New York for a week or ten days, but Mr. Douglas will return here on Sunday.

Earl Winterton to Visit Myran Taylor in N. Y.; Irish Peer Here to Discuss Aid for Refugees

EARL WINTERTON (there's no "of" after the earl, unlike other titles of this kind) left last night for New York to visit Myron Taylor after both had met in Washington to talk over plans for the international refugee committee with President Roosevelt. However, he will return next week for another conference in the Capital, where he puts up at the British Embassy.

An Irish peer, the earl sits in the House of Commons instead of the House of Lords the usual place for noblemen in Parliament. He is Paymaster General of His Majesty's Government, in charge of the accoun ng of the exchequer. In the last World War the earl fought in the Imperial Camel Corps in Palestine, Syria and Arabia. He has also served as chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, under retary of state for India and a member of Parliament. A journalist as well, he was formerly editor of the World. He has no haunted castle, but a country house in Surrey and a town house in Eccleston Square, London.

LADY HOWARD, whose husband, Sir Esme Howard, was the beloved British Ambassador here after the war, writes friends that she has four women billeted with her at her house in the country. Many titled Englishwomen are finding that doing their bit in the present war may consist unromantically of scrubbing their own floors and cooking their own dinners, as they are only allowed 30 cents a day per child for those who have been evacuated from London and are under their care. Naturally it would take a tremendously large domestic staff to care for the little evacuees, so the women are doing most of the extra work themselves.

DEBS WHO planned to "come out" November 30 and who had their invitations engraved simply "Thanksgiving Day," are now in a bit of a quandary. As the result of the President's proclamation they don't know whether their guests will arrive November 23, November 30, or, heaven forbid, both days.

PRETTY ALICE BARRY was among those night-clubbing the other evening at the Lounge Riviera in Hotel Twenty-four Hundred. At another table we saw Mrs. Clifton Phillips, the former Natalie Keeney, and Miss Patricia Newman, of Akron, Ohio, with a party.

WILLARD L. ECCLES, who is here to see his brother, Marriner S. Eccles, is the only one of the four brothers who does not have the middle initial "S" for Stanford, maiden name of their mother. He is the youngest of the brothers, and makes his home in Ogden, Utah.

JUNIOR LEAGUE provisional members met yesterday morning at headquarters for their first lecture of the season. The subject was "Washington, a Birds-eye View of Its Government and Social Agencies," and the speaker was Miss Mary Winslow, United States Representative on the Inter-American Commission for Women. Leaguers will meet for similar lectures three times a week until December 4.

OUR FAVORITE newsboy is the bored looking man on Dupont Circle near the drugstore. In a piercing shriek he screams, "Hitler sends his backfield through the line, folks," "Read all about the bul-loody war—lots of women and children killed. Don't miss reading about the bul-loody war." "Hitler's boys are breaking through there, folks."

ODDS AND ENDS: Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot have returned from a summer in New England . . . Mrs. Arthur Clephane has cards out for a tea next Tuesday in honor of Mrs. John Markell. Maps enclosed show how to get to her home in Herndon, Va. . . . Junior Leaguers who are taking up public speaking could have picked up a few pointers from the forceful and amusing address which Robert Cutler, of Boston, delivered at the recent "Keynote" luncheon of the Community Chest League. Mr. Cutler began by quoting a story of William Lyons Phelps, who once said that he always gave four speeches: the one he wrote the night before, the one he gave at the gathering, the one he thought up going home afterward in the taxi, which was always much the best, and the last, the one which he read in the newspapers the next day.

Benjamin Plunket, attache of the British Embassy, has returned to his duties after an absence of several months in England, and has taken an apartment at the Shoreham.

Senator and Senora Guillermo Alonso Pujol, of Havana, Cuba, are at the Shoreham while spending several days in Washington to see the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, Dr. Vincente Valdes Rodriguez.

The Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Munilla will entertain other Latin-American military attaches at a buffet supper tomorrow evening in their apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street.

Mrs. Dodie Lawson-Johnston, former wife of John Lawson-Johnston, was guest of honor last night at a dinner given by Mrs. Ffoulke Dewey in her home on Massachusetts avenue. Mrs. Lawson-Johnston is Mrs. Dewey's house guest.

Mrs. Clarence Grosner, who recently returned from California, has as her guest her sister, Mrs. Louis Garfield, of Columbus, Ohio.

Col. and Mrs. John W. Clark, who make their home at the Wardman Park, have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Judd, of Cranbury, N. J.

Mrs. A. C. Downing and Miss Alys Downing have returned to Washington from Whitefield, N. H., and are at the Mayflower for a few days until their house on Hillyer place is ready for occupancy.

Lieut. Comdr. Ovid C. Foote, U. S. N. (retired), and Mrs. Foote, who were married here October 5, have returned from a trip to Florida and are at the Shoreham until they find a house. Mrs. Foote is the former Mrs. Florence Boyd Brodrick.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Sanders have reopened their apartment at the Mayflower after spending the greater part of the summer at Crestleigh, their farm at Ashton, Md.

Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, who is now at her home in Rockville, Md., will open her apartment at the Wardman Park about the first of November.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Goldstein are receiving congratulations on the birth of a second daughter on October 13 at the Garfield Hospital. Mrs. Goldstein is the former Miss Amy Behrend, daughter of Rudolph Behrend.

Mrs. Cudahy Here On Red Cross Duty

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cudahy, of Chicago, arrived at the Mayflower yesterday and are returning home today after Mrs. Cudahy confers with officials of the Red Cross.

She is a member of the national voluntary service committee of the organization and an executive of the Chicago Chapter of the Red Cross.

500 of Chevy Chase Woman's Club Hear Lecture on Current Events

Mrs. Lydia Van Zandt Addresses Group on 'Behind the Headlines'

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

More than 500 members of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase yesterday afternoon gathered in the clubhouse on Connecticut avenue for the opening luncheon of the fall season. Mrs. Lydia Van Hagen Van Zant, current events lecturer, was the guest speaker, addressing the club on the subject, "Behind the Headlines."

Mrs. Van Zant, discussed the many factors entering into the present world situation and declared that the airplane and radio had made the world into an island community. Censorship of information, however, has resulted in the countries knowing little about each other, and misunderstanding the attitudes of other peoples, she said. As an illustration, she cited the fact that each of the six times she and her husband attended the movies when they were in Germany, pictures of American soldiers were shown with the caption, "War-loving democracies prepare."

New President In Charge

Mrs. Van Zandt was introduced by Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby, new president of the club. Large bouquets of gold and rust chrysanthemums decorated the platform and Mrs. Kerby's green dress and gold-colored suede hat blended with the color scheme.

Music for the program was presented by Mrs. Diller B. Goff, who sang, accompanied by Mrs. Myron Winter.

At the business meeting the club adopted a resolution offered by Mrs. F. C. Breckenridge, indorsing the request of the principal, N. J. Nelson, that more programs suitable for school use be offered in school hours by local radio station. The school is now equipped with a radio amplifying system, making the use of radio possible in the regular curricula.

May Have Bus To Clubhouse

There was also discussion of the possibility of having shuttle buses between the clubhouse and Chevy Chase Circle from 12 to 2 and 3 to 4 p. m. on club days, if a sufficient number of members would use them.

The annual donation day for the Montgomery County Hospital will be observed at the next meeting of the club, November 16.

Mrs. Roger Whiteford, chairman of the Chevy Chase branch of the Montgomery County Red Cross, spoke briefly on the sewing group which works at the clubhouse on Wednesdays, and announced a home hygiene class soon to be started at the fire house, next to the club. Miss Mary Hughes spoke in behalf of the National Symphony Orchestra and Miss Agnes Regan, Catholic social service worker, in behalf of the Community Chest.

Reports of committee chairmen included that of Mrs. Frederick E. Shoemaker, chairman of membership, who announced the club now had 750 members, leaving only 50 more before the 800 limit is reached.

Other committee chairmen who reported were Mrs. Henry DeCoursey Adams, program; Mrs. Breckenridge, applied education; Mrs. Frank C. Kracek, resolutions and legislation; Mrs. Harrison F. Fitts, house; Mrs. Albert M. Dickson, motion pictures; Mrs. Paul Butler, revisions; Mrs. Winslow H. Herschel, physical education; Mrs. Dudley F. Holtman, nature; Mrs. William Collins, music; Mrs. Lawrence O. Manley, international relations; Mrs. Edwin J. Cameron, drama; Mrs. Arthur Davenport, civics; Mrs. Benjamin H. Bennett, art.

Junior Women's Club of Chevy Chase will meet tonight in the Chevy Chase Women's Club house on Connecticut avenue at 8 o'clock. Miss Margaret Abbe, president, will preside.

The newly elected section chairmen will act as hostesses. They are: art appreciation, Harriet Marsden; bridge, Mary Frances Merz; civic, Nancy Knox; cooking, Harriet Wheeler; drama, Elizabeth Waters; german, Dorothy Savage; music, Mildred Williams; literature, Fay Espenschied; sports, Ruth White.

D. A. R. to Start Radio Series

The District Daughters of the American Revolution tomorrow will inaugurate a series of weekly and biweekly radio broadcasts over Washington stations. Mrs. Lee R. Penning is chairman and will present Maj. Sidney Morgan, of the State staff of the District National Guard, as the speaker on the first program. He will talk on the Battle of Yorktown, speaking at 10 a. m. over station WMAL.

Having as its guest of honor Mrs. Charles S. Lobingier, organizer of the first chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution in the Philippine Islands, Victory Chapter will hold its second meeting of this season Monday at 2 p. m. The gathering will be at the home of Mrs. Elgie G. Purvis at 4220 Reno road. Mrs. Lucius O. Chapin will assist Mrs. Purvis.

League of Penwomen Hold Fellowship Tea

Mrs. Ruth Norcross Hoxie was hostess yesterday at the fellowship tea of the D. C. League of American Penwomen in the Grafton Hotel Studio, assisted by Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel and Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt.

Guests of honor will be Auriel Bessemer, mural, landscape, and portrait painter, and Mrs. Bessemer. Mr. Bessemer will give an informal illustrated talk at 4:30 p. m. on "High Points of Today's Great Art in Contrast to the Art of the Past."

The radio group will meet in the studio in tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock with Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, chairman.

Phi Delta Delta to Give Luncheon Saturday for Dean Grace Hays Riley

DEAN GRACE HAYS RILEY, of the Washington College of Law, will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given Saturday in the Blue Room of the Shoreham Hotel by Beta Chapter of Phi Delta Delta, international legal sorority.

Masinia Rulien, who is a senior at Washington and editor in chief of the monthly paper, College Grits, is chairman of the luncheon committee. Assisting her are Margaret Heimiller, Mrs. Myrtle Sherrill, Alice Schlinger, Hazel Horton and Henrietta Campbell.

MAP SEASON—Mrs. Llewellyn N. Edwards, president of the Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America, will return to Washington this week-end to preside at the fall meeting of the national board of the society Monday at the headquarters, 1828 I street. She has been on a visit to State chapters in Ohio, Michigan and Illinois, and has been extensively entertained.

DEAN RILEY

ANIMAL STORY—With refugee problems abroad and relief problems at home, little is heard these days about the needs of waifs of the dog and cat families, but there are still those who care for them.

Tomorrow afternoon, in connection with the "go and see" program of the Community Chest, the Animal Rescue League will have a tea at the headquarters, 71 O street northwest, from 2 to 6. Mrs. Charles Augustus Simpson, the president, and members of the board of directors will receive and will show guests the "boarders" who are awaiting homes.

These, mostly dogs and a few cats, will have their own receiving line, with everybody in it. Some of them would gladly shake hands if they were invited to and all of them can be counted on for welcoming barks or meows.

The league quarters are well worth seeing and, if you love animals, it will be hard to leave without taking one of them home with you.

TO AID CHINA—A benefit sale for Chinese relief is being sponsored today at the Waters Travel Bureau, in the Trans-Lux Building, with members of the Women's City Club cooperating.

SHE KNOWS NEWS — Miss Janet Richards, veteran among women lecturers on current events and internationally known for her pioneer work in this field, will talk on "The Top of the News at Home and Abroad," at a benefit program and fashion show to be sponsored November 14 by the junior group of Mary Washington Chapter, D. A. R. It will be at the Washington Club, Seventeenth and K streets, where the chapter meets.

SPICE OF LIFE—There is no lack of variety in the program of the Takoma Park Women's Club, if this week's schedule is a fair sample. Monday the garden section met with Mrs. Frederick G. Lincoln, 6633 Barnaby street, and heard a talk on "Migration of Birds" by Dr. Lincoln and had luncheon at the Highlands. Yesterday the choral group (about 20 members) rehearsed. Today the physical training class meets in Town Hall at 10 o'clock, and at 1 the homemakers section will meet in the Maryland Library to discuss cooperation with the Red Cross. Friday, the executive board will talk business at the home of Mrs. F. A. Richmond, 7935 Orchid street.

Mrs. Paul W. Burk is president of the club, which has about 300 members.

OFF TO RICHMOND. The Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches will have to get along without its regular publicity chairman during its Missionary Institute the end of this month. Mrs. E. M. Reese, who has been handling the news for the council, will be in Richmond from today to October 25 attending the national convention of the Disciples of Christ as representative of the Women's Missionary Organization of the District. Mrs. Luther Frantz will pinch-hit on publicity during her absence.

Women Back Argentine Pact

The National League of Women Voters today expressed approval of effort to conclude a trade agreement with Argentina as "a desirable means of promoting sound international relations in the Western Hemisphere."

In a statement to the chairman of the committee for reciprocity information, Miss Marguerite M. Wells, president of the league, said: "Only once before has the League of Women Voters urged the negotiation of a particular trade agreement. That was in March, 1938, in behalf of the far-reaching trade agreement with the United Kingdom. At that time we emphasized that consideration of tariff problems was not a new development in the League of Women Voters.

"As early as 1924 we had begun the study of tariff with particular reference to the relation between tariff legislation and living costs. Subsequent study of the tariff by more than 550 local leagues throughout the country led to a belief in lower tariffs for the benefit of the general public. That was why the 1934 Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act was carefully studied, and why the league at its national convention in 1936 voted to indorse the Trade Agreements program."

Club to Hear Rep. Halleck

Representative Charles A. Halleck of Indiana will address the meeting of the Political Study Club at the Washington Club, on Saturday and Mme. Amelia Conti, internationally famous harpist, will be the feature artist at the meeting.

Mme. Conti was formerly first harpist of the Chicago Civic Opera Co. Beginning the study of music at the age of six, she was graduated with highest honors from the Royal Conservatory of Music of Milan in harp, piano and harmony. Mme. Conti, as famous abroad as in this country, has toured Italy with a symphony orchestra under Toscanini and in France with Camille Saint-Saens. Her engagements have also taken her to Argentine, Chile, Brazil, Central America and Cuba.

Mrs. Thora Hinshaw Seaton will preside during the musical period of the meeting.

Mrs. Edward E. Gann, president of the League of Republican Women, will be the guest of honor at the meeting. Other guests will include Mrs. Halleck, Mrs. Oscar E. Bland, wife of Judge Bland, Mrs. Charles S. Freeman, wife of Admiral Freeman, Mrs. William N. Doak, wife of the former Secretary of Labor, and Mrs. William Fitch Kelly, former president of the League of Republican Women.

2 Travel Talks Are Scheduled at Meetings Today

Two travel talks are scheduled for organization meetings today. Mrs. William Walter Smith, president of the Professional Writers' Club will be guest speaker at the luncheon of the Sibley Hospital Guild, and Mrs. Arletta Ahrens will address the World Fellowship luncheon of the Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. Smith will discuss conditions in Europe leading up to the present war, including observations she made during the past two summers on the Continent and in the Mediterranean area.

Mrs. Ahrens will describe countries on the west coast of South America—Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia and Chile. She will be in costume, and girls of the "Y. W." will model others she has brought from South America.

Mrs. Ahrens has traveled over that section by air, train and muleback, sometimes to places where she was the only white person. She has described the travels before the National Geographic Society, the Graduate Nurses Association and is on the program for the Maryland Academy of Science for 1939-40.

Newcomb Club to Hear Miss Doris Stevens

Miss Doris Stevens, will be the guest of The Newcomb Club of Bethesda, at the Kenwood Country Club. Miss Stevens, who is chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women, and was a delegate to the International Conference of American States, held in Lima, Peru, last December, will speak on "Political and Civil Rights of South American Women."

Mrs. William N. Morrel, president will preside. Hostesses for this meeting will be Mrs. Fred E. Carter, Mrs. John W. Mann, Mrs. George A. Myers and Mrs. Eugene B. Stevens.

Plan Annapolis Trip

The art section of the Park View Woman's Club, with Mrs. George Evans as chairman, will make a trip to Annapolis today, leaving Washington in cars early this morning, to spend the day visiting the many points of interest.

Go and See:

Well Babies Kept Well

The "business" of "keeping well babies well" brings a cheerful, chubby assortment of youngsters into the buff-and-blue rooms of the Child Welfare Society, at Children's Hospital.

Above the contented babble a mother can be heard: "My child hasn't had a sick day in his life!" They will be there today at a well baby "conference" that is part of the Community Chest "Go and See" tour from 2 to 4 p. m.

A bright-eyed "sample" of the society's work beamed over a mother's shoulder at a conference earlier in the week. "You wouldn't think, would you, that she weighed only 3½ pounds when she was born?" the mother said.

"She might not be alive if it hadn't been for the Child Welfare Society," she continued. "She was premature and had to stay in an incubator for 28 days. When she was six weeks old and weighed 6 pounds, we started bringing her here. Now she's 14 months old and she's had just one cold, last winter, when something went wrong with our heating system." The baby's healthy looks underscored every word.

Waiting For the Doctor to Make a Check-up

Those In Waiting Room Were Amused by This Little Girl Playing "I-spy"

Mothers who cannot afford to take their children to a private physician for regular check-ups bring them here and pay a small fee. But the Chest and an endowment fund provide for those who cannot pay anything.

Children from one month old to school age are brought at intervals, on two days a week for white and three days for colored. Seven doctors from the hospital staff and three nurses handle the stream of appointments.

It is only one service of the Child Welfare Society. Tantrums and over-shyness are discussed at a "habit clinic" with two psychiatrists and a psychiatric social worker.

Nurses follow up with home visiting, to see that the children are thriving between trips to the center. Mothers' classes will meet once a month this winter, with members of the Child Welfare staff discussing such problems as "early treatment of colds. How much should a child eat? What is a nervous child?"

The Child Welfare Society helps to watch over more than 1,200 children a year. Many of the mothers bring their first babies to the center. But nowhere is the work of the society more vividly shown than in a family whose first few children did not have the benefit of this preventive care and whose youngest child is blooming under it.

The society "is interested in the development of the whole child, in helping him to grow physically, mentally and emotionally into a well-adjusted child," Miss Caroline Sweeney, supervisor, said yesterday.

War Minstrel Wins Laurel Park Feature

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Quite as meaningless as the baseball fielding averages which last year revealed clumsy Zeke Bonura as the best defensive first baseman in the American League, are the forward-passing averages which professional football statisticians serve up weekly. The best forward passer doesn't necessarily have the best average.

POVICH

The averages don't discriminate between a clever down-the-field pass on which proper credit should accrue to the man throwing the ball, and the so-called flank pass to a player in virtually lateral territory either behind the line of scrimmage or only a couple of yards beyond it. A considerable portion of the pro league's passes are that type, and your Aunt Kate could scarcely miss chucking the ball into a receiver's hands.

The passer lucky enough to be with a team that specializes in the flank pass, such as the Redskins, will always come pretty close to leading the league in passing efficiency. Both Sammy Baugh and Ed Danowski, of the Giants, who have led the league in passing for the past two seasons, have boosted their averages with that type of pass. It was that sort of lob which enabled Andy Farkas to dash 96 yards for a touchdown on Sunday.

Tall Ends Help, Says Baugh

It is the flank pass that accounts for the amazing efficiency of such as Baugh and Danowski, who completed more than 50 per cent of their heaves during the past two seasons. Baugh also has received credit for completed passes on the so-called shovel pass which the Redskins use, although it is little more than an under-hand lob to a man circling behind the scrimmage line.

To the credit of Baugh and Danowski, however, they have established their ability to hit a receiver far down the field. They can throw the kind of a long pass that can win a game, as Baugh did when he rifled a perfect heave to Charley Malone in the fourth quarter to beat the Eagles at Philadelphia in the Redskins' opening game. That throw was a thing of beauty, perfectly timed, perfectly executed.

Baugh modestly admits that a forward passer's best asset is a nice, tall end with big hands, a sense of timing, and a fair turn of speed. But it also helps a bit to be able to throw that ball with something better than a general idea of where it is going and when it will get there. That has been the secret of the success of such passers as Baugh, Danowski, Benny Friedman and Davey O'Brien.

Pass Plays Don't Sap Team's Strength

The professional teams employ the forward pass not as the bulk of the colleges employ it; not as a weapon to open up the opposing team's massed defense in order to serve a running attack better, but as a ground-gaining device. The pass is a vital adjunct of their attack.

In his recent magazine article, Dutch Meyer, the Texas Christian U. coach and former mentor of Baugh, pointed out that Texas colleges do not employ the pass merely as a strategic weapon. Texas teams, like the pros, find ground gained by the use of the pass thoroughly as acceptable as ground gained by a running attack. In fact, Meyer pointed out, a running game uses up a team badly.

Thus it is no coincidence that the outstanding forward passers in college football in recent seasons—Baugh and O'Brien—are Texas-bred. In that section the teams rarely have to contend with the wet and muddy gridirons and slippery balls that make passing precarious. The football season is Texas' dry season and the conditions are always ideal for passing.

"Passer Gets Better Support in Pro Game"

Baugh has discovered also that it is easier to complete forward passes in professional football despite the presence of a defense better trained against passes. "The passer gets more help in pro football," he says.

"I completed a half dozen passes to Cliff Battles in 1937 that weren't even on our list of plays," said Baugh. "There were times when Battles wasn't even supposed to take a pass from me. He was supposed to be blocking for me. Whenever he missed a block, he knew it and wouldn't waste any more time trying to get his man. He'd scoot out into the open and call for the ball and I'd let him have it. In college football you don't get help like that."

It was the "B-B" alliteration of Baugh and Battles which was the greatest single factor in the Redskins' pennant triumph in 1937, but that combination was broken up with the passing of Battles in college coaching. The Redskins of 1938 were a punchless outfit, but a new alliterative promises to take them places this season.

It's the Filchock-Farkas duo. Understudying Joe Tolbert Baugh, Filchock has found a clever partner in the hard-running Farkas, who last week helped him to set a new league record of 99 yards for a completed pass play. Filchock has completed 18 out of his 26 throws this season and Filchock-to-Farkas is one of the important reasons why the Redskins lead the East in scoring.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Oct. 18.—Bri-i-i-nnnnng!

Hello . . .?

Hello, Bob?

Yeah.

This is Heinie Miller, in Washington.

Hello, Colonel. H'ya?

CONSIDINE

Sore as hell. I got off one of those Pan American clippers at Miami yesterday morning, coming back from the Chavez-Scalzo fight in Caracas, and the first thing hit my eye is a story saying that I awarded the fight to Chavez.

Didn't you?

Gosh, no. I'll tell how it happened. They invited me down there to see it, as president of the N. B. A. So when I got down there they asked me to referee. Well, I said no. What's the use of having local referees if you're going to bring somebody in, so the only thing I promised to be was a judge.

Uh-huh.

Well, the fight goes along and Scalzo gives Chavez a really terrible licking. Hit him with everything. The crowd was all for Chavez, of course, being a native fellow. They yelled their brains out for him, but when the verdict was announced, taking the fight away from Scalzo, it darn near resulted in a riot. These Venezuelans didn't want to win it that way. They climbed down out of those bleachers, right across the press box and into the ring, and lifted Scalzo up on their shoulders. Never saw anything like it. It's a good thing that referee and the other judge ducked.

How about yourself?

Somebody Pulled the Old Wire Gag

That's what I called you for. I gave Scalzo eight of the ten rounds. I scored it 52 points to 42, the way we figure in the N. B. A. There was never any real doubt. Every Venezuela newspaper man and radio fellow all yelled murder, even though the home town boy got the nod.

Well, why did the press association say that you gave it to Chavez?

Somebody pulled the old first-to-the-telegraph-wire gag on me. They figured the decision was so bad that it needed a little authority, so they used my name. They used to do that in the old days of boxing, when the first manager who got to the wire and sent in the result to the New York papers always won the fight. But I didn't think they still worked that stuff.

Yeah, Chevez has a couple of them around him. His manager is Jesse Losada, a Cuban sportswriter. Smart fellow. The fighter's good too, though not as good as Scalzo. Fights a little like Henry Armstrong, but can't hit like him. He's about the same color as Pedro Montanez, and he can take it all night. As foul as it was, we'll have to stand by the decision and make him the No. 1 challenger for Joey Archibald's title, with Scalzo just behind him, and Jeffra in there behind Scalzo.

Well, that's tough to get robbed like that.

It sure is. But, y'know, the fellow I feel sorry for is Pete Reilly. He manages Scalzo. I didn't think a manager ever went to the pains Pete did to get his fellow in shape. He went down there 42 days in advance to get used to the altitude. He took a ton or so of good canned food and even canned American meats. He took barrels of New York drinking water, an oxygen tent for Scalzo to sleep under, and an apparatus like an old style ether cone, to give Scalzo oxygen during the fight. Used it between every round and Scalzo was full of ginger right to the end.

Seems like a lot of trouble.

And the Venezuelans Yelled Murder

Well, what Reilly probably was hoping to do was beat Chavez then and there, come back here and knock off Archibald for the title, and then force Chavez to come up here for a title match, instead of going down there to meet Chavez on his home grounds. He beat him, too. If I were refereeing, like one of the news services said I was, I'd have held up Scalzo's arm so quick it would've broken it. But it did my heart good to see those Venezuelans raise cain when the robbery was announced—particularly after the mob had rooted for Chavez all the way. They're a great bunch of people down there. They got more money than y[illegible]'d believe was left in the world, and they're good enough sports [illegible]ell murder when they see such officiating as they got at that fight.

He's trying [illegible] even got Ambassador Corrigan working on it, but Chavez [illegible]ill duck it. Just one of those tough breaks . . . and Reilly [illegible]e 4,000 miles from Jacobs Beach, with all that canned stuff [illegible]ed oxygen.

Kurtsinger's Brilliant Ride Beats Field

Battles Down Stretch With Unerring at Side On Willing-to-Quit Son of Royal Minstrel

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 18.—Jockey Charlie Kurtsinger, who was riding horses when Jockey Paul Ryan was swinging on gates, gave a masterful exhibition of horsemanship here this afternoon that played a big part in a victory for War Minstrel, hard running geldnig from the barn of Mrs. Emil Denemark. In the midst of a dog-eat-dog stretch battle with Ryan aboard the Woolford Farm's Unerring, Kurtsinger had a tiring, willing-to-quit horse under him in War Minstrel.

The 5-year-old wanted to "dog it" but Kurtsinger had other ideas and impressed them upon the son of Royal Minstrel with his whip. War Minstrel got the signal, too, and

Terps Welcome Charley Keller 'Home' Today

Festivities Begin With Luncheon at Old Line Institution

Charley Keller, home run hero of the 1939 World Series, returns today to the campus of his alma mater and all indications are that the welcome given by the University of Maryland will surpass his reception last week at Frederick.

Keller Day festivities will begin with a luncheon attended by present and former Old Line athletes and coaches and end with a regimental review by the Maryland R. O. T. C. in Keller's honor.

In between, of course, there will be a round of speeches about the stocky, hairy-chested little outfielder who left Maryland only two years ago as a promising major league prospect and returns now as a big time star touted to be among the diamond's greatest.

Around the luncheon table will be Burton Shipley, Maryland baseball coach who gave Charley some of his earliest training; H. C. Byrd, president of the university; Col. Thomas D. Finley, head of the R. O. T. C. unit, and other faculty members, student government officers and members of the student body.

Principal speeches will be given by Tom Coleman, student body president, and Dr. Byrd and Shipley.

Among former Maryland athletic standouts also expect to be present are Johnny Stonebraker, a player with the Kansas City Ball Club last year; Waverly Wheeler, of the Piedmont League; Vic Willis, son of the famed old National League pitching ace, George Wood, a southpaw hurler with the Terps; Bill Bryant, Mike Surgent, one of the school's greatest football guards, and Charles Beebe, Ford Laker, Kyle Rubie and Ed Daly.

Billy Direct Sets New Trot Mark

Altamont, N. Y., Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Billy Direct, champion 5-year-old trotter, today rounded the Altamont half-mile track twice in 1:59¾ to clip another quarter second off the mile pacing record he set Columbus Day.

Driven by Bill Fleming, son of Vic Fleming, famous trainer and driver, the bay horse also paced a half mile in 59¾, tieing the record established by Greyhound at Goshen.

Al Weill Threatens To Sue if N. B. A. Bars Archibald

Court action to restrain the National Boxing Association from stripping Featherweight Champion Joey Archibald of his title was threatened yesterday and promptly drew the invitation from N. B. A. President Heinie Miller to "go ahead and sue."

ARCHIBALD

Acting at the direction of Al Weill, the champion's manager, Charles E. Ford, Weill's Washington attorney, described the proposed suit as a measure to protect "an innocent fighter" from "persecution" at the hands of the N. B. A.

"Let Weill go ahead and bring suit—we'll have a lot of fun," Miller said last night. "Then the public will see that Archibald actually holds the title because Weill ran out on an agreement he made with the N. B. A. before the championship elimination series in Providence, R. I. Archibald was to fight Petey Scalzo after the series."

In his statement, Ford charged that the N. B. A. has told Weill Archibald must fight Jeffra again for the title in 30 days or suffer nonrecognition. Miller refuted the statement with the explanation that the N. B. A. executive committee simply ruled that Archibald should make his next title defense against Jeffra.

Gyroscope Scores At Newmarket

Newmarket, England, Oct. 18 (A.P.).—Mrs. H. Leader's gyroscope and the Marquess of Dufferin's Orichalque today split the honors in the Cambridgeshire handicap, which was run in two sections, because of the large field.

Gyroscope, 3-year-old colt by Sir Walter Raleigh out of Girasole, put on a driving finish to beat His Highness by a neck with Hot Bun II third, four lengths back, Orichalque, 6-year-old horse by Pinceau out of Nine D'or beat Quartier Maitre by a length, with Never Surprised another length and a half back.

Gyroscope paid 100 to 6, Orichalque 25 to 1.

Because the customary acceptance regulation were foregone due to the war, there were 27 starters.

Top Women Golfers Play in Open Today

Forth Worth, Oct. 18 (A.P.).—Eight of the Nation's finest feminine golfers, representing four States, clash in the quarter-final round of the Texas Women's Open tomorrow.

In the upper bracket, Helen Hicks Harb, Long Island, meets Mrs. E. R. Hury, of San Antonio, and Betty Jameson, national titlist from San Antonio, draws Jane Cothran, Greenville, S. C.

Kathryn Hemphill, Greensboro, N. C., meets Mrs. Dan Chandler, of Dallas, in one lower division match. The other pits 18-year-old Elizabeth Hicks, Long Beach, Calif., against Fort Worth's Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite.

22,000 to See South Carolina Play Clemson

Clash Today in Columbia Marks 37th Meeting In State's Grid Classic

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 18.—The classic of South Carolina football, the annual Clemson-South Carolina game, will be played here tomorrow for the thirty-seventh time and indications pointed to a record crowd of 22,000 or more.

The kickoff is scheduled for 2 p. m.

The Tigers of Clemson are ruled almost overwhelming favorites to continue a winning streak and run their victories to five straight over the Gamecocks, although the latter, riddled with injuries this season, are set to give a good account of themselves.

Coach Jess Neely, of Clemson, who brought his team to Columbia tonight, reports his men "in good shape" and that "we are hoping to play a good game." He said he anticipated a hard battle.

The series started in 1896. Clemson has won 24 games to 11 for South Carolina. One game was a scoreless tie.

Two Former Nat Pitchers Are First To Feel Axe in Major Club Shakeup

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 18.—Manager Gabby Hartnett, of the Chicago Cubs, taking the first step toward what is expected to develop into a major shaking up of the club, said today that unconditional releases had been given Pitchers Earl Whitehilll and Jack Russell.

Whitehill, a left-handed veteran of competition in both major leagues, won four games while losing seven during the 1939 season as the Cubs finished in fourth place in the National League race. Russell, a right-hander, won four and lost three.

Earl Whitehill and Jack Russell were important members of the Washington pitching staff when the Nats won the pennant in 1933. Whitehill won 22 games that season against only eight defeats and scored Washington's only victory in the World Series with the Giants, pitching a shut-out game.

Russell was the relief ace of the 1933 Nats, winning 12 games and losing six.

Both Whitehill and Russell joined the Nats in the winter of 1932-33 during the series of trades that followed Clark Griffith's appointment of Joe Cronin as manager. Whitehill was obtained from Detroit in a trade for Fred Marberry and Carl Fischer, and Russell was acquired from the Cleveland Indians in ex-

Revised G. W. Backfield Shows Power

Colonials Expect Improved Attack Against the Citadel

George Washington's revamped backfield, with erstwhile Fullback Walter Fedora at left halfback and Paul Nugent, another sophomore, being groomed for considerable action, expects to show a much improved attack against The Citadel Friday night at Griffith Stadium.

Even without a higher caliber of play from Williamoski and Nugent, Coach Bill Reinhart looks forward to a more powerful attack than G. W. showed against Butler last week because Quarterback Sam Babich has the added experience of another game which he needed.

Considering the fact that Babich is calling signals for the first time in his football career after displaying promise last year of developing into one of the Colonials' greatest ends, Coach Reinhart believes his shift has been highly successful.

Bill Tilden Gains Quarter-Finals

Beverly Hills, Calif., Oct. 18 (A.P.).—Big Bill Tilden advanced to the quarterfinals of the National Professional tennis championships today by beating Bill Weissbuch, of Los Angeles, 6—3, 6—2, 4—6, 6—2.

Tilden faces Joe Founce, of Beverly Hills tomorrow. Founce contributed the major upset of the tournament by eliminating Bruce Barnes, Austin, Tex., 7—5, 6—4, 6—3.

Vincent Richards, an over-sized shadow of his former self, bowed out at the hands of Keith Gledhill, of Los Angeles, 6—0, 6—3, 6—2.

Four Local Contestants Withdraw

Mrs. Walter Stokes And Marion Brown Fail to Score Point Against Rivals

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A Staff Correspondent.

Ardmore, Pa., Oct. 18.—The reputation of Washington's all-star women's golf team dropped considerably here today as Philadelphia's 12-best links women routed the visitors, 47 to 7, in the singles and scotch foursome play over the famed Merion Cricket Club course.

The one-sided score was a big surprise to all concerned as in the home-and-home series last year the District team won here, but lost over the Chevy Chase course, breaking even for the year in total points.

Mrs. Joseph Dowdall's team was weakened by the last-minute withdrawal of four of the outstanding players, Mrs. Leo Walper, the city champion; Mrs. Betty Meckley, Mrs. Charlotte Stern and Mrs. David Clark, but against the brand of golf the Quaker City team played their presence could only have lessened the size of the score.

Marion Brown Beaten

The top duo of Mrs. Walter Stokes, the Middle Atlantic champion, and Marion Brown, her final-round opponent, were unable to score in either the morning or afternoon play against the hosts. In the No. 1 singles match Mrs. Harrison Flippin, the Philadelphia champion, defeated Miss Brown, 6 and 5, with an 83 to win all three points. Helen Sigel, the city and Pennsylvania State finalist, played the trap-infested course in 80 to defeat Mrs. Stokes, 3 and 2, despite the latter's 85.

In the afternoon Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, the six-time national champion, paired with Mrs. Flippin to score three more points over the alternate shots of Mrs. Stokes and Miss Brown, with Mrs. Vare's tremendous shots and putting touch showing the way.

Two players stood out for the District team, Mrs. R. L. Rose, the Maryland State tourney medalist from Congressional, who scored the only singles victory, winning 2½ points in the Nassau scoring system over Mrs. Jacob S. Disston. Mrs. Rose, of the Congressional Club, played one of the finest rounds of the morning.

Divide Three Points

Mrs. Bishop Hill divided 3 points with Mrs. Norman Lack, a former Pennsylvania State champion, in the individual play, and then paired with her Chevy Chase clubmate, Mrs. Landra Platt, to save the invaders from a shutout in the six Scotch foursome matches, winning a half point from Mrs. E. L. Howe and Anne Krumbhaar.

Mrs. Marion Davy won the back nine in the singles play against Mrs. Howe, a two-time National champion, who won her second straight National Women's seniors title last month. Mrs. L. G. Pray, the Manor Club titleholder, scored a point against 2 for Priscilla Janney and the District's other score in the individual play was a half point for Mrs. H. J. Simons against 2½ for Mrs. H. B. Stetson.

The defeat was the worst in intercity match history for the District linkswomen, and will leave them with quite a task when the Quaker City team repays the visit next year.

Mrs. Harvey Cooper, Mrs. Dowdall, Mrs. G. E. Stratemeyer and Louise Claytor were the other vic-

Sandlot Manager's Suggestion Gets Post's Approval

On the suggestion of Frank Goetzger, manager of the Mount Rainier Rambler sandlot football team, The Washington Post next week will inaugurate a service to sandlot elevens whereby names, weights, telephone numbers, etc., of teams seeking games will be listed in a special column each Wednesday morning in the late editions.

As Goetzger points out, the list would be a valuable service to managers in their search for weekend clashes. The Post's only stipulation is that teams wishing to be entered have all information in the sports department by 9 p. m. Tuesday. Incidentally, Manager Goetzger would like a 145-pound foe for Sunday. His address is 3110 Date street, Mount Rainier, and his number is Greenwood 1496-J.

Notre Dame's 'Talented Toes'—or How the Irish Win

Ev Malcolm Returns to Practice

Mayo to Replace Wood and Call Signals Against Irish at Cleveland

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 18.—After a rehearsal of its own offensive plays and a session against a green-jerseyed B squad eleven drilled using Notre Dame plays, the Navy team this afternoon completed its preparations for the clash with the Ramblers at Cleveland Saturday.

All contact work was avoided today and this policy will be continued tomorrow with only one hour available for practice. On Friday, the team will have a final workout either at the Cleveland Stadium or the grounds of the University School, where the party will stop during its stay at Cleveland.

Wood Out of Game

With Doc Wood, ace ball carrier, definitely out of the Notre Dame game, and probably other games, Ev Malcolm, who has an infected foot, practiced today and then returned to bed for more treatment. He is expected to start Saturday but should he be unable to do so, the veteran, Monty Whirehead, is ready to take his place.

Another backfield casualty was listed when Sherwood Werner was injured yesterday. He probably won't play Saturday.

Werner, a powerful but slow starting plebe back last year has increased in weight to 190 pounds and has shown much improvement this year, so that he had been placed next below Mayo and Lenz at the left half position, which Wood had been filling.

Mayo, taking Wood's place, will call signals Saturday and unless he is overmodest should do a lot of the ball carrying. It is remembered that he played against Notre Dame last year, in place of the injured Wood, and led the Navy team in yardage in a contest in which the Navy had a considerable advantage over the Ramblers in that line. He also led in total yards against Dartmouth this year.

Cliff Lenz is next in line at this position.

A heavy responsibility will fall on Bob Leonard, stocky youngester who comes from the section of Texas which produced Sammy Baugh and Davey O'Brien. Leonard is expected to do most of the passing and punting, a share of the ball carrying and will play the safety position on defense. Leonard, 165 pounds, was a plebe back last year, and has gone ahead by leaps this season. His classmate, Wes Gebert, who has returned from the sick list, will be his first understudy.

Duke U., Navy Play Scoreless Tie in Soccer

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 18.—Making their first appearance on the local soccer field, players of Duke University fought the Midshipmen to a scoreless deadlock here today in a game that went into two extra periods of five minutes each.

The Middies, holding an edge in general play throughout the game, kept the ball in the zone of the Blue Devils most of the time, and had a number of chances to score, but could not get the ball into the net. Duke also had opportunities, but suffered in a like degree. In the overtime periods, played in semidarkness and with floodlights on, neither team was able to muster much pep and there were no serious threats to score.

The game was one of few played away from home by Duke since the sport was recognized on a major basis at the North Carolina institution. Tomorrow the Middies will have a game with the cadets of the Danish sailing cruiser Danmark, now at anchor in the local harbor.

Fancy Exploits in Redskin Backfield Establishes Them as Prize Rookies

A shy, soft-spoken son of a small-town Texas grocer and a handsome 6-foot lad whose father operates a Kentucky night club—they are Washington's newest football heroes.

They are Dick Todd and Jimmy German, the dashing duo who have set Redskin followers to babbling with their fancy exploits in Coach Ray Flaherty's backfield. They are the prize pair of rookies who are establishing the Redskins as a potent contender for the National League title.

A year ago Todd was in the backfield of Texas A. and M., unreeling the same scintillating runs that are winning him a high place in the esteem of Washington fans. German, then one of Centre College's Praying Colonels, was being described as the Centre College football team.

From his talent scouts—college coaches, former players and personal friends—Coach Ray Flaherty heard about Todd and German. They recommended Todd with a reservation, however. He weighed only 170 pounds and might be too light for professional football. But Flaherty reasoned otherwise. If Todd could do all the things the scout said he could do, he was heavy enough. Todd was third choice on the Redskins' draft list.

Villanova Coach Clipper Smith was German's chief booster. "Sign him if you can," was Smith's advice to Flaherty. "Villanova has played Centre for two years and this German is the best football player I've seen in that time."

Flaherty made inquiries of both players. Did they want to play professional football? They did. Without quibbling, they accepted the Redskins' first salary offer and went into training with the team at Seattle.

With the Redskins, Todd is in the camp of an old enemy. He played on the 1936 Texas A. and M. team that beat the T. C. U. eleven featuring Sammy Baugh. When Flaherty asked Baugh of Todd's talents, the Redskin passing ace was brief but to the point. Said Baugh: "Grab him."

Sheridan Star As Irish Drill For Middies

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 18.—Bennie Sheridan, who started the season as fourth-team halfback, starred for the Notre Dame varsity today against a reserve squad representing the Navy.

The 155-pound Havana, Ill., boy scored two touchdowns on broken field runs and flipped a pass to Steve Bagarus for another. Final score of the scrimmage was 20 to 7, the "Navy" tallying an a pass over the middle of the Irish secondary.

The Notre Dame squad of 33 which will journey to Cleveland for the Navy game Saturday will be announced tomorrow afternoon by Coach Elmer Layden.

Jack Brown Lost To Purdue Eleven

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 18 (AP).—Purdue will be without the services of Jack Brown, regular halfback, in its opening game against Michigan State Saturday. He aggravated an old injury in the Minnesota batle.

John Galvin, sophomore and high school rival of Northwestern's Bill DeCorrevont at Chicago, will replace Brown. He hurled a touchdown pass to Dave Rankin at Minneapolis last week.

Indiana Drills On Fundamentals

Gillette, Shu Meet for Last Time Saturday

Rivals Face Fourth Time When Virginia Clashes With V. M. I.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Oct. 18.—When Virginia's Co-captain Jim Gillette and V. M. I.'s Captain Paul Shu walk to the middle of the field for the preliminaries to Saturday's football classic at Lexington, it will be the fourth and final meeting in collegiate competition for the State's two greatest players of their time.

Both have won as much renown as any back in their school's history since their first encounter as freshmen here three years ago. On that occasion, one qualified observer spoke of Shu as the finest freshman back he had ever seen, and it was largely due to Gillette's spectacular defensive play that kept "the Pounder" from scoring.

Dominated Game in '37

Back in Scott stadium as a sophomore in 1937, Shu dominated the scene as far as personal matters were concerned and loomed large in V. M. I.'s 27-to-7 victory over Virginia. Here last year, however, it might be said that Gillette held the upper hand when he paced the Cavaliers in their uphill climb to tie the score at 12 to 12.

This year's clash, which is the thirty-fifth in the Virginia-V. M. I. series, will be Shu's first Virginia game on Alumni Field, and likewise, Gillette's first in Lexington.

Handicapped by injuries, the Cadet leader has yet to strike the pace which carried him to the top in Southern Conference and national circles during two years of varsity play, while Gillette seems to have reached the peak of his starring career.

300 Yards Gained

On top of over 700 yards gained from running plays and on the receiving end of passes last year, Gillette's total gains to date this season exceed 300 yards against Hampden-Sydney, Navy and Maryland.

But with Gillette at his best, Virginia looks to the V. M. I. game with much quaking, realizing that Pooley Hubert has fashioned a powerful team in spite of losing eight or nine of last year's starters.

Boys' Club Diners To Hear Farkas Tonight at Feast

Thirty-nine youthful members of the central branch of the Boys Club of Washington will be honored guests tonight at Schneider's Cafe as the annual award banquet of the division is staged starting at 6 p. m.

The boys won their invitations to the banquet and their right to athletic awards by out-scoring more than 900 other members throughout the year in a race for sports points. Only six seniors are on the list, the rest being intermediate and juniors.

Principal speaker of the evening will be Andy Farkas, Redskin backfield ace, and other special guests will be Judge Edward Curran, Coach "Dutch" Bergman, C. R. McClure, J. Louis O'Connor and numerous members of the Boys Club board of trustees.

Chicago Maroons Expecting Beating

Chicago, Oct. 18 (AP).—Coach Clark Shaughnessy said today he expected his Chicago Maroons, trounced last week by Harvard, to take another drubbing Saturday from Michigan, but he juggled his line-up anyway.

One reason for the shakeup was injuries to two of his backfield mainstays—Johnny Davenport and Bob Howard. Another was a decision to experiment toward future games in some of which, at least, the Maroons stood to fare much better. Idle next week, Chicago then takes on Virginia, Ohio State, Oberlin and Illinois.

Arcade Pontiac Breaks Team Pin Record

Sets 642 Game Mark Then Scores Season's Highest Team Set, 1725

Arcade Pontiac, of the Washington Automotive, Bowling League, turned in one of the hottest exhibitions of the young pin season last night at Chevy Chase Ice Palace when it cracked an all-time team game record with 842, and then topped off the evening by breaking the season mark for team sets with a 1,725.

Mainly instrumental in the onslaught was Johnny Anderson, whose game of 159 and set of 406 was out in front of all competitors.

MEN'S DISTRICT LEAGUE

Columbia, making its first start in the league, got off to a rousing start by taking three straight from the home team at Georgetown Recreation Alleys. The winners had high game, 854, and high set, 1,859, while Capt. Ed Blakenly topped individual efforts with 149 and 427.

Behind Perce Wolfe's set of 387, and Karl Gochenour's game of 146, Rosslyn swept its match with Mount Rainier on the latter's alleys, Hugh Crowley turning in the best performance for the losers, a set of 366, and tying with Charley Nicholson for game honors with 142.

LADIES' DISTRICT LEAGUE

Arcadia had little trouble with Red Circle girls as it swept its series at Lucky Strike. Evelyn Windsor's high game, 136, and set of 367 paced the victors to both honors in the team division, 577 and 1,705.

At Rosslyn the defending ladies could manage for only the odd game behind Blanche Wootten's game of 152 and set of 365.

Ice Palace also had to be satisfied with a 2-1 victory over Arcadia ladies at Arcadia. Jesse Sacrey rolled one of her best games, 148, and totaled all her efforts for a high set of 347.

LUCKY STRIKE

Wardman Park Market increased its lead in the D. G. S. League with a 3-game sweep over Brandy Bread, Ellis Burka checking in high game, 137, and set, 386, while his mates hung up team highs of 612 and 1,764. Harry Rolfe rolled a 151 game and 403 set for Dave's Market, but it wasn't good enough to take the nod over Wilkins' Coffee. The latter captured two of the three games.

Maude Cunningham proved the star of Personnel's flashy performance in the Ladies' Commissioner and Miscellaneous League. Her game of 124 and set of 343 helped her team to a 485 game and 1,423 set.

F. A. A. No. 1 team took team honors in the Lucky Strike Ladies League with 504 and 1,434, though rollers of other teams captured individual honors. Anna McGoldrick, of Up-N-At-M, had 119 for game, and M. I. N.'s Edith Meredith rolled 312, good enough for high individual set.

Ruth Piatt, of Unity, was the star in her team's three-game triumph over Martha in the Eastern Star Ladies League. She had high game, 122, and high set, 318, and combined with teammates for a 526 game and 1,532 set.

ARCADIA

C. and C. five had high team set of 1,419 in the C. & P. Ladies League mainly due to the 117 game of Allen, but Totten, of General Office, checked in a 327 for individual set, and Toll No. 1 had 488 for team game.

Tornadoes and Examiners split Men's Dynamite League honors, the first credited with a 140 game by Larry Johnson which helped to a high team set of 1,582, and the second holding down high team set with 365 by Lee Rennolds, which was instrumental in a 538 game.

SILVER SPRING

High game of the night, 145 in the Friendship League was rolled by T. Clark, of Floral Tap Room, though Norman Wootten had a 142 which helped in his best set of 406. Sherer's Men's Shop had high team set, 1,690.

Cartographic turned back last year's champion Economic quintet when it rolled an all-time Interbureau record of 1,303 for team set. George Casper's 401 was best, and Bill Wright had the second-best set of 376.

Army Harriers Lose

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 18 (AP).—With Radcliffe and Cavalier finishing one-two in the winning time of 21 minutes 47 seconds, the Syracuse cross-country team defeated Army's harriers, 26 to 29, today.

Yanks Get Permission to Move Piedmont Farm From Norfolk

Newport News Is Likely Site; 20 Cities Want N. Y. Class B Club

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Oct. 18.—The New York Yankees, operators of the Norfolk franchise in the Piedmont League, furnished the fireworks at the annual directors' meeting here today, when George Weiss, head of the Yanks' farm system, asked for and was granted permission to move the Tars to another city, or to play all home games in Portsmouth.

Weiss said the condition of Bain Field, home of the Norfolk club, caused Yankee officials to take this "precautionary move."

"We just can't play ball at Bain Field any longer," Weiss said. "The stands need to be renovated and we want a park with a longer right field fence. If nothing is done to Bain Field, we have the permission of the league directors to move the franchise or play all our home games in Portsmouth's new $95,000 plant."

Yank Farms Wanted

Another Yankee official at the meeting said 20 large cities have written President Ed Barrow of the Yankees, asking that the world champions put class B teams in their towns "and they offer to build us a park, according to our specifications and rent free."

Neither New York representatives mentioned Newport News when they talked of taking the franchise out of Norfolk but several officials of major league farm clubs have investigated the shipbuilding town as a site for a team, it was understood.

Directors had a stormy session over the split-gate rule in the league which gives the visiting club 30 per cent of the gross receipts.

Curfew Hour Clarified

President Ralph Daughton, Norfolk attorney, succeeded in clearing up the "curfew law." The new rule reads: "An inning cannot be started after 11:50 p. m., but if an inning is started before 11:50 p. m., it is to be completed regardless of time."

The Yankees led an unsuccessful fight on the Shaughnessy playoffs in the Piedmont League. They asked that the split season be brought back, but they could get no support on the move and the bill was tabled for further discussion in December.

The directors also clarified the by-laws by ruling that no double-header shall be played on the first or last day of a series where the visiting team has to travel more than 120 miles, except with the visiting team's consent.

Mrs. Hall Winner In Final Ladies Golf at Columbia

Mrs. J. Hall, with a 79, won the 77-blind bogey tournament yesterday at Columbia Country Club in the last of the ladies' club events. Mrs. B. Hartic had an 85 low net, while Mrs. F. G. Crisp set the low putt mark with 30.

Mrs. H. C. Fisher and Mrs. R. McChesney were in a tie for high net. Low gross for the best six out of the ten events held during the season went to Mrs. J. F. Gross, who had 555. Mrs. J. A. Marr took low net prize with 487.

The consolation prize for the best six went to Mrs. J. P. Harper, Mrs. J. M. Epperly and Mrs. A. S. Gardiner, who finished in a tie.

change for First Baseman Harley Boss.

The Boston Red Sox acquired Russell on waivers in mid-season of 1937 and gave him his release at the end of the year. He was a free agent until signed by the Cubs at the start of 1938. His relief pitching last year was a powerful factor in the Cubs' pennant triumph. Thirty-four years old, Russell specialized in a sinker ball.

Whitehill was traded by the Nats to the Cleveland Indians in a three-cornered deal in 1936, which also involved Pitchers Thornton Lee and Jack Salveson. After a season with the Indians he was given his release and signed last year with the Cubs. Famed particularly for his sweeping southpaw curve, Whitehill is 35 years old. He spent ten seasons with the Tigers.

Gophers Drill for Buc Trick Aerials

Coach Bernie Bierman was loudly critical when a number of plays caught the defense unawares. He also turned on the "heat" in criticizing the preliminary blocking drill with which he apparently was

Georgetown Prep Beats Wilson, 6-0, on Pass in 4th Period

Decker Takes 15-Yd. Heave From Barrett And Runs 40 Yards For Touchdown

With a single flashy excursion into the chilly air, good for 55 yards and the only touchdown of the game, Georgetown Prep at Garrett Park with a 6-0 triumph launched its grid season yesterday over a green Woodrow Wilson eleven.

"Sport" Barrett, lanky triple-threater of the Little Hoyas, was on the throwing end of that bullet-like aerial over the center of the line and Ben Decker was on the receiving end. The latter snatched the ball out of a huddle of Wilsonites on the Presidents' 40 and twisted over the goal with only one tackler making a serious attempt to get him.

With that successful effort, coming on the first play in the final period, Georgetown Prep finally got rolling. It made another threat a few minutes later when husky Bob Boylan ripped off 20 yards to the Wilson 30, but there it stopped with a penalty for holding. And again the Prepmen advanced as the game ended, this time their push reaching the Wilson 25.

Wilson, on the other hand, supplied Prep fans and players plenty to worry over throughout the game. A punting duel in the first quarter ended with neither team holding an edge. As the period waned Wilson made a march down the field, picking up three first downs, and bringing the ball to Prep's 3. On the first play of the second period, however, Wilson was responsible for the costliest of numerous fumbles it made. The ball passed to Prep on the 5, giving Barrett a chance to kick out of danger.

The only President back able to make consistent gains through an alert and surprisingly heavy Prep line was squat little Ray Banello. He gave Wilson most of its first downs, and was credited with only one fumble in the fumble-ridden clash. Outstanding, of course, for the Prepmen were Decker and Barrett, though a diminutive center, Paul Stewart, played twice as much ball as his size warranted. Bob Boylan, thrown into the game in the final quarter, proved one of the ablest line-busters of the game.

Frank Skotnicki To Pilot Terps Against Rutgers

Frank Skotnicki, senior blocking halfback, will captain the University of Maryland eleven in its game with Rutgers at New Brunswick Saturday, Coach Frank Dobson announced yesterday after an inter-squad scrimmage.

Skotnicki, recovered from a leg injury and the sinus trouble that kept him out of most of the Terps' games last fall, is now playing up to old-time form and is considered one of Maryland's most valuable players and one of the best blockers in the District of Columbia college ranks.

Big Bob Brown, star tackler, who has been nursing a bad knee, is back at practice, but is not expected to start against Rutgers. He will, however, be ready for Maryland's home-coming game with Florida at College Park October 28.

The Terp gridmen will leave by train tomorrow evening for New Brunswick. The school's 65-piece band and officials and other rooters will make the trip on a train leaving Saturday at 8 a. m.

Hoyas to Use Second Team Against Bucknell Saturday

For the dual purpose of resting its regulars for the more important game with George Washington the following week and giving its reserves needed experience under fire, Georgetown is expected to use its first team sparingly Saturday against Bucknell.

Further, because the stands at Lewisburg, Pa., will be teeming with G. W. scouts eager to get their last look at Georgetown before the Hoyas face the Colonials at Griffith Stadium, Georgetown probably will play under wraps as far as is possible.

This same procedure was used with indifferent success against Roanoke because the Georgetown reserves were unable to score and the regulars, inserted briefly, accounted for all of the team's points in a 25-to-0 contest. Since then, however, these reserves have shown fine improvement and Coach Jack Hagerty is confident they will be able to hold their own with the Bisons.

Among the Hilltop "seconds" who will see considerable action are: Backs, Ben Bulvin, Frank Meglen, Lou Falcone and Ken McNichol, and linemen, John Lascari, Albert Lujack, John McMahon, Arthur Lemke, Al Blozis and Bill Wixted. There is a possibility, too, that Jack Spencer, one of the most promising Georgetown halfbacks, and Lou Ghecas' chief understudy, will return to action after a two week layoff entailed by a shoulder injury sustained in practice.

Reds Daly, another Hoya dependable who has been out since the Temple game with a bad shoulder, definitely will play in the Bucknell game and has been designated team captain, a role intended for him in last week's Syracuse game.

G.W. Frosh Beat Quantico, 14-7

Special Dispatch to The Post

Quantico, Va., Oct. 18.—George Washington University's freshman eleven rolled up its third straight victory today, defeating the Quantico Marines, 14 to 7, in a hard-fought game. Both Colonial scores came on long passes from Don Pinnow, crack G. W. back, to Harry Sortal, rangy end. Dan Snyder converted both extra points, running his string in this department to eight straight. The G. W. cubs previously defeated Dickinson Seminary Prep and the University of Maryland freshmen.

Espadin Wins Rose Tree Fox Hunt Feature

Court Time Also Scores at 80th Fall Meeting at Media, Pa.

By the Associated Press

Media, Pa., Oct. 18.—Mrs. Elizabeth C. Buck's Espadin and Brooks Parker's Court Time won the feature races today at the opening of the Rose Tree Fox Hunting Club's eightieth fall race meeting before a crowd of 5,000.

Espadin, ridden by J. F. Colwill, jr., raced home the winner of the Sycamore Mills plate race for amateur riders, a three and a half mile timber course. Thomas McKlevey's Ara-Pal, ridden by Johnny Harrison, hooked his knees on the last timber barrier and fell after leading the early part of the running. Harrison was slightly bruised.

Court Time, ridden by Robert Jones, finished a good three lengths ahead of the field in winning the two mile fox catcher plate brush race. Corky, a local favorite, faltered after an early lead and finished second.

Eleanor O, a four-year-old chestnut filly, defeated several favorites in taking the Edgemont plate flat race of about six furlongs. Other winners were Iuka in the agricultural stakes flat race for farmers' horses and shot up in the Middletown barrens plate event, a mile flat race for amateur riders.

Arlington Grid Loop to Open

Arlington County Federation of Boys Clubs begins its 135-pound football competition tomorrow night at Ballston Stadium when the first regular Friday night double-header brings together St. Charles Boys Club and Clarendon Boys Club.

Under an agreement with Howard King, new general manager of the stadium, the federation will also have use of the field each afternoon until dark for practice.

20 Per Cent Increase

Guyon, Card Star, to Play In Miami Tilt

Grider Benched With Stomach Ailment, Now Recovering

A silver lining in Catholic University's dark cloud of injuries was contained in the announcement last night that Joe Guyon, Indian star, would be ready for the Miami game on October 27.

Guyon, benched with a stomach ailment, has been taking light drills and reports he is slowly rounding into condition again. Joe became ill following the Elon game and it was feared his football career was ended.

Meanwhile, Coach "Dutch" Bergman is perplexed over the coming game with West Virginia Wesleyan at the Brookland Stadium this Saturday. It was learned that Art Sabo, star guard who was injured in the Detroit game, definitely would not start.

Calabrese took a severe beating in the Detroit game, playing almost the entire contest. A thorough examination disclosed the Cardinal leader had no broken bones but suffered several painful bruises. As if that weren't enough, Mike Cherello, the sophomore replacement for Calabrese, is also out with injuries. That leaves Bergman with only Jack Schroder, another sophomore, ready for action.

Bergman indicated he may start Fred (Bingo) Stant, the intercollegiate middleweight boxing champion, in one of the guard positions. Stant has been playing a great game this year and is one of the most improved men on the squad.

Tech J. V. Eleven Beaten by 7-0

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 18.—George Washington High School's junior varsity eleven preserved its undefeated, unscored-on record with a 7-0 victory over the McKinley Tech jayvees, of Washington, here this afternoon. It was the second victory for the Little Presidents, who battled to a scoreless tie with the Episcopal High juniors in their opening game.

Two breaks, coming in quick succession, made possible the winners' only to score midway of the third quarter. Their first opportunity came when Leo Graumann recovered a Tech fumble on the 22-yard line, but after plowing through for a first down on the 9-yard stripe the Presidents were stopped on the 4-yard line. Here they got their second break when Wilson's high kick, punted from behind the goal line, was caught by the wind and swept back to the 2-yard line where it was downed. "Chink" Daniels went over for the score in two plunges.

Here's Chance to 'Cash In' On Knowledge of Football

If you think you know all the answers—or most of them, at least—here's a good chance to prove it and cash in by winning two of the ten tickets to the eagerly awaited Georgetown-George Washington football game Saturday, October 28, in Griffith Stadium.

All you have to do is pick the most winners in the 15 collegiate gridiron clashes listed on the form below in this week's edition of The Washington Post's weekly contest.

Last week 22 "dopesters" were rewarded because of the accuracy of their predictions. The five most perfect forecasts win a pair of tickets, but in event of ties duplicate awards are given. You don't have to predict the scores, only the winners. If the game looks like a tie, say so—and remember only one entry blank per person will be accepted. Mail your entry to "The Football Contest Editor" of The Post before the deadline, Friday at 11:01 p. m.—and hope.

Strabo Scores Head Victory in Feature at Jamaica Track

Wright Rides 9-to-2 Shot To Victory

Bulwark Second And Sir Marlboro Third; Wright Scores Double

By the Associated Press

Jamaica, N. Y., Oct. 18.—Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin's veteran Strabo, whose stretch rushes have been coming too late in recent endeavors, broke the ice by scoring a head victory in the Chance Play (class C) Handicap of a mile and a sixteenth here this chilly afternoon. Wayne Wright, scoring a double astride the son of Pompey, brought the 9 to 2 shot along in the nick of time. The journey was completed in 1:45 1-5.

Victor Jory's Bulwark drove to the place, a length and a half in advance of Conn Smythe's Sir Marlboro. The latter, a stakes winner in Canada in his last outing, was backed into 13 to 5 favoritism with Don Meade in the saddle.

The race was run to order for the plodding Strabo, which is the only horse in Mrs. Iselin's stable. Thelluson and Sir Marlboro staged a suicidal duel for the lead, with the result that both faltered and came wide into the stretch. Thelluson on the outside of the fatigued favorite.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIAR BIRD, $5.90, $4.00, $3.20; WABAUNSEE, $9.20, $6.40.

BRIAR BIRD, off well and sent to front of BURGOO TRAIL leaving backstretch, took command with good energy and drew out gradually. WABAUNSEE was forced to go between horses to better position and hung after getting closest to pace in early stretch. BURGOO TRAIL had been early speed and weakened gradually. CHALDEON showed early speed, but quit badly. RINGIE was raced wide throughout and showed a good effort.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:06. Off 2:08. Winner, L. Straus' ch. f. (3), by War Hero—Millsade. Trained by L. G. Blume. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14.

SAMMIE									6	2.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAR MINSTREL, $12.00, $5.20, $3.80; UNERRING, $3.30.

WAR MINSTREL, well handled, was not hurried to backstretch, came through on inside approaching half pole, took brief lead over UNERRING and held on under severe punishment to barely last. UNERRING was sent through on inside of SAVAGE BEAUTY to get to front and came again after being displaced and was wearing down winner under punishment at end. PERNIE was never able to menace leaders and ran an even race. SAVAGE BEAUTY had speed for an eighth of a mile, but quit badly. REX FLAG, JOANNY was hard ridden, moved up menacingly in stretch and was tiring at close. RAVENHURST ran out at first turn and was taken up.

THIRD RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 2:36. Off 2:36. Winner, Mrs. P. Corning's b. f. (2), by Peanuts—Inhibition. Trained by M. Hirsch. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:45⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TODDLE ON, $10.90, $4.00, $2.80; GENERAL MOWLEE, $2.60, $2.20; AL AU FEU, $3.20.

TODDLE ON, saving ground to backstretch, disposed of EVENING SHADOW to get to front and withstood long drive to come again after losing lead to GENERAL MOWLEE and was up in final stride. GENERAL MOWLEE was taken up when blocked at first turn, was steadied along to far turn, came to outside of TODDLE ON, improved position and lead, but faltered right at end. AL AU FEU, slow to get under way, improved position gradually in final half. EVENING SHADOW was rushed to front, set pace under hustling tactics and weakened when caught.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:36. Off 4:36½. Winner, Mrs. F. Becker's ch. g. (8), by Rolled Stockings—Escarpolette. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:47⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOWARD, $21.80, $7.80, $5.20; THE RUNNER, $6.80, $4.90; GOLDEN VEIN, $4.60.

HOWARD, lacking early speed, went to outside for racing room leaving backstretch and came with rush to win driving away. THE RUNNER worked his way to contention early, took command and closed gamely, but could not resist winner. GOLDEN VEIN dropped far out of it at start and came with rush between horses through stretch.

Daily Double, BRIAR BIRD and PENELOPE D., Paid $21.10.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:06. Off 3:09. Winner, Tomaras Stable's b. c. (3), by Cohort—Afterthought. Trained by H. J. Bundscho. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:46⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OVERSIGHT, $5.90, $3.70, $3.00; MANYMOR, $7.90, $4.80; CONNIE PLAUT, $4.40.

OVERSIGHT, much the best, was allowed to settle into stride and trailed to backstretch, improved position gradually on outside to stretch, took command boldly and won easily. MANYMOR moved up between horses with rush and closed gamely, but was no match for winner. CONNIE PLAUT, slow to begin, came wide for racing room, but hung in final eighth. CHEROLIZE moved up to press pace of CLAPAIR and weakened in closing test.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,500. Grade B Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:35. Off 3:38. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's b. f. (5), by Royal Minstrel—War Feathers. Trained by J. Carter. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 1:42⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRAVE HEART, $23.60, $8.30, $4.60; MY CREST, $5.90, $4.30.

BRAVE HEART, first away, shook off early challenge of ADHELMAR and was kept to hard drive to end. MY CREST improved position on inside and fought it out with good courage. FERNBRAKE raced on outside while improving position in stretch and was three-sixteenths. JOANNY was hard ridden, moved up menacingly in stretch and was tiring at close. RAVENHURST ran out at first turn and was taken up.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:06. Off 4:07. Winner, Mrs. E. Trueman's blk. f. G. U. Frosh in Shape

Meet W.&M., Of Norfolk, Tomorrow

'Hap' Hardell's Club Called 'Ready' After Beating Little Owls; No Injuries Listed

With a victory over Temple U. frosh to his credit in his inaugural start as a collegiate football coach, Elmer (Hap) Hardell, Georgetown's freshman mentor, has his first-year Hoyas ready for their battle with William and Mary, Norfolk Division, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in Griffith Stadium.

No serious injuries hit the squad in the Temple clash, and the former McKinley High grid wizard expects his club to take tomorrow's foe in stride. The game, as a matter of fact, will be mostly for the purpose of sounding out Hardell's youngsters for their biggest clash of the season, with George Washington U. frosh next week-end.

That game, at which Hardell's former grid students at Tech are expected to turn out en masse, will be for the mythical District frosh title and Hardell particularly wants to win it. The Little Colonials hold a victory over Maryland frosh as their outstanding effort of the season to date.

'Hate-Man' Gives Setters a Few Pointers

Negro Heavies Slated for Top Spot at Arena

Al Hart, 220-pound Washington Barracks colored fighter, who has won eight straight fights in Washington—seven by knockouts—will run up against his first real opposition Monday night in Turner's Arena when he meets Jim Howell, of New York, in an 8-round main event.

For the first time, Hart will be fighting an opponent who can stand up with him and trade punches. Howell, who often fills the role as sparring partner of Joe Louis, tips the scales at around 230 pounds and is a hard-punching, dusky edition of Two-Ton Tony Galento.

The statuesque Washington colored heavyweight, although he knows how it feels to be knocked out, has shown a dynamite punch in his local appearances and last week knocked out Jack Rose, of New York, with that short right in 56 seconds of the first round. It was a clean knockout, and Rose was out for about three minutes after he pitched forward to hit the hard ring floor on the side of his head.

Eddie Drear, Houston middleweight, meets Irish Eddie Pierce, Dublin product, in another 8-round match on the card, which will feature a 6 and a pair of 4-round matches.

Texas Aggies Now Set Pace In Southwest

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 18.—Power, cunning, experience and reserves—four pillars of any good football team—loft the undefeated Texas Aggies to a National perch they have missed in the Southwest's dramatic rise of the past decade.

Conquerors of Oklahoma Aggies, Centenary, Santa Clara and Villanova—permitting only 10 points while amassing 86—the Aggies next Saturday start knuckling down to genuine business, playing six straight conference foes.

"No later than Saturday we could be just another football team,' wailed Coach Homer Norton. "We play Texas Christian, and undoubtedly they will be the hardest to check so far. Psychology definitely favors T. C. U. They've piled up better than 1,000 yards but lost three straight. They're due."

Not since 1927 and the great days of Joel Hunt have the Aggies looked so dangerous. Last Saturday they trampled Villanova, undefeated since 1936, by 33-7.

Norton failed to add that he jerked his first string after they had built up a 33-0 half-time lead.

Power—Jarrin' John Kimbrough, a fine 210-pound fullback, has averaged 3.29 yards on 47 tries, being stopped at the scrimmage line only twice. He leads conference scorers with five touchdowns. The team has piled up 583 yards rushing and 360 passing for a 943 total against the enemy's 308. Sophomore Derace Moser, a whale of a tailback, has averaged 5.19 yards on 31 carries. The 204-pound line, led by Guard Marshall Robnett, all-America candidate, perpetually burns a red stop light.

Cunning—The passing attack, with Moser, Marion Pugh and Walemon Price hurling, has netted 360 yards out of an even .500 pitching average. A tight pass defense has held enemy aerials to 14 completions out of 63 throws, with the Cadets intercepting 7.

Villains Parade On Wrestling Card Tonight

The Golden Terror, whose black and gold aura of mystery never has been penetrated in the local ring, will swap groans with "Bad Boy" Brown, an old Texas villain, tonight at Turner's Arena, Fourteenth and W streets northwest, in a match co-featured with the latest chapter of the Jack Hader-Don Evans feud.

Evans and Hader almost precipitated a riot in a preliminary at the wrestling emporium last week, and Promoter Joe Turner was so tickled he promptly put the boys in a headline spot for tonight's business, which starts at 8:30 p. m.

Quite an authority on villainous tactics, the Terror outmaneuvered Bob Wagner last week to win, but "Bad Boy," who hails from Dallas, issued an original proclamation yesterday stating he will "tear that bum to pieces."

This horrifying sight will be performed under the watchful eyes of Referee Casey Berger, a gentleman of the old school, who never has been hooted for his decisions and who earned this honor when Bortnick was withdrawn.

In the preliminaries, Johnny Katan will tackle Bibber McCoy, Ralph Garibaldi meets Abie Coleman, and Emil Dusek meets White Gorvo.

Western Maryland Faces Wake Forest

Westminster, Md., Oct. 18 (AP).—Coach Charlie Havens had four backfield men heaving passes tonight, hoping to perfect Western Maryland's aerial attack before the Terrors take on Wake Forest Saturday.

Baering Down

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer

Our undercover man in the blanket factory says although Turkey and Russia don't like each other they are still friendly.

That makes just as much sense as anything that's happening in Europe these days. Something like sky writing in invisible ink.

Europe had to fight this war to kill the soldiers they claimed they bumped off in the last one. Finland is trying hard to keep neutral but that's tough in a game that is all playing field and no reserved seats.

P. S. Senator Borah is not the Cato of Idaho. Borah doesn't care whether Carthage falls or not so long as it doesn't fall for hokum.

Schwellenbach Sees Danger to U. S. Liberties

Depression, War and Subversive Teaching Are Threat, He Says

American civil liberties are in graver danger than at any time since the birth of the Nation, Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, asserted last night.

The crisis arises, the Senator said, from the conjunction of ten years of depression, the outbreak of war in Europe and the spread of political doctrines subversive to democracy.

"In our desire to defend against improper outside influences, we run the risk of destroying the civil liberties of our people and by so doing destroying our very democracy," he warned.

Speaks at Dinner

Senator Schwellenbach spoke at a dinner of the Washington branch of the American Civil Liberties Union, held in the Ginghazi Club.

On the same program, Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, defended self-regulation of the radio industry as "the control most flexible and responsive to the public will."

He likened a radio program to "a newspaper with only one page—the front page," pointing that definite limitations on the amount of radio time demand an element of regulation in the industry.

Schwellenbach saw as the surest guarantee of American liberties a recognition of the "fundamental soundness of the institutions under which we live," combined with awareness that stagnation can destroy the country's institutions.

Gardner Jackson "Terrified"

Gardner Jackson, chairman of the meeting, described himself as "terrified" by his observations on a recent tour of California, where he found the "$30 every Thursday" movement commanding the support of thousands.

"The great tragedy," he said, "is that the program operates on the emotions of people who are terribly in need and that the opposition to it comes mainly from groups that have blocked efforts to solve the unemployment problem in California."

Jackson condemned "some people in high positions in the Administration" whose words and action, he said, are contributing to the growth of "war hysteria" in the United States. Such hysteria leads inevitably to the negation of civil rights, he declared.

Frail Murderer Must Return to Prison in Georgia

Austin, Tex., Oct. 18 (AP).—Barring last-minute court intervention, Richard G. Gallogly, 30-year-old murderer, must return to a Georgia prison where, he fears, "they'll kill me in two years."

Gov. O'Daniel today authorized extradition of the pale, slight lifer who sough asylum in Texas from claimed mistreatment.

U. S. Postoffice Flies Swastika

Fulton, Mo., Oct. 18 (AP).—A crude flag bearing the Nazi Swastika fluttered over the postoffice building here this morning until incensed persons found someone to climb the flag pole to tear it down.

While most persons took it for a joke, they expressed disapproval in no uncertain terms, and a postal inspector was called here to investigate.

Asks $100 Alimony To Care for Beauty

Los Angeles, Oct. 18 (AP).—Maryon Curtis, screen actress, detailed to a court today the requirements that make up the $1,195 a month temporary alimony she is asking from George Givot, radio and movie comedian.

There were about $150 a month for rent in the event she is not permitted to continue living on Givot's $90,000 ranch; $250 a month for food, $100 for clothing, $100 for medical expenses, $100 for beauty care, $25 for laundry, $20 for utilities and $100 to $200 for servants.

Hungary Arrests 110 in Pro-Nazi 'Death Legion'

Budapest, Oct. 18 (AP).—The government announced tonight 110 persons had been arrested in a pro-Nazi "death legion" plot to form a Hungarist workers state by violence.

The official statement, the first official mention of the conspiracy, confirmed earlier private sources which said the aim of the death legion was to overthrow the government and assassinate numerous political opponents.

The statement said investigation had shown those involved were former members of the dissolved Hungarist party who had taken an oath of allegiance to Ferenc Szalasi, the "Hungarian Hitler" who is now serving a three-year jail term.

Dissension within the rival Nazi groups, split by Adolf Hitler's agreements with Soviet Russia, meanwhile broke out in the Hungarian press, with the leading Nazi morning paper, the Magyarsag, blaming petty jealousies.

Traffic-Police Merger Draws Citizens' Fire

Independent Bureau Must Be Maintained, Says Carruthers

L. A. Carruthers, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said yesterday his organization opposed the merger of the Traffic Department with the Police Department, as outlined in the Seal plan for reorganizing the District Government.

The association president said the "independence of the traffic bureau must be maintained."

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal has listed the merger as one of his methods of reorganizing the local set-up in a bill he is drafting for the commissioners.

On the other hand, the association president said he favored creation of a labor department for the District. He said most of the States have a similar agency.

At the same time, it was disclosed that Seal has recommended the merger of the municipal and police courts into one tribunal and modernization of the local corporation laws.

The corporation counsel has been studying the court setup in other cities and was particularly impressed by the system in Chicago where there is one municipal court, consisting of 27 judges presided over by a chief justice.

Caruthers said a special committee, headed by Wilbur Finch, would make a report on reorganizing the District government.

G. O. P. Gives Up Idea of Parthian Shot Convention

By the Associated Press

The idea of postponing the 1940 Republican National Convention until after the Democrats have picked their candidate and platform is being regretfully put aside by party leaders.

Many of them have thought longingly of the advantages that might accrue from such a move. It would allow them to know in advance the identity of the Democratic Presidential candidate. They could reply to the Democratic platform in their own platform rather than through the acceptance speeches of their candidates.

However, one Republican strategist said, "I cannot conceive of the Democrats yielding us that advantage. President Roosevelt and Jim Farley are too wise to give it to us. They can outwait us."

Any party in power maintains a Nationwide organization ready to function in a campaign on short notice. Its party machinery operates day in and day out. The party out of power maintains only the skeleton of an organization and must build up to its organization after the convention.

"The psychological effect would be bad," one prominent Republican said. "It would appear that we had nothing to offer in the way of a program and that we were wholly dependent on strategical maneuvering to win the campaign. It would magnify the question of a late convention out of its true proportions."

Col. Fiebeger, Indian Fighter, Strategist, Dies

Former West Point Instructor Helped Capture Geronimo

Col. Gustav J. Fiebeger, 81, U. S. A., retired, distinguished engineer and Indian fighter, died yesterday in Walter Reed Hospital after a week's illness.

In 1882 as a first lieutenant he participated in the expedition of Gen. George Crook, which resulted in the capture of the Apache chief, Geronimo.

For 26 years Col. Fiebeger served as professor of civil and military engineering at West Point. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal as an instructor at the academy.

Col. Fiebeger was the author of the following textbooks: "Civil Engineering," "Field Fortifications," "Permanent Fortifications," "Elements of Strategy," "Camaign and Baattle of Gettysburg" and "Campaigns of the American Civil War."

Retiring in 1922, Col. Fiebeger was recalled to actvie duty with the Army War College here in 1924 and 1925.

He leaves a daughter, Miss Julia F. Fiebeger, with whom he lived at 2318 Nineteenth street northwest.

Funeral services will be held Friday at West Point.

Mrs. G. A. Webster Dies; Co-Founder Of School Here

Mrs. Jessie Fraser Webster, 68, co-founder of the Marjorie Webster School, died yesterday at her temporary residence, 3200 Sixteenth street northwest.

After serving as manager of one of the temporary hotels for wartime Government employes, she founded the school with her daughter, Miss Marjorie Webster, in 1920. She was a member of the Woman's City Club. She lived here at 1640 Kalmia road northwest.

Besides Miss Webster, she is survived by two sons, Donald Webster, of Washington, and George Fraser Webster, of Rochester.

Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Embargo Abets 'Trampling' of Liberty, Bar Told

Fred K. Nielsen, Washington attorney and former member of many American diplomatic missions, yesterday told the Federal Bar Association that repeal "of the so-called arms embargo may be distasteful to one indulging in the preoccupation of trampling on the liberties of free peoples."

However, Nielsen said, "he may ironically find some compensation in the thought that his activities may result in having the merchant vessles of the most powerful Nation on earth excluded from all ports of great European commercial countries, and perhaps from the ports of other countries."

Dynamite Blast Atomizes 5 Men And Mixing Plant

Eldred, Pa., Oct. 18 (AP).—An explosion of 1,200 pounds of dynamite, heard 10 miles away, blew to bits five workmen and a mixing plant today at the National Powder Co. works two miles from here.

The blast let loose about 8:55 a. m., an hour after the men reported for work. Dust-like debris was spread for thousands of yards around the works.

The blast shot upward from the 30-foot square stone, corrugated iron and wood structure, missing other buildings where approximately 45 other men were employed, all of whom escaped unscathed.

Capital News In Brief

Dr. Eliot to Speak

Dr. Frederick M. Eliot, president of the American Unitarian Association, and descendent of the founder of the local Unitarian Church, will address a congregational dinner meeting tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. at All Souls Church, Sixteenth and Harvard streets northwest.

Not Hard to Please

Satisfied with $15 handed him by the clerk, a colored bandit yesterday escaped a Palace Laundry branch office at 214 Massachusetts avenue northeast, leaving more than $40 behind. Mrs. Florence King, 317 C street northeast, in charge of the office, who made the report to police, said the man entered with his hand in his pocket as if he had a gun.

Unlucky Encore

Max Yacker, proprietor of a store at 1317 V street northwest, who last year overpowered a bandit who attempted to rob him, last night fell victim to three others. The three men forced him at gunpoint to turn over $11.

Car Delays Firemen

The Fire Department's ninth engine company responded to an alarm last night despite an obstacle in the form of the automobile of a man who gave the police a nonexistant address. The car was parked in front of the station in the 1600 block of U street northwest immediately after the engines returned from one fire and just before they went out on another.

Police towed the auto away as the latter call sounded. The illegal parker put up $5 each on charges of blocking an engine house and failing to show his permit.

Woman, 51, Held In Triple Slaying

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Mrs. Enoch Baker Wrather, sr., 51, has been arrested and charged with the murders of three members of her family, District Attorney J. Carlton Loser announced tonight.

Mrs. Wrather was arrested on charges of poisoning her son, Enoch B. Wrather, jr., 23; her brother-in-law, Richard Wrather, 50, and her father-in-law, Andrew Johnson Wrather, 80, the district attorney said.

Garage Disclosure Of Accidents Urged

Garages and auto repair shops would be required to report to police those cars which bear evidence of having figured in accidents in which persons were injured, under recommendations adopted yesterday by the Traffic Advisory Council's regulations committee.

George E. Keneipp, chairman of the committee, pointed out that garagemen now are under compulsion to report all damaged cars but that this ordinance is difficult to enforce.

Mrs. Niles Dies; Admiral's Widow

Mrs. Elizabeth C. Niles, widow of Rear Admiral Kossuth Niles, died yesterday at her home, 1523 N street northwest.

A native of Belleville, Ill., Mrs. Niles had lived here for many years, she was active in St. Thomas Episcopal Church. Surviving is a sister, Miss Maria Chalner.

Funeral services will be at 10 a. m. tomorrow from St. Thomas'. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Gen. Sale Dies

DON'T SCRATCH, SOOTHE THE IRRITATION

Quick relief from the maddening itch of eczema, psoriasis, poison ivy, and irritation about the rectum or personal parts is obtained by applying Resinol Ointment. Leave it on over night. It lessens the desire to scratch, and eases the irritation.

The soothing effect of Resinol takes the sting from the irritated places and makes you more comfortable. The skin heals sooner, too, with the help of Resinol, as its oily base holds the medication in active contact with the tortured parts.

For gentle cleansing of irritated skin, Resinol Soap is excellent because it has no excess of free alkali and is so refreshing. Many nurses suggest and use Resinol Ointment and Soap—why don't you try them?

Buy at any drug store. For free sample, write to Resinol, Dept. 85, Baltimore, Md. Adv.

A Three Days' Cough is Your Danger Signal

Even if other medicines have failed you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Gen. Electric Net Rises to $25,022,631

Income Rise Reflects 13% Sales Gain In 9 Months

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 18.—General Electric Co. for the first nine months of this year today reported net income of $25,022,631 after all charges, equal to 87 cents a common share, compared with $17,548,256 or 61 cents a common share in the like 1938 period.

Gerard Swope, president, said sales billed in the first nine (1939) months totaled $217,900,154, a rise of 13 per cent over the $192,501,173 in the like period a year earlier.

Orders received during the nine months were $248,581,851, an increase of 32 per cent over the $188,756,985 for similar months a year earlier.

Steel Price Boosts Seen Limited to $2 or $3 a Ton

New York, Oct. 18 (AP).—Major producers seemed committed to a policy of restraint regarding possible price rises for the first quarter of 1940, Iron Age said today in its weekly survey.

"While confirmable information as to forthcoming price decisions is not yet obtainable," asserted the review, "opinion in the trade is that advances, if any, will not exceed $2 a ton, which steel makers say will not cover their increased costs."

"Economic advisers of the Washington Administration, who are bringing pressure against price advances on steel and who are also watching closely the price movements in scrap, copper, zinc and other important commodities, are represented as being apprehensive of a boom and subsequent disastrous collapse, should prices of important commodities get far out of balance."

Cotton Prices Close Uneven

Woodruff Made A Co-Trustee of Erie Railroad

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Oct. 18.—Robert Eastman Woodruff, since 1929 operating vice president of Erie Railroad, today was named co-trustee and chief operating officer to succeed Charles E. Denney, recently elected Northern Pacific president.

The appointment, subject to Interstate Commerce Commission approval, was made by Federal Judge Robert N. Wilkin. The other trustee, named with Nenney when Erie went into reorganization in January, 1938, is John A. Hadden, Cleveland attorney.

Judge Wilkin said he felt "such a balanced arrangement," with one operating trustee and one attorney trustee, should be continued pending Erie's emergence from reorganization under plans now before the court and the I. C. C.

Directors of Erie presumably will elect Woodruff president of the company. This was seen virtually certain because the company petitioned the court today to name Woodruff as co-trustee. Attorney H. H. Hull declaring "This suggestion is made at the request of the chairman of the board of directors," who is Charles Bradley, Cleveland department store owner.

Present Boom Called Shaky By E. T. Weir

Firm as 'Filling in Cream Puff,' Says Steel Executive

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 18.—President E. T. Weir, of the American Iron & Steel Institute believes the present "business boom' is about as strong and firm "as the filling in a cream puff."

In a speech to the American Institue of Steel Construction last night, he expressed belief there would e no immediate advance in steel prices and at the same time declared steel costs are "hard and unyielding facts" which cannot be changed to conform to "political desires in Washington."

Weir said steel companies could not long continue to absorb the increasing cost of raw materials, all of which have advanced. These higher costs, he continued, have been offset "only in part" by faster operations.

He said the first six months of 1939 netted manufacturers profits of 27 cents a ton after preferred devidends.

"Whatever price action is to be taken is a matter to be decided by individual (steel) companies," he added, "and I believe their decisions must be based on urgent economic necessity rather than upon political threats from Washington."

Month's Sales Gain Of 7.3% Shown By 10,000 Stores

St. Louis, Oct. 18 (AP).—Sales in more than 10,000 retail stores averaged 7.3 per cent higher last month than in September, 1938, the National Retail Credit Association reported today.

By far the biggest gain was at San Francisco, Calif., where total sales were up 34 per cent.

Decatur, Ill., topped all cities with a 21.8 per cent increase in retail collections. The average gain was 4.4 per cent.

The average gain in credit sales was 3.7 per cent, while Tulsa and eight other cities reported decreases ranging from 2 to 9 per cent.

Stocks Move Unevenly in Rut as Industry Faces U. S. Clamp on Price Advances; Federal Bonds Ease, Others Firm

New York, Oct. 18.—Tuesday's sharp rally in share prices, grain and some of the other commodity markets failed to follow through today. Whisperings from Washington that the Administration will frown upon higher prices for steel and other manufactured products despite higher costs for constituent materials, probably dampened the ardor of speculative longs. At the same time, some of the Wall Street observers reported that the Tuesday rise was built more on short covering than public demand.

Stocks opened slightly higher, extended declines in the morning rallied briefly and closed not too far above the day's lows. Significance, if any, of the market's retreat as price levels approached the September tops, was discussed. Bonds continued firm although Governments eased a little. Power company liens were in some demand. Belgas were a strong feature in foreign exchange dealings. Sterling and French francs also recovered. Cotton closed about even while wheat gave up ⅝ to ⅞ cents of its nearly 2-cent gains of the day before.

Steel Shares Lower

While the trend of share prices on the downside was definite the steels and rail equipments were the only groups to lose much ground. Six leading steel stocks closed an average of ¾ point off, steel common dropping 1⅝ and Bethlehem 2¼. This division was naturally most affected by the Washington rumors of price control or, at least, of Administration displeasure in store for those industries contemplating mark-ups on products.

News tickers said that the Government is interested primarily in a "flexible economic and commodity price structure rather than artificial controls," but "high official sources" were said to be emphasizing the importance of the steel industry's forthcoming decision on 1940 prices because of the undoubted effect on pricing policies of other business. It was promptly recalled that President Roosevelt blamed a too-rapid increase of prices, including steel and copper, for the 1937 recovery collapse. Forecasters pointed out, meanwhile, that 1940 is a crucial year for New Deal forces and, war or no war, business must have a healthy appearance. With a full-sized conflict in Europe, window dressing for American economy would be child's play.

Busy mills and factories, high rates of employment and fat payrolls would cause the populace to forget, for the time being at least, the record of planning failures and gigantic debts and waste. Without a war, it is apparent the Administration fears difficulty in nursing the recovery to the proper pitch and for a sufficient period. It is difficult to see, however, why the Government, if interested in holding steel prices around current levels, did not act sooner to restrain boosts in steelmaking costs due to the rise in materials.

Scrap Prices Higher

"Iron Age" points out currently that scrap prices are $5 to $6 a ton higher; ferromanganese is up 25 per cent, zinc 35 per cent, tin 17 per cent, fuel oil 18 per cent and coal 10 per cent. Steel producers, more particularly the little fellows, are said to be having difficulty in competing on the current relationship of material and labor costs to finished product prices. It is also relevant to point out that steel stockholders have had very little consideration from Washington for some years. Yields on steel investments, other than preferred shares and bonds, in fact, probably would compare unfavorably with many other industrial groups.

Aircraft shares which had been among the most buoyant of all groups Tuesday resisted the undertow better than other sections, and several of the most active issues made small advances, including Boeing, Consolidated and United Air Lines. Douglas relinquished about one-fifth of its rise of the day before and G. L. Martin was off ⅝. The Government announced further contracts for airplanes and supplies for national defense.

Curtiss-Wright Active

Electric Boat, an old 1914-1918 favorite, and Curtiss-Wright were at the top of the list, the former on 34,300 shares with a ¼ point gain and the latter the day's leader, unchanged on 48,300 shares.

Utilities and oils were steady, the power issues attracting support as quotations were marked down by announcement of a new all-time high in electric production. Petroleum descriptions benefited from news of a firming in product prices, particularly at points where seasonal weakness had appeared previously. Stores and motors finished fractionally under Tuesday's last quotations, neither group being particularly active.

Declines of a point or more appeared in Allied Chemical, U. S. Rubber, Westinghouse, DuPont, International Harvester and Chrysler. Against the background of lower levels for active issues was a rising trend in less busily traded shares. The 100 key stocks on the big board closed 0.29 point lower, a loss of less than 20 per cent of the Tuesday gain. In the record of issues traded, however, it was disclosed that 371 of 901 stocks figuring in the day's transactions were higher compared with 314 lower and 216 unchanged.

Container Corp. Earns $253,060 In Third Period

Net earnings of the Container Corporation of America for the third quarter amounted to $253,060, which was equal to 32 cents a share on capital stock. It compared with a total of $16,145 for the corresponding quarter a year ago.

Continental Steel Corp.

Continental Steel Corporation reported net profit for the September quarter of $198,138 afted $150,000 reserve for contingencies, equal to 83 cents a share on common stock. This compared with $253,128, or $1.06 a common share, in the preceding quarter, and $192,360, or 75 cents, in the similar 1938 quarter. Plants are in Kokomo and Indianapolis, Ind., and Canton, Ohio.

U. S. Gypsum Co.

U. S. Gypsum Co. reported consolidated net profit of $2,613,003 in the third quarter this year, equal to $2.08 a share on common stock, compared with $2,127,161, or $1.67 a common share, in the preceding quarter, and $1,807,725, or $1.23, in the same quarter last year. The company manufactures building materials at plants throughout the country.

U. S. Incomes At Top Point For This Year

Rise $298,000,000 in August and Is 4% Above Year Ago

New York, Oct. 18.—The national income produced in the United States rose from $5,443,000,000 in July to $5,741,000,000 in August, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. The national income in August not only reached the highest figure this year, but it was 4 per cent larger than in August last year. The gain in August over a year ago was slightly larger than the gain in July, but it was considerably less than the gains in the first six months. This is shown by the fact that the national income during the first eight months totaled $43,298,000,000 this year as against $39,682,000,000 last year, an increase of 9.2 per cent.

Preliminary information indicates that the national income showed further expansion in September. In the first place there was a sharp rise in the price level in response to the outbreak of the war in Europe. In the second place, mine output increased as the result of the reopening of the oil wells which were closed down by a number of States in August for the purpose of supporting the price structure.

In the third place, factory output was stimulated by speculative buying in anticipation of an increased demand as the result of the war. In the fourth place, there was the usual seasonal expansion in the shipments of farm products.

National income probably will show a further rise in October and is likely to be considerably higher than a year ago. The prospect is, however, that the national income will reach its peak in October and that November and December will be characterized by a recession. During the last two months of this year shipments of farm products will show a seasonal decline and mining and manufacturing are not likely to rise above the October rate as an offset. In fact, some recession in industrial activity is a possibility.

Baldwin Unit to Build 14 Diesel Engines

Philadelphia, Oct. 18.—The De La Vergne Engine Co., of Philadelphia, a subsidiary of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, has been awarded two orders, one for 12 8-cylinder 800-horsepower diesel engines by the Gulf Oil Corporation and one for two similar engines by the Buckeye Pipe Line Co., all 14 of the engines to be used for pipe line pumping service.

The total value of these orders is approximately $350,000.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A case of partner persecution is revealed in a letter from George Jay Leroy, advertising executive. Leroy enjoyed vindication only after the player had left the game and he had made a redoubled four-spade game. The cards are shown in today's box.

His letter:

"The pay-off came when, discarding to a three no-trump contract, he took me to task for not interpreting his two of clubs followed by the three of spades as a demand for the lead of the higher-ranking suit when next I got in.

"Very fortunately he left the game at the conclusion of the rubber, and I drew as my next partner the talents and charming Mrs. Henry Enoch, against the same two opponents. I hadn't long to wait.

Opening lead: ◇ J.

The very first hand we became vulnerable. Then on the accompanying hand we reached four spades. Genial Nat Stafford, sitting on my right, doubled 'Redouble,' said I. If I was pushing. I was going to push the whole hog.

"The dummy went down and, truly, it wasn't too much. There was nothing to do but place Stafford for the kings and all the trumps to warrant that double. I went to work accordingly.

"The jack of diamonds was opened and captured by my ace. The heart ace was played followed by a small heart, which dummy trumped. A diamond was returned from dummy and trumped. Another heart was ruffed in dummy, the king falling. Again a diamond was trumped. Then the ace of spades, followed by the queen of spades, and from there on it is elementary, my dear Osborn.

"But all this has been a prelude to a disturbing thought which has bothered me ever since: It's no sin to gloat a little, or is it?"

After declarer's lead of the spade queen, East can win three spade tricks, the king, ten and seven, but must lead into dummy's ace-queen of clubs or allow South's two heart winners to go uncontested. Declarer makes four spades redoubled, losing three spade tricks.

Chapter 28

Susan Barney's voice began to show the effects of Aunt Lavinia's bullying lessons. With Susan at one end of the piano, always in the middle of the note, her eyes fixed on the pianist, to keep in time with him, and Jules sawing professionally away at the other, there were times when Aunt Lavinia sat through even "Nita, Jua-ha-nita," and "Aca-ademee! The years with thee will ever help and strengthen me!"

It turned out to be a good year for reading aloud, too. Letting his young audience make their own selections, Timothy roamed from Wodehouse, W. W. Jacobs, and Howard Pyle to Stevenson, Mark Twain, Booth Tarkington—even, one afternoon, preposterous as this was, some of the Uncle Remus stories. He was so tickled by the thought of how supremely funny his Scotch-New-York-Vermont-Negro accent must be that he joined wildly in the screams of laughter from his young audience, obliged to lay down the book often, take off his pince-nez and wipe his streaming eyes. Ponce de Leon should have read Uncle Remus aloud, he thought that day, his eyes on Susan's lighted-up face, her mouth stretched wide in the hilarious grimace of the mask of comedy.

There was even, that winter, an occasinal successful half-hour of poetry, although poems usually drugged the young Vermonters into the trance-like inattention, broken by unrebellious yawns, of those who listen to commencement addresses. Possibly they liked poetry better that winter because the reader found his own ears suddenly open to it. He had loved poetry from his boyhood; his earliest recollection of his parents was hearing them recite Meredith sonnets; he had never stopped reading verse, both professionally as a teacher of English and as a matter of personal habit and taste; there were so many poems in his memory that his very thoughts often presented themselves to him in quotations. Yet it occurred to Timothy, startled by the freshness of this winter's new delight, that perhaps he had been for years, without realizing it, slowly sinking from the quickening awareness of poetry into the sleepy prose of middle age. He had been growing dull not only to poetry, but to the vibrant stuff of poetry in life, to love and sorrow and beauty, to the harmonious, flowing loveliness of the valley where he lived, to the wonder of dawn, the splendor of sunsets, and to snow announced by all the trumpets of the sky.

IF HE HAD been half asleep, he was now aroused. Poems he had always known by heart burst upon him with as fresh a revelation of deep, unearthly meaning as though—he thought—this were the first poetry he had ever seen. How could he have read tamely such lines as "How soon hath Time, the subtle thief of youth . . ." and "Scatter as from an unextinguished hearth . . ." and "The wreckful siege of battering days . . ." and "Into my heart an air that kills . . ." and "The woods are lovely, dark and deep," and "And they saw neither sun nor moon. But they heard the roaring of the seas." Several times that winter he turned over pages of an anthology for a half hour at a time, reading what struck his eye and heart, almost forgetting that he had listeners. They were quiet enough to be forgotten, the few older people sagging in their chairs, the boys and girls sprawled on the floor, supple as panthers, their absent eyes fixed on the dozing wood fire; or on the sky darkening beyond the windows; or on the fiercely blazing pin-point of the evening star, blood brothers to the sleepy hearth flames; or on the photograph of the group from Chartres over the mantel—God bending his grave, benevolent, puzzled face down over man, sparkling in simian malice.

Even when they could not follow, they were shaken and held because he was shaken and held to rediscover what he had forgotten—the power of poetry. Sometimes he plucked, unaware, a secret string which gave off a cry, as for the Milton sonnet on his dead wife. "I woke: she fled, and day gave back my night," he read, and was startled to hear the gangling 14-year-old Jules choke back a sudden sob. Timothy looked down at him surprised. The fatherless boy whispered piteously, as if they were alone in the room. "Last night I dreamt Paps was alive, and when I woke up . . ." In the hushed room, Timothy could hear, like the rustling of wings, the stirrings of sympathy in those poetry-quickened hearts. And once, "Yet, Freedom, yet thy banner torn but flying, Streams like the thunderstorm against the wind," struck out a cry of admiration from old Mr. Dewey. He himself, Timothy, looking away from his book one day to where Susan, her head on Aunt Lavinia's knee, fixed dreaming eyes on him, found himself reading, "She was a phantom of delight . . ." in so deeply moved a voice that—he thought that night in bed—it must have been like the child's chalked scrawl, "Timothy loves Susan."

It was a scrawl he would now gladly have chalked up on any wall. He would have been enchanted to have her, to have them all, hear what was in his voice as he read, "Sweet records, promises as sweet . . ." Why not? Why not?

And yet he was in no hurry to cut short this period of waiting for the ripening of his golden apple gleaming through its fresh young verdure. He was happy, he who had almost forgotten what it is to be happy—had quite entirely forgotten (had he ever known?) how happiness, greatest of creative artists, laughs at the limitations of its medium, can catch up any moment, the most ordinary, and make it sing like a seraph, or glow like welcoming home-windows, or ring with the lost laughter of childhood.

AUNT LAVINIA had been impatient with Susan's progress in music; Mrs. Washburn had been disagreeable about the uninteresting scales coming from Susan's attic room at Miss Peck's—"For heaven's sake, come here to my room in the evening for your hour's practice, where I can keep you from making such idiotic mistakes," said one cross-grained old lady, and, "A great relief to have some quiet in the house," said the other.

Timothy now refused, on one pretext or another, the usual winter round of invitations to supper, always was at home in the evening, and sat upstairs in his study no more. When Susan came downstairs after her wrestle with Aunt Lavinia, he was there, sometimes with his newspaper in the sheltered corner under the stairs, sometimes sitting smoking in the living room before the fire, sometimes with an artfully disposed bait to keep her with him, like the photographs he sent away for in January, to add to his collection of famous paintings, statues and buildings, sometimes shown to the Sunday evening group. The two spent a long evening over the new photographs, looking at them, talking about them—at least Timothy talked about them, told stories of vacation experiences here and there among the originals. "When I can rent this house furnished to a summer person, it just makes enough for a vacation in Europe," he explained. "You can do it for very little, you see, if you go on a slow old ship or third-class on a fast one. And, of course, walk or bicycle mostly, once you're in Europe." Susan listened creatively. When she stood up to go, "Haven't you a favorite picture or statue?" he asked her. "I'd like so much to give you one of these photographs for your room, to live with. If there's something you like."

She made a little cry of pleasure out of his name—Timothy's delight in hearing her say his name was fatuous—and leaned over the spread-out photographs to make a choice. He wondered which one she would take, but forgot to notice, delighted by the perspective in which he saw her, the cross-lighting from fire and lamp correcting the ever-so-little concave silhouette of her face. She looked, he thought, like a soft-eyed Correggio angel leaning with clasped hands over the cradle. From that evening on, it was thus—no matter what the lighting—that he saw her face.

He varied his bait. "Susan, I wonder if you'd have time to do something for this tear in my overcoat? I can sew on buttons, but it's terrible work I make of mending. And Aunt Lavinia's worse."

This was always a success. It was sweet to see how she snatched it from his hand, how she sat stitching, proud of her skill, showing it off to him. "There! How's that?"

As time went on he offered no bait, simply drew up a chair for her near his when she came down the stairs, as if it were the natural thing to do. Sometimes he, sometimes Susan, then brought out laughingly an absurd formula which had once been inadvertently let fall by one of them, they could never agree which one. It ran, all on one breath, "Come on, let's have a talk what shall we talk about?" The grouse in the gunroom, thought Timothy, smiling, had no more immortal life than this small foolish joke that was their own. He was enchanted that he could see how silly it was, and yet join with all his heart in Susan's young laughter over it.

What they talked about was mostly what had been going on that day in Timothy's inner world where his mind, if it liked, ran after its tail frivolously, or if it liked better, bayed questions about the nature of things at the unanswering moon. They laughed together about his mind—how sometimes it was like a faithful servile dog, sometimes like a mischievous unrulely monkey, or a playful nonchalant cat, and then again leaned into the collar and pulled its load like a hard-working cart horse.

"Does it ever," Susan asked him a little shyly, "seem to you like a bird—just springing up and soaring off to the sky, because of some sudden happiness? Once in a while mine does that."

"But mine can't do figures of eight all over the ice like yours," she said. "That's terribly interesting to me! Ever since that time you told me about Mrs. Washburn I've thought how a person simply can't be bored if his mind will only . . ."

"Oh, yes, he can, too!" protested Timothy. "Today when the Rev. Mr. Randall was here—he's the third trustee you know—I thought I'd die of boredom. He's such an old sheep!"

SO HE TOLD her about it. His hand was always on the latch to open when she knocked.

Sometimes they talked about their profession, tried to see more clearly into the complex problems of the art in the practice of which they both spent so much of every day. Timothy had not realized that any of his colleagues, especially any of the younger ones, felt so devoted an interest in teaching. Sometimes they shamelessly talked personalities, discussing people they knew, and taking them to pieces—was it possible, Timothy asked himself, that he could be so light-heartedly dancing on the ruins of the triple walls of his Scotch-Vermont, professional, and celibate reticence?

He even did what he had never done before with anyone, he talked over with her some of the "case-histories" of students; that sex-crazy Marylyn Forbes from New Jersey; the nice McCann child, so subdued, on her guard and watchful when she came, now beginning to stretch out and open up and gather confidence in herself and others; and poor Jules (for he now knew Jules' story), fine, sensitive, naturally civilized son of an honorable and distinguished father, left by that father's death helplesly in the power of a coarse-fibered materialistic mother.

Jules' situation reminded Susan of something her grandfather had told her about a man who had lived on the next farm to his, and she passed that story along to Timothy, who listened as though he had never rebelled against old-time Clifford stories.

Once or twice Susan, half-bold, half-shy, let him in to some of the traditional academy jokes about him, like his haying "Ha!" when he was amused or scornful—she was astonished that he had never overheard the students putting each other down with an explosive imitation of that "Ha!" And didn't he know that when he took off his eyeglasses in a certain special way and put them on again before speaking, everybody recognized it as a storm-signal of his displeasure? And was it possible, she ventured further, that he had never heard the story, told each freshman class by their elders, about the dumb girl who said she guessed Wordsworth's poetry was all right, only it was cram full of quotations from Prof. Hulme's talk?

No, Timothy had not realized, he said in all naive seriousness, that he said, "Ha!" It sounded rather silly, and affected, he feared. "Oh, we like it!" Susan reassured him. "We wouldn't know you, if you didn't." Nor had he any idea, he told her, that his habit of thinking in quotations had reached his everyday talk, and when Susan, overcome with mirth at his not knowing what everybody else knew so well, burst into laughter, he joined her, enchanted to be laughing with her. Sometimes in a single hour their talk wandered from the reasons for Delia's liking mathematics to religion, to skating, to "what is morbid," to hats (Susan now asked his opinion seriously about hats), to architecture, to the refinishing of antique furniture. "But this is the real companionship that's supposed not to be possible between men and women," thought Timothy fondly, as surprised to find himself discussing whether Aunt Lavinia looked better in gray or lavender as to see a blooming girl passionately attentive when, one evening, flinging down in a rage the newspaper with its daily poison-news of Nazi anti-Semitic torture and hatred of civilization, he opened his heart and in a long excited tirade poured out some of the horror and despair felt by decent men of his time.

Czechs Here Mark State's 21st Birthday

Dr. Hurban Looks Toward New Birth Of Their Freedom

By Hedley Donovan.

It was on October 18, 1918, in an apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest, that Dr. Thomas G. Masaryk signed a declaration of independence for the Czechs and Slovaks.

No ceremonies marked the twenty-first anniversary, but at the Czech Legation on Massachusetts avenue a witness to the document's signature and the daughter of its author, spoke with sober pride of the nation their countrymen built in central Europe.

Mrs. Hurban Did the Typing

Col. Vladimir Hurban, still recognized by the State Department as Minister from a living nation, recalled the historic moment when Dr. Masaryk's pen brought Czecho-Slovakia into being.

"There was nothing elaborate about the signing, you know," the Minister said. "My wife typed out the declaration. President Masaryk wrote his name and then the statement was cabled to Paris, where it was made public by the provisional government."

In France the signatures of Dr. Eduard Benes, foreign minister, and Gen. Milan Stefanik, minister of national defense, were added.

"Democracy Is Victorious"

"You must hear the closing of the declaration," said Dr. Alice Masaryk, daughter of the "president-liberator" and former head of the Czecho-Slovakian Red Cross, who has been in this country since June. She read:

Militarism is overcome—democracy is victorious; on the basis of democracy, mankind will be reorganized. The forces of darkness have served the victory of light—the longed-for age of humanity is dawning. We believe in democracy, we believe in liberty—and liberty evermore.

Did these brave words hold good today? Col. Hurban and Miss Masaryk said they did. "If you have a good cause and fail, you can only try again," the Minister declared. "The ideal of the League of Nations was not faulty, but its members were." He is confident "a better way of thinking" will come out of the present war.

"When Europe is healthy again," Miss Masaryk believes, "we will be free again. We are ready for the form of co-operation that Europe needs."

Citizens of the World

"We were world citizens," Col. Hurban remarked. "It was always to our interest that the whole world should be at peace. It was not in our interest that Germany should be weak and miserable. That is why we took such a prominent role in the League of Nations in proportion to our size."

"We had a democratic state in the fullest meaning of the word," Miss Masaryk asserted. "I don't think any other country had the same combination of ancient culture with a new form of government. In 20 years we never had a major strike. We answered communism with legislation, not police."

Confidence in the eventual restoration of Czecho-Slovakia was expressed yesterday by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, who introduced a resolution in 1918 proclaiming the creation of an independent Bohemia and Moravia as one of America's war aims.

"I cannot believe that peoples as great as the Czechs and Slovaks will be held in bondage," Senator King said. "The democratic states will demand a reinvigorated Czecho-Slovakia, as great as the genius and industry of its people."

Station PDS Presents Pianist as Guest

MISS PERRY

Virgie Nan Perry, 1322 Kearny street northeast, will have a prominent part on the PDS program this morning over WMAL. She makes a hobby of collecting phonograph records, teaches piano, and plays in orchestras supplying dinner music in various cocktail lounges.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv.

D. C. Student Speaks At W. & M. Convention

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 18.—John S. Hudson, of Washington, who is president of the men's student body at William and Mary College, was one of two speakers at the annual honors convocation in Phi Beta Kappa Hall today. The 14 merit scholars, winners of endowed scholarship awards for academic standing, were presented to the student body. Among them was Taub Taylor, of Warrenton, Va., the George Blow scholar.

The president's aides for 1939-40 were also honored. They were introduced by the chief aide, Elmo T. Legg, of Arlington. Another aide is Arthur B. Hanson, of Bethesda, Md.

Roosevelt Studies Resources Report

For two hours yesterday President Roosevelt and Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, went over a "first report" on suggestions of the War Resources Board for interlocking industry with defense in the event of war.

Johnson said a final report would be submitted to the President later. He asserted that the report did not mean that the Government was getting ready for a conflict "in the sense of imminence of war."

Invisible Code Is Evidence on Numbers Slips

U. S. Agents' Marks Lead to Indictment Of 3 Operators

Pink numbers slips marked with invisible symbols which glowed bright green under ultra-violet light were part of the evidence against three alleged lottery operators indicted in the District Court yesterday.

The pink slips, marked in code by a Secret Service agent, were seized when officers raided the alleged gang's headquarters in a building of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

Private George C. Prather, of Metropolitan Police, told in a statement placed before the grand jury of being detailed to break up numbers operations on Government property. He hid behind a partition, he said, and saw Irene Willis, 39, colored, arrive and set out a hot lunch, at which she was joined by Jesse Williams, 40, colored.

Officials Marked Slips

Prather said that through holes in the partition he watched for an hour in which a stream of persons passed through the storeroom, placing numbers bets with the couple. Assisting them, he said, was James Franklin Ball, 44, colored. It was to this place, he said, that the marked slips were submitted.

Housebreaking and larceny—Andrew W. Foster, 24, colored; Reginald Karns, 19, colored; James C. Blanche, 21, colored; Ernest McKelly, 20, colored; Leroy Green, 21, colored; Harold Cotten, 20, colored.

Joy-riding—George C. Redfield, 20, colored.

Robbery—Charles Lee Cole, 19; William E. Barger, 20; Fred Beuchert, 19; John R. Redmond; William S. O'Neill, 19; Sylvia M. Zappula, 20; Pauline Hartman, 26; Alvin D. Limerick, 26; William V. Cogswell, 39.

Bigamy—Raymond J. McFadden, 26.

Forgery and uttering a forgery—George F. Kyle, 30.

Others Charged

Running a lottery and having numbers slips—Wallace Morris, 27, colored; Charles Johnson, 27, colored; Lee Roy Brockmond, 27, colored; Susie Winifred Blanard, 26, colored; Aubrey Thornton, 36, colored; Leroy Lynch, 23, colored; William Whitaker, 35; James H. Lucas, 26, colored; George Canton, 33; Joseph O. Morris, 39, colored; James L. Robinson, 54, colored; Grant J. Moore, 37, colored; Norman A. Chinn, 27, colored; Wilbert Chapman, 31, colored; Charles Beman, 27, colored; Eberl S. Williams, 31, colored; Luvania Spearmon, 44, colored; Eugene F. Langley, 39; William H. T. Baldware, 28, colored; Joseph T. Jefferson, 30, colored; Lillian Jefferson, 23, colored; Joseph Samsone, 30; James R. Jones, 67; Harry F. Jones, 43; Albert Gordon, 31; Helen Gordon, 44; Sophia Dendsberg, 35; Arthur J. Johnson, 41, colored; Arthur Hare, 38, colored; James M. Scott, 61; William T. Tyson, 34; Irene Willis, 39, colored; James F. Ball, 44, colored; Jesse Williams, 43, colored.

The grand jury dismissed the following charges: Assault with dangerous weapon—Benjamin H. Martin, Wyman H. Warren, William S. Lewis and Thomas L. Clinkscales; running a lottery, Sebley Rideaway and Aubrey R. Gilliam; robbery, Silvester Gladis.

DR. F. M. EDWARDS' DISCOVERY FOR CONSTIPATION

COLUMBUS, OHIO: For over 20 years Dr. F. M. Edwards (widely known physician) successfully treated scores of patients for constipation and the headaches, lack of energy and mental dullness which often result.

This wise Doctor knew liver bile must flow freely every day into your intestines or fatty foods can't be properly digested and you may become constipated. So he kept this in mind when he perfected his famous Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderful, yet they assure gentle, thorough bowel movements and ALSO help stimulate bile flow. Test their goodness TONIGHT! 15¢, 30¢, 60¢.

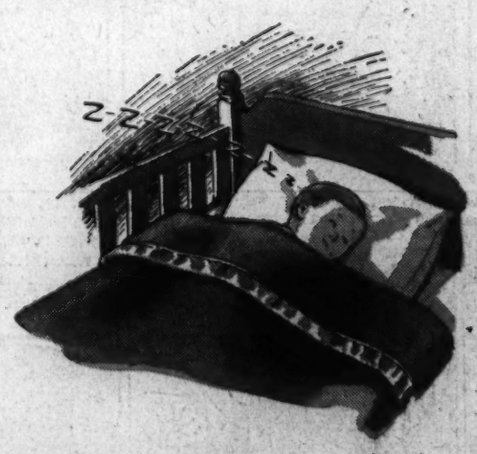
The Pride of the Flock Gives His Coat to Kenwood

Sir Walter Raleigh had nothing on this little lamb or any of his brothers and sisters who contribute their long, fleecy wool in order that you may be warm the winter through. And nothing but wool goes into the weaving of these fleecy Kenwood blankets.



The Deep, Shaggy Nap of a Kenwood Is Real Cold-Proof!

It's the deep fluffy nap that does the trick. It is "brushed," which creates millions of warmth-retaining air cells, which in turn act as insulators against the cold. Snuggle under a Kenwood on that next cold spell, and you'll be amazed at its lightness and warmth!

The Pure Woolen Yarns Dye in Clear, Vivid Tones
